FLIPPANT.

Somewhere in the wide, wide world, somewhere
 She wanders from me apart,
And her sunny smile and her golden hair,
And her manner winning and debonair,
 No longer enslave my heart;
But her face as bright as the summer sky,
 And her voice so soft and clear,
And the memories of that last good-by,
Combine to prove one regretful sigh
 For the girl I loved last year.

And looking back through the shadowy haze
 That gathers around and above,
I catch the faint perfume of summer days
And the dying echoes of roundelays
 That voice an unquenchable love;
And her blushes rise from a heart aflame,
 And her blue eyes look into mine
(Please understand she is not the same.
This girl I loved—I've forgotten her name—
 In the summer of '89).

Her lily hand beckons from the past,
 But beckons only to tears—
To a love which we both of us vowed would last (But whose powers of endurance were wrongly classed)
 As long as the coming years.
Where'er I may go I shall never forget
 Those happy days. Ah, fate
Is kind to leave me the memory yet
Of the sweet little maiden whom I met
 In the mountains in '88.

Her ruby lips hiding teeth of pearl,
 Which dazzle me when she speaks,
Her nut-brown hair in riotous curl,
Her laugh, which sets all my senses awhirl,
 And the damask of her cheeks,
Her form of Venus like a flower arrayed
 In the garb of the blushing May—
All bid me rejoice, and quite undismayed
Swear my heart shall e'er be true to the maid
 Whom I wildly adore to-day.
—Carl Smith, in Harper's Weekly.

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. June 2, 1891.

Dr Macune, editor of the official organ of the National Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union, and member of the national executive committee of that organization, is certainly in a position, if any man is, to speak for the Farmer's Alliance; therefore his opinions, as presented below make very interesting reading. He says:

"THERE IS NO "PEOPLE'S PARTY,"

and will not be until after the industrial conference to be held in February, 1892. The Cincinnati convention provided, in the event that a political move was not started to carry out the demands of the farmers and laborers, its committee should call a convention for that purpose not later than June 1, 1892. The Alliance, as such, is non-partisan, and will remain so, but its membership is showing evidence of a determination to demand effective party measures for correction of existing evils, and if in the enforcement of this determination a rupture with the political bosses is found necessary, it will not be avoided.

"I believe that the Alliance membership of the Democratic party in the South very much prefer to remain in that party, and contend for the reforms they want within its ranks, but whether they can do so or not depends upon the treatment they receive from that party.

"The Democratic party has two forces contending for supremacy; one would meet the demands of the producers on the plane that it seeks, that of justice and right and the good of the whole, making such changes as may be necessary to secure this end. The other force, headed by such politicians as Mills, Carlisle, Oates and others, seem to regard the and crushed out of existence. They recognize the now well-established fact that it requires from five to ten millions of dollars to carry on a successful national campaign, and that the only place to get that campaign fund is from Wall street, and it is a well known fact that Wall street will not give a dollar to any party proposing to monkey with the financial system. In this emergency, these bosses conclude it wise to stay on the side of the campaign fund and argue that the Republican party will be hurt by the new movement more than their own, and smilingly assert that the worst the move can do will be to throw the election into the House of Representatives, where the big Democratic majority will prevail. A very stupid and superficial view. The result of the third party movement will depend upon which of these two forces in the Democratic party gains supremacy. If the conservative and just element, the third party movement may possibly be averted, but if the rule or ruin element shall dominate, it is bound to come. So that it really rests with the old parties to decide whether they will force the new party into existence by opposition, let it come by neglect, or prevent its coming by heeding the just demands of their own people."

Mr. Harrison has been in direct communication with Mr. Blaine, through Representative Hitt, of Illinois, who took an important message from Mr. H. to Mr. B., and who also upon his return brought reassuring news of the condition of which, according to Mr. Hitt, is good. He says that all Mr. Blaine requires is a period of rest and freedom from care and worry, and that he has promised to take. All talk of his retiring from the Cabinet is without foundation, if one may believe the statements of those closest to him.

Commissioner of Patents, Mitchell, has tendered his resignation. He wishes to return to the practice of his profession, which is more congenial to him than office-holding.

Mr. Harrison is understood to be anxiously looking for the right man to succeed Pension Commissioner, Raum, and he finds it a difficult task. Those whom he would like to appoint will not have the office, and in refusing it they show their good sense, and those who would like to have the place he is afraid to appoint. It is said that Mr. Harrison tendered the appointment to a prominent Pennsylvania G.A.R. man when he was in Philadelphia on Memorial Day, and that it was respectfully declined.

The newest Cabinet rumor is that Secretary Noble is to enter the diplomatic service. Secretary Noble has been put out of the cabinet so often, by rumor, that it will be necessary for him to actually get out before anyone will believe that he is going. He is now out of town, but at the Interior department they are expecting him to return this week.

The judges of the land court, created by the last Congress, have all been selected and their appointments will be officially announced in a few days. The Attorney General is authority for the statement that every one of them is thoroughly familiar with the land laws.

DECORATION DAY.

The day observed as usual by the G. A. R.

Another Memorial Day has come and gone, and as each succeeding year rolls by it would seem that oratory had exhausted all that might be said in eulogy, that the pen had recorded all that could be written in praise and the sculptors had chiseled all it were possible to form, to immortalize the heroes who gave their lives on the battle field, that the glorious heritage of our fathers might be handed down to future generations, an unshattered glorious whole extending from ocean to ocean and from the ever frozen north to the tropical south.

But, as each memorial season comes, it is more apparent that, while further removed from the scene of strife, we are getting more and more into touch and sympathy with the sacrifices that were made, and nearer those who made them.

The record of one Memorial Day may be so similar to another, or the forms and ceremonies of one place so like those of another place, as to loose their significance and yet every Memorial Day will bring its new lessons of patriotism, and the ceremonies at each cemetery, aye, more, at each individual grave, will stand out alone, marking the part of that individual in the great strife and testifying to the friendship of those who come to pay one more tribute of respect and love to his memory.

All this may be said of last Memorial Day and its observance by Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., and the citizens of Weymouth. No event of the past has been marked by a deeper interest, or a more devoted attention to the beautiful ceremonies of the day.

There were some doubts as the day dawned as to whether it would be a suitable one for the occasion or not, but the weather could not have been more favorable. The rain of the previous day, while leaving a little mud in some places, had lain the dust so that the men could march with comfort. The clouds which obscured the sun removed the anxiety which is sometimes felt by men unaccustomed to the exposure of the sun's rays.

The detailed observance of the day was substantially as set forth in General Order No. 3, by Commander Hayward, and published in the Gazette.

The exercises at South Weymouth began quite early. Comrades at that place reported to Past Commander Hastings, at Columbian Square, where details were made to decorate the graves at Pond Plain and Union street cemeteries.

The East Weymouth comrades assembled at 7.15 and proceeded to the Catholic cemetery on Middle street, where they were joined by the South Weymouth company and united with them to decorate the graves at this place.

The Post rendezvoused at Thomas' corner, North Weymouth, at 9 o'clock and was formed in the following order by Adj. John W. Bates:

Orderly Charles G. Morrill, mounted.
Drum Major Gurney.
James L. Bates Camp Drum Corps.
James L. Bates Camp 36, Sons of Veterans.
Capt Charles T. Bailey.
1st lieut. J. F. Fennell, 2d, Geo. R. Burrell
Capt. C. W. L. Hawyard, Post Commander, mounted.
Drum Major Campbell, 1st Mass. vols.
Weymouth Band, 25 pieces; R. F. Raymond conductor; W. F. Bates, leader.
Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R.
Company A., commanded by Senior Vice-Commander, Charles E. Bicknell.
Company B., Junior Vice-Commander Walker.
Color Co. C., Officer of the day Dunbar;
Co. D., Officer of the Guard, Loud.
Barouches containing Selectmen of Weymouth, C. G. Howe, H. A. Nash, L. V. Tirrell, J. P. Burrell, G. H. Bicknell; Z. L. Bicknell, and James Humphrey of the War Board: and M. E. Hawes of the Gazette.
Citizens in private carriages.

The line of march was around the square thence to the North Weymouth cemetery where the guard formed around the monument which had been finely decorated under the management of J. H. Walker, and the usual services were performed: dirge by the band, roll of drums, "taps" by the bugle, and the depositing of flowers. The same form of service was observed in all the cemeteries visited during the day.

Barges were now taken to the depot at Weymouth, where the line was again formed and a march made to the village cemetery, via Washington street.

One of the most notable events of the day occurred on this march, viz.: The profusion of flowers which were awaiting the column at Lincoln square, over eighty baskets of which we learn had been contributed by Mrs. T. A. Watson of East Braintree, aided by a few friends in arranging them.

Having decorated the graves at this cemetery, the line was again formed, and moved down Front street to Washington square, where carriages were taken for South Weymouth. Alighting near the west end of Park avenue, the column formed, and march was made to the Highland cemetery, where in addition to the regular decorations, the comrades paid one more tribute to their ideal soldier and first commander, James L. Bates, by literally covering his grave with the choicest of flowers; here too, the band performed an extra duty by playing a dirge at the grave of Henry Stetson, a long-time member of the band. We would mention, that here the selectmen were joined by Allen Vining, the 82 year old member of the war board. Another member of that board is living, Noah Vining, and at a still more advanced age, but was unable to be present. Having completed the work here, the line of march was taken, via Independence square to Agricultural Hall, where the banquet of the day was in waiting for the tired soldiers. The management had secured Alvah Raymond as caterer, and it goes without saying, that they, in this, made no mistake; the menu was fine, and the 300 tired men who listened to Chaplain Turner invoking the blessing, could hardly wait for the order to "charge rations."

After an hour spent here in rest and refreshments, barges were taken for Mt. Hope cemetery, where like services were performed as at the other grounds. Having completed the work here, carriages were taken for the last time, and all proceeded to the cemetery at East Weymouth, stopping at the Pleasant street entrance, where the line was formed, and the work of decoration performed, the band stopping at the grave of its former leader, R. B. Raymond, and playing a musical tribute to his memory, which it also did at the grave of Henry Burrell, a former member of that organization.

The work of the day being completed, the column proceeded to Commercial square for the dress parade, which was to finish the day, at the close of which the following general order was read by Adjutant Bates:

REYNOLDS POST, No. 58,
DEPARTMENT MASS., G. A. R.
ON THE FIELD, May 30, 1891.

General Order No. 4.

The commander desires to extend his hearty thanks to the officers and men of James L. Bates Camp, Sons of Veterans, for their splendid manner in which they have performed the duties of escort for the post; their prompt attention to orders as well as perfect execution of all evolutions tended greatly to the success of the march; to the officers and comrades of the post for the efficient manner in which they have performed the duties of the day; to the music, orderlies, and staff for duties well performed, the commander extends his warmest thanks.

C. W. L. HAYWARD, Post Commander.
JOHN W. BATES, Adjutant.

There were many incidents of the day which are worthy of special mention, notably the interest taken by the mass of the people, and the many beautiful decorations all along the line; but more especially the improved condition of all the cemeteries.

Flags on all the public buildings as well as on many private ones, were displayed, but as usual, there was the incongruity of flags at half-mast, and flags at the mast-head.

General Order No. 3 of Commander Hayward, was in accordance with orders from headquarters, and in accordance with the custom for the day. This was, "Flags at half-mast."

The Cattle King.

A king, a cattle king, was what they called him, this man who came loaded with diamonds and free with money, to spend the winter in a mild southern city. A king, and yet no royal blood in his veins! A self-made monarch—and his subjects? Only the lowing herds in the far-off west. His kingdom, the frozen plains where his cattle are dying. For it is cheaper to lose half his subjects than to feed and protect the whole. He has left his ice-bound home, has closed his ears to the suffering beasts; he wraps his great coat close about him and seeks pleasure! Can he shut out the cries that are piercing the winter nights beyond that mountain chain out toward the setting sun? Do not dreams of the cattle—his subjects—suffering, starving, freezing and dead, haunt the pillow of this king? Murder!—surely this king did no murder. There is no blood on his hands. He only let his dumb beasts starve or freeze to death—that is all! But there is another king!—a king whose kingdom is the universe—"And the cattle upon a thousand hills are his!" How will the cattle king stand on the day when deeds stand witness for and against us, and balanced against his gold will be the cattle—God's cattle—which he left on the plains without food or shelter, to die of slow starvation, that he might have more gold.

Before this terrible ranch business, which covers over western prairies with the decaying bodies and bleaching bones of hundreds of thousands of cattle was ever heard of, the country was bountifully supplied with meat. If ranches were abolished, farmers all over the country would raise, care for, and properly protect dumb animals as before.

Farmer's Institute and Field Day.

Many farmers in this and other towns, having expressed a desire to know more about the Massachusetts Agricultural College and Experiment Stations at Amherst, the officers of the Bay State Agricultural Society, have arranged for an excursion, institute and field day at Amherst, Thursday and Friday, June 11 and 12. Reduced rates have been secured on the Boston & Maine, Fitchburg, Massachusetts Central, and New London Northern railroads, also reduced hotel rates. Those who attend will be given the fullest opportunity to inspect the work of the school and stations. At various points of interest about the barns, fields, orchards, etc., there will be interesting familiar talks by the different professors on fertilizers, cattle feeding, insecticides and other practical topics. We trust some farmers from this vicinity will find it convenient to attend.

Semi-Annual Meeting W. B. M.

The Womans' Board of Missions held its semi-annual meeting at the Congregational Church, South Framingham, Thursday last. Sessions at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

At 10 a. m. was a Devotional meeting, led by Mrs. E. W. Clark of Westford, followed by address of welcome by Mrs. F. N. Pelonbet of Auburndale; report by Miss E. H. Stanwood; special work for young people, Miss Abbie B. Child; singing; addresses, Mrs. Holmes of Plymouth, and Mrs. D. O. Mears of Worcester; singing; address, Miss Fidelia Phelps of So. Africa.

At 2 p. m. the afternoon exercises began by singing, followed by prayer; missionary address; singing. The several missionary addresses were given by Mrs. Schneider, Turkey; Mrs. Crawford, Turkey; Miss Kimball, Turkey. Mrs. J. Frederic Hill, presided during the children's hour, and Mrs. Winsor from India made an address.

A Disgraceful Time.

The residents in the vicinity of Independence square were roused from sleep about 2.30 o'clock last Saturday morning by cries of "murder" caused by a row between some intoxicated persons, most of them non-residents, who were returning home from some late entertainment.

About the same hour an attempt was also made to enter Howe's bake-house. The baker refusing admission, a window was broken and a pistol thrust in at him. This is bringing the evils of the liquor traffic near home to the selectmen. The chairman of the board was rudely awakened to defend his property.

These occurrences suggest the need of increased police service. Where were the officers on this occasion? Especially are the officers needed when any such influx of non-residents is imminent. Such scenes would hardly occur among our own citizens.

Norfolk County, W. C. T. U.

The quarterly convention of the Norfolk County Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the Unitarian church, Medfield, June 12.

—A real estate boom is said to have struck the entire length of Cape Cod, and desirable lots for country homes are in great demand.

Don't Do It,
Said my physician, who for six months had doctored me for dyspepsia without success, when I told him I was going to try Sulphur Bitters, they will only make you worse. I did try them, and now I am a well man and can eat anything. Sulphur Bitters are a great foe to doctors.—George Bastett, N. Y. C. and H. R. Railroad.

Hold it to the Light.
The man who tells you confidentially just what will cure your cold is prescribing Kemp's Balsam this year. In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00

The Greatest Strike.
Among the greatest strikes that of Dr. Miles in discovering his New Heart Cure has proven itself to be one of the most important. The demand for it has become astonishing. Already the treatment of heart disease is being revolutionized, and many unexpected cures effected. It soon relieves short breath, fluttering, pains in side, arm, shoulder, weak and hungry spells, oppression, swelling of ankles, smothering and heart dropsy. Dr. Miles' book on Heart and Nervous Diseases, free. The unequaled New Heart Cure is sold and guaranteed by A. M. Bachelder & Co., also his Restorative Nervine for headache, fits, sprees, hot flashes, nervous chills, opium habit etc.

Now Try This.
It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a cough, cold, or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds is guaranteed to give relief, or money will be paid back. Sufferers from la grippe found it just the thing and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Try a sample bottle at our expense and learn for yourself just how good a thing it is. Trial bottles free at the drug stores of A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth; E. G. Cutter, E. Weymouth. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

A TRUE BOSTONIAN—AT HEAVEN'S GATE.

A soul from heaven to earth went,
 To whom the saint, as he drew near,
Said: "Sir, what claim do you present
 To us to be admitted here?"

"In Boston I was born and bred,
 And in her schools was educated;
I afterward at Harvard read,
 And was with honors graduated.

"In Trinity a pew I own,
 Where Brooks is held in such respect,
And the society is known
 To be the cream of the select.

"In fair Nahant—a charming spot—
 I own a villa, lawns, arcades,
And, last, a handsome burial lot
 In dead Mount Auburn's hallowed shades."

"St. Peter mused and shook his head;
 Then, as a gentle sigh he drew,
"Go back to Boston, friend," he said—
 "Heaven isn't good enough for you."

MARGUERY'S LETTER.

BOSTON, June 2, 1891.

TO THE GAZETTE:

The season is over. Everybody of consequence is like the auctioneers bargains, "going, going, gone"—of course this last is eminently true of the tax-dodger who religiously seeks the seclusion his country home grants a whole month before simpler and poorer folks, who are obliged to pay for all the comforts of a city home which he escapes.

But fashion has decreed that the first warm breath of the south wind shall scatter her votaries, and so society events are few, with the exception of some swell weddings this week.

"I'm glad and thankful the season is almost over," said a bright little woman the other day, as she sank half exhausted into a friendly easy chair, in the salon of a friend; which apartment, by the way, is high up in a hotel above the heads of all the world, though easily accessible by elevator.

Its occupant, a journalist obliged to keep in touch with life, yet too hard worked to give much time to society, has set apart Saturday evening as the time when she can receive the world; and sometimes the crowd is so large it seems as if all the world were literally there.

The day of which I am writing was an "off-day," and only a few choice spirits had assembled to drink her fragrant orange pekoe and talk over the events of an eventful week.

So the aforesaid little woman could air her sentiments without fear or favor, for she was with friends.

So she said, "Do let me talk, I live a life of repression. Let me expand in this friendly atmosphere."

"Surely," said the hostess, "but we look on you as openness itself."

"You are mistaken, I can never say what I think. One must go round with her mouth closed or be voted a disagreeable. But I repeat I'm glad the season is over. Just see what a week we've had. I can just remember when we took no notice of Anniversary week at all except to rail at the weather—for it always rained—and, I'm sorry to say, make fun as girls will, of the regular guys of short-haired women and long-haired men from way-back who filled our street. They went about looking so wise and solemn one would have thought they bore the whole world on their shoulders. Then to attend an anniversary meeting was to be thought very queer. Now, one has to belong to so many clubs that have annual meetings at this time, she would be considered very queer if she were not en evidence at most of them.

What with the Suffrage meetings, the various woman's club dinners, the numberless church affairs, to say nothing of numerous teas and so forth, I am thankful that tomorrow is a (so-called) day of rest." "Now girls," (when our friend gets expansive we are all girls, we like it) "between you and me, I think teas as a means of entertainment are getting a little passe. Do you know what Miss Scribble said to me the other day? We were each devouring Mrs. Back-Bay's salad. I was in a hurry, so was she. I'd had no lunch for I had been kept so long at a protracted meeting of the Morsel society, I'd had no time to get any; and she, you know, is too busy to eat.

She always hits the nail on the head. Sometimes so squarely and so loudly it rather shocks you; but, poor soul! she's repressed too. As society editor of the Daily Tea Twaddle she has to compile the most vapid stuff. That's the way she lives, so when she gets a chance and a sympathetic ear she talks as she feels. But I must tell you what she said. She exploded in this wise: 'An afternoon tea is Gabble! Gobble! Go!' Well, she scared me, and you know thats not so easy." "'What in the world'—I began."

'My dear, we go into a person's house to a tea. We gabble, gabble away, here a bit of scandal, gossip, fashion, what you will. Taking away a man's reputation, tarnishing a woman's good name in a breath, or expatiating on someone's new frock, wondering what it cost, and from whence came the money to pay for it. Then rush into the dining-room, or, to be just right, tea-room and gobble something. In this house it happens to be a good meal for which thanks, then off we go. Gabble! Gobble! Go! Isn't that true? I know you, like me, are hurrying to get over to Mrs. Grundy's; and I'm quite sure you want to fortify your stomach against that horrible decoction she will force upon us in the name of tea and hospitality. We've both got to go though we hate it. I, because my bread and butter depend upon it. You, for very much the same reason: not your actual food but your place in the swim. You must be seen there, and I must put your name in my society column or else you will be considered not 'in it' at all.

She'll present us to the latest literary monstrosity, and fancy she has done a great thing for our modern Athens. The formula for a tea is something like the famous recipe of Mrs. Glass, 'First catch your hare'—. First catch your lion, be he or she what you will. Literary, scientific, dramatic, or Oriental, then feed your friends on anything you please, be it tea like the proverbial dish-water or coffee that never saw Arabia. They will be content and you've done your duty. Good bye, I've gabbled, surely, and gobbled too, now I'll go,' and off she went."

"But girls, that idea of hers is a true one. If teas have multiplied all over the country as they have here there will be a tea famine soon. There are only seven days a week and there must be more than 70 times 7 teas given. If tea is as injurious as some contend, I don't believe I've got any stomach left and I guess that's what's the matter with me tonight."

"Yes dear," to the hostess, "I will take some of your tea, for here 'tis not flavored with either scandal, fashion or shoddy. Literary shoddy I mean, it really is the cup that cheers, for your room glows with the sweetness and light reflected from your lovely character, and as soon as it has permeated my whole being I'll run home and see my little folks. I do hope before my girls are out there will be some other form of hospitality other than that depending on a teapot, be it grotesque Japanese or Russian samovar."

I have repeated this talk because it was bright and funny, and not because I agreed with our little friend; for I think the English habit of afternoon tea a most social one. Though we, of course, have amplified the fashion, and instead of the most informal meeting of the household and guests we have made it into a reception for all the world; still, it is such an easy way of entertainment, compatible with the slenderest purse, that I do not wonder that everybody now-a-days gives to her dear 500 friends a "tea" or two, while the more formal dinner and exclusive luncheon are reserved for more intimate friends or more highly honored strangers. At least at the "tea" the lady of the house can give all her thoughts to her friends and not serve up to them the "baked hostess" as is too often done at a dinner party, where it is sometimes impossible for her to seem unconcerned and "mistress of herself though china fall."

* * * * *

Here is an anecdote I heard a long time ago of Phillips Brooks, Bishop-elect of Massachusetts. He was calling on a poor woman, a semi-invalid with a young baby. She was in some distress of mind, as she had received a ticket entitling her to a free ride into the country; the hour of starting was very near and the district visitor who had promised to take care of the baby had failed to appear.

Dr. Brooks knew what a blessing this ride into the pure country air would be to this tenement-house dweller, breathing all day and night its close and heated atmosphere, so he told her to go and he would take care of the baby. She demurred somewhat but he insisted upon it, so off she went blessing the good man in her heart.

When the belated and penitent district visitor arrived, judge of her consternation when she saw her revered rector, for whose slightest word hundreds each week awaited breathlessly and in awe, dancing the baby up and down to ease its cries, while his noble brow was covered with perspiration induced by his unaccustomed exercise.

It adds somewhat to the point of the story to remind you that Dr. Brooks is a bachelor.

But does it not speak volumes for the kind heart of the man?

Somebody was saying the other day what a pity it was that cultured Boston was to lose the greatest pulpit orator in the world, and that he was to be wasted on country parishes—for his future duties will take him to each Episcopal church in the state once a year. But will he be wasted? was asked.

No indeed, was the reply, for what Boston has enjoyed for so many years will now be diffused through the whole state, and thousands can benefit by what has been kept, as it were, locked up by a few, and the cause of Christian truth will receive an impetus that has been unknown in the present century.

MARGUERY.

Literary Notes.

—The June Arena which opens the fourth volume of this able review is unusually attractive. A fine picture of Bishop-elect Brooks, printed on cardboard suitable for framing, is given as a supplement with this number. The frontispiece is a steel engraving of the editor, who contributes a paper of great interest on "Society's Exiles," dealing chiefly with life in the slums of Boston. The interest in this paper is enhanced by the admirable reproduction of ten flash-light photographs taken in the North End of Boston expressly for this contribution. These pictures, together with a full-page engraving of the artisans' apartment house, recently erected in Liverpool, are printed on heavy plate paper. This number is brightened by a most charming character entitled "The Heiress of the Ridge," which appears as a No-Name contribution. Mr. Flower writes on "Optimism True and False," and the "Pessimistic Cast of Modern Thought." These editorials are very suggestive, and complete one of the strongest and most entertaining numbers of the popular review.

—Captain Charles King, U. S. A., contributes to Harper's Young People for June 2d, a stirring story of adventure and Indian warfare, entitled "Corporal Pops." Howard Pyle's entertaining romance, "Men of Iron," the interest of which has been constantly increasing from week to week, begins to approach a climax, and is probably near its conclusion. Few such charming stories of the Middle Ages have been written within recent years, and those who have been so happy as to follow the fortunes of the "men of iron" thus far will be sorry to part company with them.

—A volume of sketches of the "Unhappy Loves of Men of Genius," by Thomas Hitchcock, is announced for publication early in June, by Harper & Brothers. These stories on account of their connection with men and women celebrated for their gifts and accomplishments, are invested with peculiar interest, and are adapted to serve an additional purpose as materials for the study of love in its nobler and more refined manifestations.

—W. C. Prime's "I go a-Fishing," first published nearly twenty years ago, is recognized as one of the most admirable pieces of literary mosaic produced in America. It combines in its composition all sorts of episodical incident, antique lore, curious bits of philology, poetry, and story, and reveals a rare familiarity with the daintiest products of literature and art, and a heartfelt love of nature in her hidden ways. In response to a very general demand, this charming work, which has been for some time out of print, will soon be issued in a new and cheap edition by the publishers, Harper & Brothers.

—The career of no other person in the present century has been more varied and more extraordinary than that of Laurence Oliphant. He was by turns a barrister, an adventurer, a diplomat, the private secretary to Lord Elgin, a brilliant favorite of society, a religious devotee, an ox-driver in an obscure Western village, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, an author, an operator in Wall street, a cynic philosopher, the projector of a gigantic colonization scheme in Palestine, a visionary religious teacher—but through all these phases of his life, he was a man so brilliant in intellect, and so earnestly devoted to his convictions of duty, that even those who most deplored his idiosyncracies were obliged to admire his genius and integrity. There are many people in New York and Washington who remember with pleasure his charming presence and captivating manners, and who, from personal acquaintance with him, regard him as one of the most remarkable characters of our times. The memoir of his life by his kinswoman and intimate friend, Mrs. Margaret Oliphant, which has just been published in two handsome volumes by Harper & Brothers, is the most interesting biography written since Boswell's Johnson.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.
I yell "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Railroad at Canajoharie, N. Y.

A LITTLE VISITOR.

I spied her in my garden,
 Clasped tightly in each hand
 She held a monstrous posy,
 Her dimpled cheeks were rosy;
She smiled and begged my pardon,
 When near her I did stand.

"I've come to pay a visit,"
 She said,—the pretty dear!—
"For thirty long, long days, sir.
 And aren't you glad I'm here?"

"Now what may be your name, please?"
 I gently did demand;
 "And whose are all these flowers?"
 She said, "Why, they are ours;
I'm June; last night I came, please,
 Straight from the Summer Land."
—Elisabeth L. Gould, in June St. Nicholas.

Beyond Town Limits.

—The way to make advertising pay is to treat customers in such fashion that a second visit will result. The first return from an advertisement by no means pays expenses, but if the visitor is converted into a permanent customer, then it is that the value of this means of making known one's business becomes apparent.

—The Whitman artesian well is a success. Pure and clear water flows from the pipe. It is estimated that with two or three others, a plentiful supply for the town will be secured.

—The South American Republic of Columbia will make a very notable and interesting exhibit at the World's Fair. The building will be modeled after her national capitol at Bogota. The exterior will be in imitation of sandstone, of which it is built, while the interior will be partitioned and ceilinged throughout with the precious hardwoods of the country, comprising more than a hundred varieties, both rough and polished; an exhibition in wood alone, a parallel to which has never been presented by any other country in the world. The interior will be filled with the products of the country—coffee, cocoa, rubber, ivory, nuts, wax, gums, fibers, etc.—while the mineral exhibit will doubtless be the richest ever shown in the United States.

—The several states of the Union, as a rule, are making much larger appropriations for their representation at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893 than they did for the same purpose at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. Massachusetts raises $75,000 against $50,000 at that time. By the most conservative estimate, the states will spend five or six times as much on their representation at Chicago as they did at Philadelphia. The city of Philadelphia voted $1,500,000 in aid of the Centennial. The city of Chicago has appropriated $5,000,000 for the Chicago Fair. The United States Government spent $646,250 at Philadelphia, and loaned $1,500,000, which was repaid. It has voted to expend $1,500,000 on its exhibit at Chicago. These facts tend to show that the government and the states appreciate that the World's Fair of 1893 will be a far greater exposition in every way than was the Centennial; as, indeed, it ought to be considering the wonderful growth and development of the United States since 1876.

—The Hanson postmastership is the cause of an interesting fight just now. Two men are striving for it and from a local affair it has grown so much that it has been suggested by Congressman Morse that a Republican caucus be called. Both candidates had petitions in circulation, and both papers have disappeared mysteriously. One had 125 names and the other only 20. The trouble is still brewing.—Old Colony Memorial.

—It is rumored that the Weymouth and Hingham Electric Street Railway Company will begin to lay its tracks this season from North Weymouth to Downer Landing.—Old Colony Memorial. The rumor must get nearer than Plymouth before it will amount to much.

—A Ladies' Bicycle Club has been formed in Abington.

—Plymouth has forest fires.

—Dorchester has had trouble with her High school boys. The master, Mr. Chas. J. Lincoln, forbade the boys to go in a body to the annual parade, claiming that they did not act in a gentlemanly manner. They disobeyed his command, not knowing that he considered them under his authority during school hours, whether on the school premises or not. As a punishment he said that, without an apology, they should not enter the prize drill, or have their guns for the Memorial day parade. The matter was carried before the committee, who upheld Mr. Lincoln, and drew up an apology which the boys refused to sign. Miss Hovey, one of the teachers, then drew up a milder form of acknowledgment, which both sides reluctantly accepted. Many of the boys signed the last, but the parents came in at this time, and some of the names were stricken from the list of apologists. The master has so far receded from his first position as to give the boys extra practice drills, to grant them the use of their guns for May 30, and to aid them in other ways. Public sentiment is almost wholly on the side of the scholars.

—A history of Dorchester is to be published from the pen of Mr. Will Dana Orcutt, in the Dorchester Beacon.

—A German Mormon proselyte has been debarred from landing at New York, as she states her intention of living in polygamy. A test case will be made by the Mormons.

—Rev. Sam Small, the reformed newspaper man who became a follower of Sam Jones, the slang-slinging revivalist, several years ago, is having trouble with the trustees of the Methodist University at Ogden, Utah, of which he is president, and for which he has been soliciting money. He has resigned, but the board refuses to accept the resignation until he has made a satisfactory statement of the money he has collected.

—Lord Douglass, an English nobleman, and a brother of the Marquis of Queensberry, suicided by cutting his throat in London the other day. This will be a surprise to the shallow-pated dudes who believe that it is the height of felicity to belong to the nobility.

—Hyde Park is agitating two good questions, a town park and precinct voting.

—The school board of Hyde Park passed the following resolutions at its last meeting: "It is injurious and contrary to the spirit of our public schools, for teachers to receive presents from pupils, and we direct that no teacher accept such presents."

—The Pilgrim Society held its annual meeting at Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth, Monday of last week, and elected for the ensuing year, Hon. John D. Long as president; Wm. M. Evarts of New York, first vice-president; W. S. Danforth of Plymouth, secretary; Charles B. Stoddard of Plymouth, treasurer.

—The selectmen of Randolph have granted two druggist's licenses, on condition that the stores shall not be open on Sundays.

—At a town meeting lasting 35 minutes, Plymouth voted to take 400 shares, or $40,000 of the stock of the Plymouth & Middleboro Railroad Company.

—Owing to recent court decisions, the New York & Boston Despatch Express Co. doing business at Brockton, has refused to take any more liquors to that city.

FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1891.

A heavy frost last night in low and damp localities, did some injury to tender crops.

Queen Victoria has had a new and a nobler title than all she had before, bestowed upon her. She is now a great grandmother.

At this time of the year we are all looking for the beautiful in nature, and the rapidly developing foliage and flowers, the green fields springing into new life and beauty, the many sweet songsters who swing from some tender bough to "run down a brook of laughter through the air," all delight the senses of the lover of nature.

Journalism is rapidly becoming the first of all the professions, both in this country and abroad, judging from the scramble among the prominent men of the world to write articles for the newspapers. Lord Randolph Churchill, the brilliant though erratic English nobleman, has just been engaged by the London Graphic as a special correspondent. If this sort of thing keeps up we shall have to add a lord or two to our staff, although we are afraid our "devil" will kick.

Gambling in Stocks.

"He gambled in stocks," is almost invariably given as the cause of the defalcation of the trusted bank official, private employee or the failed-up business man. While they are supposed to be plodding along the legitimate paths of their own business, they are secretly making haste to get rich and finally the crash comes exposing the fact that they were deeply involved in stock operations. It would be hard to calculate the injury done to the people of this country every year by stock gambling. The good it does, if any, is infinitesimal. Why, then, is it not stopped? Simply because the stock gamblers have, up to this time, been able to defeat all proposed legislation, either state or national, against this form of gambling. A large majority of the people are opposed to this and all other forms of gambling, but in this as in other matters, the money powers outweigh the wishes of the people.

Prize Fights and Cock Fights.

The prize fight which was to have taken place in the old mill at East Weymouth, Wednesday morning, between two Brockton and Braintree pluggers, failed to come off for two reasons: First, Officer Peare kept the crowd moving and anxious, and next the Brockton fighter failed to put in an appearance.

The fight, as we say, did not come off, but it speaks none the less for the low vicious taste of the crowd who perambulated the street half the night, disturbing the neighborhood.

In this connection we will allude again to the cock fight of a week ago Sunday, when teams were passing through Weymouth to Hingham all the morning and returning in the afternoon and evening, bearing loads of drunken and bleeding toughs, who had placed themselves below the poor birds they carried.

These are not pleasant subjects to write upon, but it is time that there should be concerted action by Weymouth and the neighboring towns to break up this wretched business.

Heresy.

What shall the people believe is becoming a question of vital importance. Man by nature is a religious being, and it is the exception rather than the rule to find a man who is not a believer in his own divine origin, and some form of future relation to his Maker.

We have, however, struck an age when many of the old theories and beliefs are being set aside, and the supposed rock on which some people stand is being found only a bed of shifting sand.

With the sword hanging over Dr. Smyth for heresy, with Heber Newton on trial for unsound doctrine, with an air of doubt and uncertainty pervading certain Episcopalian circles as to the soundness of Boston's favorite pulpit orator Philip Brooks, with Dr. Briggs suspended in mid air by the authorities of the Presbyterian Church, and liable to be cut off from his associates at any moment, the question comes home,—are we coming out of darkness into light, or are we being led into a chaos of heresy and unbelief by too eloquent religious prophets?

The serious question of the hour is: Did our fathers believe too much? Were they a people deluded by a blind faith, which finds no support when the light of modern discoveries, sciences, and reason is brought to bear on it?

It would seem that Christianity today is suffering at the hands of its friends more than its enemies, and the question is not what shall we do with the poor heathen, but what shall we do to unite Christians to work together for humanity and for God, in a united, earnest effort, instead of this waste of the best intellects of the church, in discussing insignificant points of theology or of creed.

Is the Press Sincere?

Is a newspaper justified in printing as news, articles which are paid for by persons particularly interested in the object advocated in those articles? We should say that there can be but one answer to this, and that the daily papers of Boston, in selling their news columns to the West End Co. during the late discussions in the legislature, departed from their proper position as the people's mentors and guardians, and became merely hired mouthpieces of a Corporation.

We are told by the editor of a certain neighboring suburban paper that he has published much of this same news (?) at regular advertising rates per column. This pays well, but is it right? We think not. The sin and wrong in it, lies in the papers printing these articles as their own, with no distinctive mark or position to distinguish them to the public as paid matter. Such an article goes forth as the paper's own account or opinion of the thing discussed, and therefore carries much greater weight than if it were signed, as it ought to be, by its interested authors.

The press is supposed to be the people's watchful protector, and is depended upon to put the people on guard when danger threatens. This is accomplished by a thorough ventilation and exposure, through the newspaper, of any corrupt scheme. But how, if the press is a paid advocate, supporting that side where the most money is to be made? Will not the people suffer then if they place their faith in those papers that allow themselves to be subsidized? We are learning daily that there are many ways for a newspaper to make money, but we shall become very poor if our income is to depend upon setting a price upon our editorial opinions or selling our news space, thereby deceiving our readers. There may be mistaken opinions expressed in our editorial columns and there may be errors of fact in our news columns owing to misinformation, but they will be honest opinions and honest mistakes, and our readers can have full faith that what we print is to the best of our knowlege and belief, the truth.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS.

Delivered by H. A. Thomas at Milton, Mass., under the auspices of Huntington F. Wolcott Post, G. A. R., May 30, 1891.

We recommend every young man and woman, of the generation too late to remember the stirring scenes of the war, to read Mr. Thomas' address, that they may learn from it a lesson of patriotism. We regard it as ranking with the very best of Memorial Day addresses.

It was a custom with the ancient Athenians to solemnize public funerals in honor of those who had lost their lives in their country's cause. During the Peloponesian wars the bones of the slain were exposed to view, and the citizens strewed flowers, incense and perfume upon them. Their remains were then carried to a public place in the finest suburbs of Athens, where were buried in all ages those who lost their lives in the field. Earth was then thrown over them and some distinguished citizen, like Pericles, pronounced their funeral oration. Not only were these high honors paid to the memory of the defenders of their country, but their widows and children were afterwards maintained at the public expense. This was two thousand years ago, in the midst of a less advanced and less philanthropic age than our own, yet in it was that ring of noble patriotism which finds an echo in every noble heart today. This day commemorates deeds of self sacrifice and devotion, in connection with a civil war which vindicated the honor of the stars and stripes, tore the shackles from our bondmen and gave an immortal title to the American Union, which we are proud to hail as the foremost nation on the face of God's beautiful earth. The soldier dead of our own country have long been immortalized in song and story, and on this Memorial Day you count it a happy privilege to drop the fresh garlands of spring upon the graves of your fallen comrades, and while you engage in this service of love and fraternity every loyal citizen outside of your ranks sends up his approving voice.

It is not strange, either, if the arches of Heaven's camping-ground are ringing with hymns of praise, sung by the Grand Army host above, as they follow you to yonder cemetery and see written in letters of living light over every soldier's grave the words, "For what he was and all he dared, remember him today."

Memorial Day furnishes valuable lessons in patriotism which the youth of this land would do well to study. To me it has ever had a deep significance, and I approach my task today with reverence and caution. I was too young during the war of the Rebellion to wear the blue, and therefore cannot enter with you into the sacred precinct where memory paints pictures of the camp, the battle, heroism, self-sacrifice and cruel slaughter. History, however, has recorded enough to transfix the mind and heart of the honest searcher after truth, and hundreds of thousands of veterans still live to tell the story of their personal engagement in the great conflict. One has no excuse today for being ignorant of the main features incident to the great crisis in our own nation's history from 1861 to 1865, the causes leading up to the war, the campaigns of the various wings of the army, and the great victory that was won when Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomatox.

Other nations have their anniversaries, spots on the calendar to mark the date of memorable events, but there is only one Memorial Day, and it is safe to predict that the brave defenders of the Union, whether living or dead, will never be forgotten so long as this nation has a name, and future generations, catching inspiration from the grand and touching spectacle which greets us in each returning spring time, will take up the work where you leave it off and do honor to the heritage unto which they were born, through the sacrifice of blood and treasure. A sacred trust is thus confided to the future.

Will the rising generation be as quick to respond to duty's call as were the boys of '61, and will it always be an easy task to keep the soldiers' graves green and unforgotten? There ought to be no question of doubt, but republics sometimes lax into a state of ease and indifference. Perchance it may be necessary at times to stir the coals a little in order to keep the altar fires of patriotism brightly burning, and so Memorial Day will be secure.

In the year 1861 Governor Andrew, just after his inauguration in January, foreseeing with wonderful prophetic vision the gathering clouds of war, and wishing to rouse the old Revolutionary spirit, without causing any alarm among the people, directed that on the 8th of January, Gen. Jackson's birthday, a salute of one hundred guns be fired at a certain hour in sixteen cities of the Commonwealth. It had the desired effect, and when the troops were needed a few months later, Massachusetts was ready and eager to respond. The Spartan soldier counted it a disgrace to return from battle without his shield. You needed no shield like the Spartan, but around your heart you wore the shield of your country's honor and you brought it back without a stain. Loyalty to duty in every hour of the nation's need, constant and heartfelt appreciation of the debt we owe the defenders of the Union, in that hour when her fate hung trembling in the balance, is the one theme which I deem appropriate to voice from this platform today.

Veterans of the Grand Army, this is your day, and no issue can rightly divide the time with a consideration of your interests and the relation your lives, and those you honor today, bear to this great nation. On this occasion I have the honor to speak for a generation that has grown up since the war. The young men of America can always be relied upon to rally around their country's cause, and today, if rightly led, we have nothing to fear. They would be the last to tear one thread of glory from the garment of the Union soldier. It was young Patrick Henry's voice that, in '75, sounded the tocsin of war in the old house of Burgesses, and his eloquence that committed Virginia to resistance to the crown.

"And echoing back her Henry's cry, came pealing on each breath
Of northern winds, the thrilling sounds of Liberty or Death."

It was the young men of Massachusetts, fresh from the village schoolhouse, nestled amid the Berkshire hills, skirting the shores of Cape Cod, or from the more pretentious institutions of learning in our cities, from schools where they had declaimed the vigorous eloquence of Webster, Everett and Sumner, who stepped forth as volunteers when our flag was fired upon and their courage and loyalty that gave Gov. Andrew the grand backing that upheld the honor of the old Commonwealth through all the trying period of the war. These young men came forward promptly at the call of their country and offered their services for the defense of its institutions and honor. The circumstances under which they enlisted showed them to be actuated by motives of the loftiest patriotism, leaving behind comfortable homes, fond parents and friends, for the hardships, privations and dangers of the camp and battlefields. It is such loyalty as this that makes any attempt to belittle the services of the soldiers or treat their just claims with derision seem all the more uncharitable and un-American. The other day my eye fell upon a cartoon in a leading New York paper, in which Uncle Sam was represented as asking funds from Columbia, who, in return, showed him an empty safe and pointed to the empty wallet in her hand marked "pensions." What would the martyred Lincoln think of such a picture as that if he were here today? Has the real American heart any sympathy with a picture representing the national treasury empty, because of a hundred millions paid annually to soldiers and their dependent relatives? In the first place the payment of pensions to Union soldiers will never deplete the treasury, and in the second place the nation, with all its billions of wealth, is not rich enough to pay the debt it owes the boys in blue for their priceless heroism and devotion, which stood like a Gibraltar of defence between the nation and its ruin in '61, which vindicated the supremacy of the stars and stripes and paved the way for a national credit, that makes United States securities eagerly sought after by the bankers of the entire world. So long as a single individual in New York city counts his money by hundreds of millions and the revenues of the country flow constantly into the treasury without oppressing the common people, my voice will never be raised except in the advocacy of liberal and just appropriations for pensioning the defenders of the Union.

There are pictures made up of war memories before which even the most irreverent must bow in adoration.

Out of the darkness of the past comes the face most loved of all—Abraham Lincoln—the one man above all others who seemed authorized by Divine commission to lead the armed hosts of the Union against the armies of treason. In the moment of victory and peace he fell before the foul hand of the assassin. His great heart was as wide as the world, and behind all his acts was a sublime faith which had its inspiration from the very throne of the Most High. Grant, Sheridan, Sherman, names written in a blaze of glory on the same page with Lincoln, also greet us from out the past and remind us of leadership that was grand, heroic and conquering, and while the tendency is to laud, to a disproportionate degree, the generals, I would not forget the men who made up the rank and file of an army that was invincible, because of an unwavering faith among the men that their cause was right and must in the end be triumphant. That faith never wavered, and they were ready to hazard all, pledge all, sacrifice all, that the Union might be saved. Nobler records of patriotism cannot be found, and many of your own number today bear the scars received in battle. What more thrilling act of heroism does history record, and what one touches the heart more keenly, than that of Sergeant Thomas Plunkett, of the Twenty-first, the armless hero of Fredericksburg, who, when the color bearer fell in that fatal slaughter, seized the flag and bore it aloft to the farthest point gained in the deadly assault and left it only when a bursting shell tore off both his arms and drenched the colors with his blood? No wonder that at his funeral a short time since the city of Worcester and the state itself united to pay their tribute of respect at his grave, while before his hearse, was borne, by comrades of the war, the blood-stained banner for which he gave so much, and which in return gave him an immortality of fame. Many others of the bravest and best, who today sleep in unknown graves, received on the battlefield higher honors than human authorities can bestow.

"On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn sound
The bivouac of the dead.

"Rest on embalmed and sainted dead
Dear as the blood ye gave,
No impious footsteps here shall tread
The herbage of your grave."

The town of Milton furnished 287 men for the war, a surplus of twenty-five over and above all demands, and the amount of money appropriated, outside of state aid, was $27,480.55. The ladies of Milton were incessant in their good work for the soldiers, and raised and expended more than $10,000 for the brave sick and wounded in hospitals. Norfolk county furnished in all 13,104 men and appropriated $1,205,385.29, and each town filled its quota upon every call. The same thing was true of every city and town in the Commonwealth, and, with the exception of twelve small towns, each furnished a surplus over all demands, the aggregate of which was 159,165 men. The fact that Massachusetts had less than 1,200 drafted men showed better than any thing else the loyalty of her citizens. Labor at home was in demand and wages were high on account of the exigencies of the war and an inflated currency. There was a constant competition between families needing support on the one hand and the country calling for volunteers on the other, but personal gain and obligations to home were secondary to public duty, and patriotism in almost every case came off triumphant. Much that was done in the way of home sacrifice and deeds of devotion and heroism in the field will never be fully known. It was a mission of love and duty, and to the credit of the women be it said that their hands were never weary in trying to make the sick bed less hard and the pains of the wounded limbs less severe. While the women were knitting socks and mittens, the young girls were scraping lint or making bandages, and the boys were picking berries in the field, which they sold, forwarding the proceeds to the Christian or Sanitary Commission. In no instance was there evidence of a disloyal spirit on the part of any town or city in Massachusetts, but on the contrary a determined purpose throughout the Commonwealth to put down the Rebellion.

In every crisis of the world's history there has always been some great champion who came forth, bearing as it were a divine title to lead the forces of right against the wrong. It was a dark day for our country in '61, a time when treason seemed to have plotted successfully, holding in its grasp the very men and forces which ought to have been available for our defence. Even when the war cloud broke people could not comprehend its full significance. Secretary Seward believed that the war would be over in ninety days, and the three months' men were expected to restore peace and order to the nation. But Abraham Lincoln said that war, a fierce and bloody war, was inevitable, and dared to face it, and you cannot look upon his picture to-day without recalling his peerless statesmanship, his sympathetic heart, his steadfast courage, and his sublime confidence in the people of the North. He always kept close to the people and at the same time he leaned on the Almighty arm with a confidence that could never be shaken. He had no stronger patriot at his command than our own John Albion Andrew. As Adams and Otis had in other years stood in Faneuil Hall and lighted the torch of liberty with the touch of their mighty eloquence, so Gov. Andrew stood on Massachusetts soil and pledged the best blood of her sons in defence of that liberty, which nurtured by the sons of the Revolution and which in '61 had become as deep-rooted as the granite of neighboring hills. He knew the blood that ran through your veins and he was not surprised when company after company and regiment after regiment, made the streets echo with their gallant tramp, twenty four hours after the telegram from Senator Henry Wilson said that they were wanted in Washington. You know what the feeling was then among the people. They depended upon you and your comrades all over the land to save the nation and restore the flag to its rightful place; and you did save it. The flag which to-day floats to the breeze from every schoolhouse in Massachusetts preserved with all its original lustre is there because you loved it and defended it. It was drenched by the blood of 279,000 patriots, whom we honor to-day; it has cost billions of treasure; but treason was not allowed to stain it and to-day no nation dares assail it.

Proud encomiums have been heaped upon you for that service. History records that your spirits on the march were excellent, that you bore your hardships cheerfully and hopefully, and always carried in your minds and hearts the confident anticipatio of the decisive victory. And when the victory came, following the advice of your great Commander, Grant, you returned to your several avocations and substituted for the weapons of war the implements of handicraft and husbandry.

The war was settled grandly and the enemy was treated with a magnanimity that no other conqueror than General Grant was ever known to allow. We have no wish to continue the animosities engendered by the war or revive any sectional spirit. We look over this broad land today and see it blossoming into loveliness and teeming with prosperity; the North grasps the hand of the South and, forgetting the past, the universal cry is, "We are American citizens under one flag and one government." You, members of the Grand Army of the Republic, will allow none to supass you in cordiality to your former foes. But while all this is commendable, patriotic and Christian, there are some things that must not be forgotten, some traces of the Civil War from '61 to '65 that must not be blotted out if we would preserve our freedom in all its vigorous purity. Let the South have her monuments if she will, that of the arch-conspirator with the rest. They believed in them. Let them decorate the graves of the men that wore the gray, no man gainsays the right. They were courageous, honest and loyal to the side they had been led to believe was the right one. They left behind friends, who revere their memory with the tender regards of family relationship and sectional pride. Let them cherish the lost cause if they will, but there is a loyalty due the Union to which every other issue and every other love must be secondary.

In my opinion there ought never to come a time in this country when history, as it is taught in our schools, shall omit the part you soldier boys of the North played in the war of the Rebellion, as against foul treason on the other side. The name of the chief conspirators should never be glorified along with the great leaders who stood by the Union, and not a dollar should ever be paid by the national government in the way of pensions to the men who made up the rebel army and helped destroy the Union. Love of country is not stimulated by catering to disloyalty and it must always be shown that the price of treason is death. As well might England ask to have Bunker Hill monument razed to the ground, as for the South, reflected by cowardly sentimentalism in the North, to hint that the soldiers' monuments in northern cemeteries should be obliterated, in order that they may not suggest the sectional discord of the past. We do not question the present fealty of any state or section, but neither sentiment nor pride should blind us to the fact that the Union cause was just and that the Union soldier fought for those principles upon which the future existence of our government depends. Mr. Webster said, "The world's deep and awful anxiety is to learn whether free states may be stable as well as free." The war of the Rebellion proved the stability of the free states. Let future generations read the whole of American history and avoid the rocks that nearly wrecked our ship of state. The soil of the Sunny South which has been baptized with the blood of your comrades, must some time in the future bear fruit that will in a measure repay the heroic effort of the North to keep the states together. When reconstruction and education shall have evolved a new South, with all the name implies, then will Virginia again vie with Massachusetts, as she did in the earlier days, in upholding the high standard of the republic.

What a glorious heritage is ours, and what grand possibilities open up before the American youth! It is not our lot to spend four of the best years of life on bloody battlefields. You closed the gates of war, God grant they may never be opened again at the instigation of civil strife; but there is still need of heroic service all along the line; some must lead while others follow. With war memories pressing constantly upon your minds, with a personal knowledge of what it cost to preserve the Union, you have a peculiar interest in the future of the Union. The columns of the Grand Army are indispensable supports upon which the structure of our government rests today, and your very presence among us gives an inspiration to the American youth which ought to impel him to a life of loftiest patriotism and loyal devotion to his country's needs. What better word can you leave to be cherished in the hearts of your descendants than loyalty, a word that ought to be written upon the forehead and grafted into the heart of every man who walks this broad land, before he is allowed to enter into the full communion of American citizenship. In this bustling age, when there is such a mad rush after wealth and social position, it is fortunate that such a day as this comes in to remind us that the nation has claims upon her citizens, and that she is pleased to remember the men who have been loyal to those claims in the past.

Memorial Day teaches that patriotism, loyalty, discharge of duty, greatness of achievement and holy sacrifice upon the altar of the country do find appreciation in the hearts of a free people.

At the dedication of a soldiers' monument at Painesville, Ohio a few years ago, Gen. Garfield, in the midst of an eloquent tribute to the soldier, asked the crowd this question: "Suppose your country, in an awfully embodied form of majestic law, should stand above you and say: 'I want your life; come up here on the platform and offer it,' how many of you would walk up before that majestic presence and say 'Here I am; take this life and use it for your great need.'" 2,000,000 men and more who, in the time of their country's peril, had such a question proposed to them, answered in person at the front. Shall we then in times of peace be found false to duty? No! I have faith in that inborn instinct of the American soul, which makes the republic safe in his hands. Storms may arise, enemies from within and without may plot to destroy, but the ship of state will lack neither valiant seamen nor skilful pilot to carry her through the troubled waters into a secure haven.

By the rivers of blood which flowed on battle fields, shed by North and South alike, by the billions of treasure it cost the government to sustain the honor of the flag, by all the sacred memories that cluster around Memorial Day, we lift our hand to heaven and swear eternal loyalty to the Union. Let destiny point the way and we will follow.

If injustice or wrong bears with heavy weight upon the citizens or any portion of our land, be they white or black, red or yellow, let it be ours to help lift the burden; if ignorance or superstition, fresh from lands unblessed with a government of the people, by the people, threatens the prosperity and safety of America, let us be prompt to fortify ourselves against it; if the common school, that great bulwark of self-government, a gem priceless to rich and poor alike, if this institution fails to stand in all its close and important relationship to the state, then let the spirit of '61 be aroused to stand as firmly for its interests as you stood for the Union, which originally drew its inspiration from the public school.

Whenever the time comes that the silvery words of oratory are powerless, that reason's ear is stopped, there shall exist within the minds of all that love of country which saved the state.

We have a double obligation to the dead whose graves you cover with blossoms and evergreens today. We are their debtors, not only in an account that cannot be paid, but also in duties that we can render. It is to perform one of those duties that we are now gathered here. God pity the man who withholds his sympathy and encouragement to the proper observance of this sacred day. I remember not long since, on a beautiful spring morning, standing alone in Arlington cemetery, where, sleep 11,000 of our soldier dead, thousands of their names unknown to earth, but registered among the brave in Heaven, and read the inscriptions on the headstones, themselves full of holy inspiration; I said, how great the sacrifice. And then I looked across the river to the city of Washington, and as I beheld the magnificent dome of the national capitol pointing heavenward and reflecting the rays of the rising sun, I thought of the North and South reunited in the bonds of fraternity and loyalty, and I said: Yes! fallen heroes, you did make a mighty sacrifice, but it was necessary and it saved the Union.

'Twas then I received my best lesson in patriotism, 'twas then I resolved that whatever of talent I possessed, whatever service I could render in the cause of liberty, loyalty and good government, should be placed upon the altar of my country. Gratitude, eloquence, more grand than spoken words, is written upon every wreath and flower you bring, and Memorial Day makes the nation better, safer and stronger. It will help to cement the union of the states more strongly than anything else, and henceforth let every man, whether he lives in the North or South, join with Longfellow as he sings:

Thou too sail on, O Ship of State
Sail on, O Union strong and great.
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.
We know what master laid thy keel,
Who made each mast, and sail, and rope.
What anvils rung, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat,
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!
Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'Tis of the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith, triumphant o'er our fears;
Are all with thee,—are all with thee.

Improvement Association Supper.

The first banquet of "The Village Improvement Association" was held in Lincoln hall on Tuesday evening, and proved a most happy and successful affair.

The tables were tastefully arranged in the hall and ornamented with handsome bouquets. About them was gathered a large company of ladies and gentlemen representing the best interests of the village. The South Weymouth Improvement Association was represented by its officers with their ladies.

At 7.45 the president of the association, Mr. Joseph W. Armington called the assembly to order and invited Rev. B. F. Eaton to invoke the divine blessing. He then invited the company to discuss the bill of fare, which the caterer, Harvey Blunt of Boston had spread before them.

When ample justice had been done to the tempting viands the president in a happy speech welcomed the assembled company and congratulated the association on the occasion. He said it was an occasion to which he had long looked forward, and one which he believed would inaugurate a new era of prosperity for The Village Improvement Association.

He alluded to the good work which the association had done in the past and to the greater work which it might do in the future; and closed by urging greater faithfulness on the part of all the citizens to the interests represented by the association.

A fine violin duet was rendered by Messrs. James and Chas. Hunt, and a song given by Mr. Theo. P. Willey which was heartily encored.

The president then introduced Mr. Edgar R. Downs, to whom he facetiously alluded as a veteran in the improvement association business, the village pedagogue who had risen to the honorable position of the Presidency of the South Weymouth Improvement Association, and also to the Weymouth Club.

In responding, Mr. Downs acknowledged the flattering allusions of the president, expressed thanks for the honor implied in the cordial invitations to be present and address the meeting. He then proceeded to speak in detail of the work accomplished by the South Weymouth Improvement Association; and to show how great its influence had been, not only in what had been accomplished through its own instrumentality but also in the "improvement" spirit which it had aroused among the citizens generally, by which the entire village was being transformed.

In closing he congratulated the Weymouth association on its prosperous condition and happy outlook. He playfully alluded to the interests which bound the several villages of the town together, and indulged the hope that Weymouth might continue to be "one": that the question of "town division" was dead—never to know a resurrection,—and when the electric railroad had been built, and the new library building erected, (which was sure to be) then the citizens of South Weymouth could make more frequent visits to Weymouth Landing than they were now able to make.

Mr. James Hunt tendered a violin solo in an exquisite manner, and Miss Susie Porter gave a fine solo which was heartily encored.

The president alluded to the excessive modesty of Weymouth citizens. He had without success invited several of them to speak, especially Selectman Bicknell. But while the modesty of that gentleman would not allow the company to hear his voice, yet if any of them wished to read his speeches they could do so by walking the streets of the village which had been greatly improved under his management. The president then introduced the secretary of the South Weymouth Improvement Association, Mr. Howard H. Joy. This gentlemen with a good deal of pleasantry took up the line of thought followed by Mr. Downs, endorsed everything which had been said and gave further details of the good work done by the South Weymouth Association.

Miss Helen Allen gave a solo which was highly enjoyed, and Messrs. Chas. and James Hunt a delightful violin duet. This ended the happy and successful banquet of the V. I. A.

Yachting Notes.

—George Loring, of East Braintree, has built a cape boat 19 feet long during the past winter. The work has been done nights and mornings before and after work, and as he is a carpenter by trade and works in Boston, it has been no easy task to build this yacht in addition to his regular labor. The boat was launched Monday and floats as lightly as a duck. She resembles the famous Cape boats closely and is an able sea boat. She has a tight standing room, a large cabin, and will be cat rigged. She is thoroughly built, is as solid as a boat can be and is a credit to her young builder.

—Capt. Alonzo E. Jones entered his White Fawn in the City Point race Memorial day and although he left all competitors far behind in his own wake, he was unable to secure a trophy. She failed to finish on time as the wind failed.

—The Bess is a new boat built by W. C. Cherrington for the express purpose of beating the Rocket, owned by W. H. Faxon of Quincy. She proves very fast, and expert judges say that the Rocket will have to look sharply after her laurels.

—The Diadem, L. A. Hayward, is as usual in fine trim and looking for victims.

—The Egnet is a new boat, built for W. P. Barker of Quincy and is also after the Rocket.

—The Montezuma showed too good metal last season to be hauled off from racing. The club will miss Capt. Worthen's pleasant face if he is too busy to attend the regattas, as is rumored.

—Theodore says his Wasp has some new stings and will be after the flyers.

—Com. John Shaw of the Quincy Yacht Club has a new boat, built expressly to "clean out" the Rocket. The poor Rocket is having a hard time of it this season. They are going for her on all sides.

—The grand opening day of the Monatiquot Club comes June 12th. Don't miss it this year.

Nipped in the Bud.

Well-known sporting men of this and the surrounding towns had arranged a mill between Anderson of Braintree, and a Brockton light weight, to come off Tuesday night. The event was to have taken place in the old Weymouth Iron Co's. mill at East Weymouth.

About 75 sports assembled in the vicinity of Jackson and Commercial square at midnight Tuesday, but aroused the suspicions of Officer Peare who is ever on the alert for anything unlawful. The officer watched the movements of the crowd until nearly 4 o'clock Wednesday morning when they left for their homes having failed to consummate their plans. But for the watchfulness of Officer Peare, it is highly probable that a lively prize fight would have taken place.

Fire.

The old stockhouse formerly used in conjunction with the cooper shop near the East Weymouth depot was destroyed by an incendiary fire at 10 o'clock Wednesday evening. The cooper shop adjoining was badly gutted. The buildings were owned by Mr. John P. Lovell and were unoccupied. The stockhouse building has been open recently and has been a rendezvous for tramps. The fire department were promptly upon the scene and saved the cooper shop from total destruction.

Business Notices.

[Notices under this heading, 3 lines or less, 25 cents.] [Each additional line, 5 cents.]

—W. F. Cushing with his new hack creates quite a city appearance on the streets of North Weymouth.

—John J. Lawler & Co. have opened one of the finest hair dressing rooms in East Weymouth, in E. G. Gardners block, Jackson square. Thanking the public for patronage the past three years, we hope for a continuance of the same. J. J. Lawler, J. Crowell.

—The Fredonia Washer will wash more clothes (and better) in one hour than the best washerwoman can by working hard all day. For sale by Joseph I. Bates, Weymouth. 6-8

The two monuments placed in the cemetery last week by Messrs. E. J. Qualey & Co. of Quincy avenue are as handsome specimens of monumental work as can be found in this vicinity.

That in the lot of Mr. J. B. Rhines is of polished Quincy granite, pyramidal in design and very massive, yet so well proportioned that one does not realize what an immense stone it is. On the front of the second base is the family name in large raised letters, and on the sides of the die, the names of those who have passed away. Near the top is an ornamental tracery, representing oak leaves, acorns and cups. While there is no attempt at display in the lettering, the uniformity and finish of the work is very fine.

That on the lot of O. W. Allen is from a design of the Smith Granite Co. of Westerly, R. I., and is a radical departure from the ordinary style so common in most cemeteries, and the contrast is very marked and pleasing. Made from Barre granite, it is so finely hammered, that at a distance, it looks like marble, and the only polished surface is the face of the letters in the family name, which are raised in a sunken panel on the second base. The base is square, while the second base and die are round, standing nearly 7 feet high. Near the top of the die is a five inch band of Romanesque carving, the figures of which are deeply cut in the stone, the whole forming a unique specimen of the stonecutter's art, and one that Messrs. Qualey & Co. may well be proud of.

—OF INTEREST TO WRITERS. A labor saving invention indispensable to all who write. Of the many valuable improvements which have been made in self-feeding pens a great part are due to the skill and persistence of Mr. L. E. Dunlap, of Boston, who, as a pioneer in this business, has spent the last decade in perfecting the fountain pen that bears his name. The latest perfected invention is the Dunlap Double-feed Pen, and in this very double-feed lies the secret of its success. It carries a sixteen-karat diamond-pointed gold pen, and is a perfect pocket-companion that will not only prove indispensable, but a joy and blessing as long as life lasts. It is guaranteed to write instantly, always and under all circumstances. To introduce it among the readers of this paper, the manufacturers offer for a short time only, to send it by return mail at one-half the regular price. By posting a letter, enclosing a two-cent stamp, to the Dunlap Pen Company, 280 Washington street, Boston, Mass., you will receive a beautifully engraved ticket worth $2.00, and also an illustrated price-list and circular, telling you how to make $5.00 per day.

Institute Base Ball Gossip.

—The Wyomings of Melrose will play to-morrow afternoon on the Park grounds. Game called at 3 o'clock. Come and see the best game of the season.

—The one-hand catch of Gearan was a dandy.

—Coleran did good work at the bat.

—Caneen made a phenomenal catch out of the trees in the morning. He was greatly missed at the afternoon game.

—Sullivan played a masterly game.

—The report that Bagley was released was without foundation.

—Hersey of the Hingham Centres will pitch his first game for the Institutes to-morrow.

—Captain Corridan keeps the boys on the jump.

—The crowd was well pleased with the decisions of Umpire Ryan.

—As a catcher and base runner, Quinn is a star.

—The ladies are especialy invited to attend to-morrow's game.

What a Grade Holstein Cow will do.

Mr. Jonathan Record of No. Weymouth, has a half-bred Holstein heifer two years old in March last, that is giving 17 quarts of milk a day. Two pounds of butter is made from each day's milk. The heifer is kept on hay and grass; no grain. The Dam of this wonderful heifer was a common native cow. The sire was the noted Holstein "Friesian Bull," sent from this place a year and a half ago to Nova Scotia, to the Cremona Farm, owned at the present time by Nelson Woolaver of that place. Mr. Record challenges her equal in Weymouth of the same age, both for butter and milk.

Teachers' Examination.

The annual examination of persons desiring to be considered applicants for positions in the Weymouth schools will be held at North High school, Weymouth, Saturday, June 13 at 9 o'clock. Members of the Training class, and persons now teaching who have taught less than a full year in town, will be expected to be present. Others desiring to take the examinations must communicate with the Superintendent before June 12.

Carroll-Nolan.

Miss Nellie T. Nolan, South Weymouth's noted vocalist was married Thursday morning to John Carroll, Esq., of the firm of Strong & Carroll, East Weymouth. They went to New York last evening, whence they sail for Europe to-morrow.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Murphy at the parsonage, at Weymouth.

HEADQUARTES REYNOLDS POST, No. 58, DEPARTMENT OF MASS., G. A. R. EAST WEYMOUTH, June 2, 1891.

General Order No. 5.

In behalf of Post 58, the commander takes this opportunity to express their appreciation of the many acts of kindness and favors shown by the friends of the boys in blue.

To the town of Weymouth for its liberal action in donating the sum of $500 to defray the expenses incident to Memorial Day, we extend our grateful acknowledgement; to Rev. Henry C. Alvord for the able sermon delivered to the post on Memorial Sunday which was listened to and highly appreciated by every comrade present, we tender our sincere thanks; to the members of the choir whose enchanting music would well repay a long journey to hear, we return thanks; to the Revs. W. S. Keys and W. D. Leland for their courteous invitations to attend memorial services in their respective churches, which owing to a prior acceptance, we were unable to attend, the thanks of the post are due; we also extend our heartfelt thanks to the citizens of Weymouth, young and old, who on this day remembered our dead for what they were and all they dared, by contributing so lavishly of wreaths and flowers; our thanks are also due the editors of the Weymouth Gazette for many favors shown the post; we feel deeply indebted to one and all, who in any manner, however little, contributed to the success of the occasion.

HOBART & CO.,

DEPOT SQUARE,

Opposite Depot, - WEYMOUTH.

Braintree.

—A union meeting of the East Norfolk County union, composed of the Y. P. C. E. Societies of Randolph, Holbrook, South Braintree, Wollaston, and Quincy, was held at the chapel of the First Congregational church, Monday evening. Each society was represented in large numbers. Interesting addresses and essays were given showing the marked sincerety of the young people in this work.

—The Ladies' circle met on Wednesday afternoon in the parlors of the First Parish church, where under the hospitality of Mr. Henry T. Thayer and Mrs. Stephen Ellis a very choice supper was served at 6 o'clock. In the evening a very pleasant sociable was enjoyed and a highly successful entertainment was conducted. The programme consisted of an instrumental solo by Miss Hattie H. Ellis, which received much applause, a recitation by Miss Carol Pitkin, a very taking song by Miss Edna Gauland; a recitation by Miss Ethel Pitkin was followed by a rich contralto solo by Miss Helen Morrison. Miss Bessie Pray with a recitation was succeeded by Miss Mabel Morrison in a well executed piano solo and an interesting reading by Miss Grace Cobb.

—Elm street was completely blocked with the crowd of spectators who watched the Fire Boys practice at the hydrant in front of Long's factory.

—The death of Mrs. Austin Torrey occurred at 12 o'clock Tuesday night. The funeral will be held from the house Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

—Edwin F. Porter is under the weather and during his absence from the store Heman is back in his old place.

—Herbert F. Kneeland is improving.

—A fine girl baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Holbrook, Tuesday.

—The new hardware store, on Hancock street directly back of the Holbrook block, for Thomas Herrick, is about completed and by next week it will be a full fledged store.

—Some fifty-three of the employees of the Hollingsworth & Whitney Paper Mills went to Gardner, Me., last Friday night by the Kennebec boat, where notwithstanding the rough trip they beat the employees of the same company of that place 23 to 17 in a game of base ball. The return trip was very pleasant and a fine time was enjoyed.

—Peter McGibbins has the cellar dug for a new house on Pond street.

—Saturday the Braintrees play the Shoe and Leather nine of Boston on the common.

—On Wednesday evening Miss Mary Tenney and Benj. Holman were married at the residence of the bride's parents.

—Capt. A. K. Miller and family are expected to arrive for the summer this week, from New Orleans.

—Miss Gertrude Badger who has been visiting her sister Mrs. N. F. T. Hayden, returned to Boston Wednesday.

—The Coaching Club enjoyed a very jolly ride on Saturday night through the courtesy of one of the influencial members.

—For a long time the people of So. Braintree have uncomplainingly put up with inadequate depot facilities, but an old adage says "Everything comes to him who waits" so everything in the way of a depot bids fair to come to the patient waiters of So. Braintree. The new structure is built of very handsome brown stone with granite trimmings and nothing is lacking in its appointments for comfort and convenience. The old depot has been demolished and carted away, and until the new one is ready for occupancy a temporary covering has been made along the platform.

—James S. Holbrook, an aged and highly respected citizen of Braintree, died last Tuesday from the grippe. The deceased was in his 86th year and was one of the substantial citizens of that town. He was well known in business circles, having formerly been engaged in boot and shoe manufacturing. He was for several years a surveyor of highways. He leaves a widow and two children. Mr. Holbrook was one of the oldest members of Orphans Hope lodge, A. F. A. M., of East Weymouth, having been affiliated with the lodge over 34 years. The funeral was held Wednesday.

—A special town meeting was held Tuesday evening, Hon. F. A. Hobart, moderator. Voted that the treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to issue bonds to the amount of $50,000 as provided by an act of the legislature of 1891, entitled "an act relating to the water supply of the town of Braintree," said bonds bearing interest at 4 per cent. per annum. It was voted to appropriate $2000 to pay interest on the bonds of the present year and to establish a sinking fund. Voted that the vote passed on March 24, 1891 in relation to the $100,000 Braintree water loan be ratified and confirmed, and that said bonds shall bear date of June 1, 1891 and carry interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually. A committee consisting of Thomas A. Watson, Amasa S. Thayer, Richard Long, John V. Scollard and Henry A. Monks. was appointed to investigate the status, of any and all parties seeking to establish or operate an electric light or power plant in this town and to consider the whole matter of electric lighting and power furnishing, so far as it is likely to concern the town, and report at some future meeting. It was also voted to relay the floor of the Town hall and also purchase new seats, the estimated cost of which is $800.

—A well attended and very enjoyable Strawberry Festival was held in the Odd Fellows' Hall by the Methodist society Thursday evening. After the supper followed a very edifying musical entertainment which was fully appreciated.

—The Thayer Academy base ball nine beat the Tufts College nine 11 to 8 on French's Common, Wednesday afternoon. Foster's pitching and the strong batting by Ewell and Gallivan were brilliant constituents of an interesting game.

—Miss Edna Gauland sang at a concert given by the Y. M. C. A. at their hall at the corner of Berkeley and Boylston Sts., Boston, for the benefit of the Fresh Air Fund.

—Mrs. Thomas B. Vinton is visiting friends at Plymouth.

—The Ladies' Afternoon Whist Club enjoyed one of their pleasant meetings with Mrs. Frank Dearing, Monday.

—E. A. Graves and family have moved into the house on Middle street formerly occupied by Mr. Moore.

—Edw. Reed, Esq. is expected today at his country residence in Braintree for the summer.

—At the Junior Tennis club grounds Saturday afternoon, in doubles, Field and Lyons of Weymouth, beat Thayer and Stevens of Braintree, 5 to 0. In singles, Field beat Stevens 6 to 3; Lyons beat Thayer 6 to 3. On Thursday afternoon the club was entertained by Miss Julabele Arnold on her grounds, where in doubles Miss Bessie Morrison and Harold Stevens beat Miss Bessie Pray and Fowler 6 to 4.

—A picked nine, managed by Mr. Stephen Wardwell of Braintree, scored a grand victory of 5 to 0 against the Westons of South Boston. The Braintree club showed up in fine form and each man seemed to fill his position and display a knowledge of base ball science with unusal alacrity. The "star" points of the game were accomplished by Rudderham and Rooney.

Bicycle Accident.

A bicycle rider while coursing along Broad street, opposite Reidy Brothers' blacksmith shop, Monday evening, collided with two girls, Miss Nellie Cushing and Miss Pratt, who attempted to pass in front of the bicycle but miscalculated the speed of the machine, hence the accident. The rider was thrown from his bicycle and the girls were knocked down. Although some severe bruises and contusions were sustained by the victims of the accident, fortunately no serious injuries were received.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—In accordance with the statutes, a portion of the last session of the South High school before Memorial Day was devoted to exercises of a patriotic nature, consisting of readings from Whittier and national songs.

—For the last three Saturdays there has been a game between the Wessagussets and a picked nine on the grounds of the Active base ball club. The first game was stopped by rain before five innings had been played; the second was won by the picked nine, 13 to 9; and the third was won by the Wessagussets, 10 to 8 in ten innings. The score stood 6 to 6 at the end of the ninth inning.

—Hon. Wm. E. Barrett, speaker of the House of Representatives, is to be the guest of the Improvement Association at the annual supper next Tuesday evening The officers of the associations and business clubs of neighboring villages will also be present.

—Rev. Mr. Livingstone of North Abington, preached in the Union church, Sunday morning. He is a graduate of Williams college, class of '84, and has been in North Abington since June 1890. Mrs. Livingstone is a writer of considerable ability.

—At the Universalist church, last Sunday Rev. Mr. Atwood of the Divinity school, Tufts college, officiated. He is a candidate and has made a very favorable impression. The audience was a large one as all have been for the past three months. There is much interest manifest in the settling of a pastor who shall belong to this church alone.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morgan of Cleveland, Ohio, parents of Mrs. G. B. Rogers and Miss Lillie Morgan, spent a few days in town last week, on their return from Carlsbad, where they have been for several weeks past on account of Mr. Morgan's health. He is the head of the W. J. Morgan Engraving Co., whose imprint may be seen on almost any large theatrical poster.

—Henry A. Thomas delivered the oration before the Milton post of the G. A. R. last Saturday.

—Rev. John J. Smallwood, the distinguished colored orator of Franklin, Va., spoke on "The American Negro; What he was, What he is, and What he is to be," in the Union church Sunday evening. A collection of $25 was taken up in behalf of the Franklin Temperance and Literary Institute which he is attempting to organize in his native town. He has raised upward of $10,000 since last September. Mr. Smallwood's father, mother, seven brothers and five sisters were sold into slavery, and he has been able to find trace of only a few of them. He is an eloquent speaker, and an energetic champion of his race and their civil rights. If the first generation of the colored race since the abolition of slavery can produce such a specimen of manhood as he, what may not subsequent ones produce?

—Something over $1000 has been subscribed in this village towards the building of the Hatherly Street Railway. The amount apportioned to South Weymouth was $10,000.

—Eugene M. Moran whose premises were raided two weeks ago, was fined $100 and sentenced to three months in the House of Correction by Judge Humphrey last Friday, for keeping liquors with intent to sell. He appealed and furnished bonds. Monday the court forfeited the liquors seized from his place.

—Rev. H. O. Maxham of Tufts College will preach in the Universalist Church, next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock.

—Huntington F. Wolcott Post, G. A. R. of Milton, voted to have 1000 copies of Henry A. Thomas' address printed for distribution.

—Miss Ella M. Clark who has been for several years a leading member of the choir of the Union Church, has accepted a position to sing in the Marverick Church, East Boston.

—Dr. E. N. Mayberry has made arrangements for a grand cavalcade of all who can procure horses and saddles, to start from Independence square at 6.30 this evening. Why should not a riding club be organized here as well as in our neighboring villages? At Quincy, Memorial Day, 35 mounted men were seen.

Century Club.

The regular meeting of the Century Club will be held Friday evening, at 7.30 in Engine hall, North Weymouth. Subject for discussion: Resolved, "That it is for the interest of Weymouth that an Electric Railway be established therein."

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—The Barge Clifford of the Union Towboat Co., conveyed quite a number of the Conservatory of Music pupils to Lovell's Grove, Memorial Day.

—A base ball club from Dorchester came to this place Saturday and carried off a victory, to the tune of 26 to 14.

—Through an oversight on the part of our correspondent, the meeting of the Century Club was reported as last Friday, its last spring meeting will take place this evening. Strawberries and cream will be served.

—The widow of Rev. Asa Cleverly, at present residing in Boston, contemplates making her future home within the limits of Ward 1. The house to be made her home is her property, and is occupied by R. F. Cleverly and Hugh Maguire. Mr. Cleverly will make his residence in one of the cottages on Cleverly court, and Mr. Maguire will take up his abode over the grocery store of Mr. Walter Jenkins.

—The graduation exercises of the Athens Grammar school takes place on Wednesday evening, June 24, at the Pilgrim Church. That of the North High school, Thursday evening, June 25, at the Odd Fellows Opera House, East Weymouth.

—The "Ten Club" have opened their summer quarters at Great Hill Beach.

—Mr. John Henry leaves to-morrow to visit his home in New York.

—Jacob Shaw for over a year past, fireman on the New York & New England, is home on a vacation. Railroading seems to agree with Jake, as during past years his avoirdupois has been increased forty pounds, and he has become as handsome and portly as any of Boston's famous aldermen.

—Rev. Wm. Tyler, formerly of this town, at present of Dover, Mass., with his wife, has been visiting his daughter Mrs. Buckman on Sea street.

—The following party: E. S. Beals, Esq. and wife of this place, E. Frank Beals and wife of Milwaukee. Wis., and Alexis Torrey and wife of Boston, left the hub Monday at 9 a. m. destined for Milwaukee, expecting to arrive in time for noon lunch Tuesday.

—Eva Beal, a young daughter of Luther B. Beal, sustained a fracture of one of the bones of her right forefinger, by getting it caught in a carriage wheel at Bicknell's stable Sunday last.

—Strangers were plenty in this village Memorial Day; among those met and recognized by your correspondent, Sidney A. Dunbar and wife, formerly of this place spent Decoration Day with Mrs. Dunbar's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Walker; Thomas Downey and wife of So. Braintree, with Mrs. Downey's parents; Geo. O. Miller and Byron W. Tibbets of Campello, called on many of their friends here; Mr. Warren Pike of Melrose, and Mr. and Mrs. Asahel Stockwell of Winchester, were entertained by Wm. Collyer on Newton street.

—Officer Walker had a case before Judge Humphrey, Wednesday. Both parties were in the employ of J. L. Bates, farmer, on Bridge street. The complainant, Daniel S. Sagrue, against John Donovan for assault. Owing to the age and eccentricities of the complaniant, the case was dismissed, and the defendant was placed on probation.

—A large number of relatives and friends pleasantly surprised Wm. J. Coleman at his home Friday evening. He was the recipient of a handsome office desk.

Lovell's Corner Happenings.

—Mr. David H. Lawrence, a popular young cracker dealer of East Somerville, and wife, have been visiting Rev. E. E. Phillips this past week.

—The latest improvement. Mr. Austin Poole has kindly cut and trimmed the grass in the churchyard.

—The May meeting of the Weymouth Temperance Union will be held in the vestry of the Porter M. E. church next Friday evening.

—Miss Fannie Young of Abington has been visiting Mrs. Stephen French.

Memorial Exercises in Ward 3 Schools.

Memorial Day was observed by appropriate exercises in all the public schools last Friday. At the North High school an excellent programme was given. The schoolroom was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting. A delegation from Post 58, G. A. R. and other invited guests were present. The following were the exercises: Song, "Firmly Stand," by the school; sketch of Poe's life, Miss Newton; recitation, "Democracy," Master Dee; piano solo, Miss Hart; essay, "Rights of Slavery," and "Whittier's Connection with Slavery," Master Loud; "Story of Slave Ships," Miss Oldham; poem on Slave Ships, Miss Wade; recitation, "The Yankee Girl," Miss Litchfield; Negro boatman's song, Miss Crockett; recitation, "Slaves of Martinique," Miss Peterson; song, "Marching Through Georgia," school; Descriptions of the year of the War 1861, Master Gutterson; 1862, Miss Worster; 1863, Miss Burrell; 1864, Miss Pierce; 1865, Master Hunt; song, "Barbara Frietchie," Mrs. Owen; recitation, "Two Englishmen," Master Sullivan; song, "John Brown's Body," school.

The exercises at the Hunt, Lincoln, and Tufts schools were also of an interesting character, and was attended by members of the G. A. R. and parents and friends of the scholars.

Z. L. Bicknell Hose Company.

The following have been approved by the engineers of Weymouth, as members of Z. L. Bicknell Hose Co. No. 2, W. F. D. Captain, E. Fahey; lieutenant, W. J. Dunbar; clerk and treasurer, E. Q. S. Litchfield; steward, A. J. Osgood; pipemen, R. F. Shaw, G. A. Dailey, W. H. Davis, W. C. Peare, Wallace Whiton, C. T. Humphrey, A. M. Hawes, T. E. Burrell, C. E. Cushing, John Thompson; gatemen, G. W. Bailey, D. W. Field; hydrant, D. P. Lincoln; engineer of steamer, H. L. Humphrey; assistant engineer, W. T. Rice; firemen, C. T. Humphrey, D. P. Lincoln.

Bean.--Loud.

Mr. John S. Bean and Miss Grace M. Loud were united in marriage at Rockland last Saturday, by Rev. W. D. Woodward.

The happy couple immediately started on a short trip to New York and up the Hudson.

On their return, they will spend the summer at Fort Point.

Not Whitewash.

A good story about a gentleman of the cloth is going the rounds in this town. The gentlemen aforesaid had his fancy taken by the neat appearance of his neighbor's orchard, the trees of which had been treated to a coat of yellow whitewash. So well pleased was he that he thought he would apply a coat to the trunks of his trees. Not being well versed in such matters he took it for granted that the liquid used by his neighbor was paint; and he procured a liberal supply of yellow paint which he applied to the trees. It is needless to state that the result to the trees was disastrous and that they died.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—Interesting memorial services were held in the several schools last Friday. At the Washington school the G. A. R. was represented by Comrades Willard J. Dunbar, Jason Gardner and Leonard W. Cain, who addressed the school on the significance of the occasion. At the Bicknell school exercises were held, and a good number of visitors present, but no representative of the post. At the Franklin school there were exercises in each room; in the principal's room the scholars were addressed by Comrades Waldo Turner and W. P. Rice; in Miss Talbot's room remarks were made by Superintendent Norcross and Comrade Asa Pratt; in Miss Canterbury's room by Comrade Warren Tirrell. At the Middle Street school there were very interesting programmes, and a large number of visitors, the G. A. R. was represented by Comrades Warren Tirrell and W. P. Rice, who spoke to the scholars, and by Comrades Asa B. Pratt and Charles Cowing.

—The patronage of the base ball games on the Lake street grounds last Saturday, was the largest in the history of that field; a large number of ladies graced the occasion with their presence. The Marions will play the Sapphires of Roxbury on those grounds to-morrow.

—The carpenter's hammer and the painter's brush are making quite a change in the appearance of the home of W. T. Rice.

—Albert Humphrey and family are at their old home on Commercial street.

—Miss Brit Harlow is out of school suffering from being poisoned while gathering wild flowers for Memorial Day.

—Mrs. T. H. Emerson is under a physician's care with la grippe.

—A holiness meeting was held in Temperance Hall Sunday evening.

—Mr. Alexander Andrews was the principal speaker at the Reform Club meeting, Sunday evening.

—Captain and Mrs. Milton Reamey of Cohasset, and Mrs. Barzillah Holmes of Plymouth, have been visiting Mrs. Mary Reamey the past week.

—Mr. Arthur Tirrell and family of Norwell, and Ned Tirrell and family of Boston, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Tirrell.

—Contractor Hale is erecting a new stable for painter E. W. Shackford on Hawthorne street.

—Carpenters have begun operations on Frank H. Sylvester's new house on Hawthorne street.

—Mr. John S. Bean and Miss Grace Loud were united in wedlock Saturday evening.

—Just before the dress parade on Decoration Day, Commander Hayward was presented with a very fine basket of cut flowers by Samuel Drew. The response was quite brief, it being simply, "thanks, Sam," but it is hardly necessary that these two men should use may words with each other, their friendship being of the Damon and Pythias sort. For ten years the same roof sheltered both, and what belonged to one belonged to the other, and never a cloud came between them.

—Miss M. Abbie Rogers gives her annual recital this Friday evening in Odd Fellows Hall. An extensive programme will be rendered, showing the proficiency acquired by the pupils of Miss Rogers.

—The cantata of the "Months and Seasons," repeated by Miss Rogers in the M. E. Church, Monday evening, lost none of its beauty in the repetition.

—The Pansy Circle of K. D., held their annual meeting with E. Maude Lock, May 27, and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. J. A. Cushing, vice-president, Miss Emma E. Bates, secretary, Miss E. Maude Lock, treasurer, Miss Georgia L. Cushin .

—The Whatsoever Circle of K. D., will hold a parlor sale Friday afternoon and evening, June 12, at the residence of Mrs. B. S. Lovell. Fancy articles, ice cream, cakes and home-made candies will be the attractions.

—The friends and patrons of Misses Castner were quite interested in their Memorial Day display. While this was extra fine and gotten up expressly for the occasion, their constantly arriving fresh goods, always give to their store a bright and pleasing appearance.

—The Junior Templars will give an entertainment in Temple Hall, Monday evening, June 8. Miss Hattie Bishop, dramatic reader of New Haven; Miss Gertrude Strickler, cornetist; and Miss M. Abbie Rogers, accompanist, have been secured for the occasion.

A WOMAN'S WISH.

When I watch the little ones at their play,
There creeps in my bosom a bitter pain,
And I wish, and I wish it were yesterday
And I were a child again!

When I hear the little ones' laugh ring out,
To cast my womanhood I am fain,
And I wish that the years would "right about,"
And make me a child again!

When I see the little ones kneel in prayer,
My tears drop down like a slow, sad rain,
And I wish with a longing I scarce can bear,
That I were a child again!

—Susie M. Best in Philadelphia Ledger.

THE UP STAIRS TENANT.

"The Citizens' Bank of Venango" was a private bank in a town in Missouri. The "Venango" part of the title had been inherited from another bank, which had gone into liquidation years before, and referred to some land speculation in connection with banking.

Our building was a plain two story brick, standing at a corner, and the interior was plainly furnished, as was the rule in those days.

It was simply a long room divided by a railing in the center. Behind the railing were our desks, and at the rear end was the vault. The second floor was scarcely more intricate.

There was a front room and two rear rooms, with a hall the length of these latter. One room was exactly over the vault, and this leads me to tell you how the vault was built. It was of brick, and two feet thick, and at the top the joists of the second floor were covered with boiler plates. The spaces between the joists were filled in with cement. On top of the second floor joists, before laying the floor, we laid other plates of iron, and when the bank was opened for business we had little fear of our cash being stolen by any tenant of the up stairs rooms.

The idea was to rent the rooms to lawyers or doctors, but the first caller decided to take all three, and to pay one year's rent in advance. He was a stranger to all, but gave his name as Samuel Goldwaithe, and explained that he was an inventor, and was then seeking to perfect certain tools for the use of miners. One of his ideas was a drill to be worked by turning a wheel. The man had a frank, open face, a smooth tongue, and when he offered to put down a whole year's rent in advance it would not have been business to keep him out. While Mr. Desnoyers, my partner, was perfectly satisfied as to our up stairs man, I was not. There wasn't the slightest reason to suspect that he was not what he claimed to be, or that he had any designs against us, but I somehow felt myself suspecting him from the first moment I saw his face. He hadn't got settled in his rooms when I planned that he would enter our vault by way of the back room, or at least make an attempt to do so, and this idea was never out of my mind thereafter. I was laughed at by my partner, but this only made me the more obstinate in clinging to my idea.

Goldwaithe furnished the front room as a reception room and office, the second as a bedroom and the third as his workshop. Exactly over the vault he had a carpenter put up a heavy framework of beams, and among the stuff moved in were chisels, hammers, augurs, bits, drills, files, saws and many other carpenters' and mechanics' tools. I could say nothing, as he made use of all these as an inventor, but my suspicions regarding his final object were continually strengthened.

For three months our man up stairs scarcely entered the bank below or spoke to one of us, except as I met him at the hotel where we both boarded. He was so quiet and easy spoken that everybody had a good word for him, and he invited many of the townspeople to visit his rooms and examine his work. At the end of six months he was universally liked and respected, and if he had wanted a couple of hundred dollars at our bank a dozen business men would have backed his note. While I had become ashamed to longer mention my suspicions, they had by no means left me. We had no watchman, and the safe in the vault was one of the old pattern which was neither fire nor burglar proof. My chief dependence was on the strength of the vault. I made all sorts of estimates, but finally decided that Goldwaithe could not cut his way down into the vault and open the safe in less than twelve hours at the very least. The tools and appliances of that day were very crude compared to the modern.

The man up stairs had been with us half a year, and no one could find the least fault with his conduct, when he seemed to make a special effort to win my friendship. Up to this time he had passed the evenings in his rooms. Without saying a word to my partner I had passed my evenings in the bank, never leaving until about 10 o'clock. I did this to shorten Goldwaithe's time, providing he intended to enter the vault. I was always at the bank at half-past 7 in the morning, and this would give him only nine and a half hours to work, where I had figured it would take him twelve.

One evening something was said about cards, and he so managed it that I invited him up to my room in the hotel to play a few games. As long as he was there I apprehended no danger, and so it finally came about that we used to spend almost every evening in company. Sometimes I went to his room, and sometimes he went to mine, and he never exhibited the slightest curiosity regarding our business in the bank. One evening he did not leave me until 11 o'clock. Next day Desnoyers said:

"Our man up stairs has been away, eh?"

"No."

"But I met him as he came from the depot last night at 10 o'clock."

"You are mistaken. He was in my room until 11."

"Is that so? Why, I met a man who looked exactly like him. He was carrying a sachel, headed for the bank, and I am sure he went up the stairway."

This statement puzzled and annoyed me, and kept my suspicions active. Knowing that Goldwaithe was with me at the hour of 10 I was obliged to believe my partner mistaken, but yet there was something about the case I did not like. About four weeks later, one morning as I opened the bank, the ticket agent at the depot came along on his way to breakfast. A train passed at 6 o'clock, and he was obliged to be there.

"Lost your inventor?" he asked as he came up.

"How—what?"

"Why, Goldwaithe. He went off on the train this morning, and as he had a sachel with him, I didn't know but he was going for good. Bought a ticket for St. Louis."

As Goldwaithe had been with me up to 11 o'clock of the night before, and had said nothing of going away, I was puzzled. This state of mind was increased an hour later when I saw him in the bank. I started to ask for an explanation, but on second thought concluded not to. That evening I saw the ticket agent and asked:

"Are you sure you saw Goldwaithe go away this morning?"

"Perfectly sure. Why?"

"Because he didn't go. He came into the bank an hour after I saw you this morning."

"Great heavens, man, but I sold him his ticket and passed the time of day with him! You must be mistaken."

But I satisfied him that I was not, and then both of us were puzzled. About two weeks later I made an excuse to get into the back room up stairs. I found a piece of machinery mounted on the wooden frame, and though I asked no questions and Goldwaithe volunteered no information I felt positive that it was a drill which was to be worked by turning a handle. As I told you before, so long as I had the man under my eye I did not fear for the vault. If he was with me evenings I cared not what he did daytimes.

Two or three weeks after the incident related above I had a four hand card party in my room, and Goldwaithe was one of the quartet. At 9 o'clock I was called down stairs by the ticket agent, who said:

"I want to know whether I have seen straight this time or not. Goldwaithe came in on the 8:30 St. Louis express."

"You must be crazy! He is right up stairs in my room at this moment, and Peters and Thompson are with him!"

"But I tell you I saw him. More than that, he came up the street ahead of me and turned into the stairway."

I took him up stairs, and when he saw Goldwaithe sitting there he was dead beat. Here were three instances of queer deception. While I regarded them as deceptions or illusions there was something uncanny in the incidents, and my interest in the movements of Goldwaithe was considerably increased. On one pretense or another I got into his rooms or sent friends up there every day or two, but everything appeared straight. One evening he sat down in the hotel office to write a letter, and while he was thus engaged I walked up the street four squares to speak to a merchant. On returning I met Goldwaithe face to face, and saluted.

"Ah, you cut it short."

"Yes."

"Well, mail it and hurry back."

I walked straight to the hotel, and there sat the man I had spoken to on the street three minutes before! He was still writing. I asked a friend who sat reading if Goldwaithe had been out, and he replied in the negative. I felt my hair standing on end as I sat down, and during all that long night I did not get a wink of sleep. My partner, the ticket agent, and myself had all seen what we had not seen. Was he of flesh and blood, or was he a wraith who could appear in two places at once?

It was on a Friday evening I thought I met our up stairs man on the street. Saturday morning I took a stepladder and closely examined the top of the vault, and also sent a man up stairs to look at the floor of the back room and see if it was intact. Everything was reported all right, and Saturday evening our man said to me:

"I haven't slept well lately, and I believe I will try a change of beds. I will turn into the room next to you for a couple of nights, and see if the change won't bring sleep."

I rejoiced at this, as I need not fear that he was at work on the vault. I satisfied myself that he was in bed before I turned in, and that night I slept better than for months before. He occupied the same room on Saturday night, and on Sunday forenoon he surprised me by saying he would accompany me to church. He appeared to listen very closely to the sermon, and on the way home pointed out its strong and weak points.

It was my custom to enter the bank at noon to see if all was well, but on this day, after we had finished dinner and I was about to start, a friend came in and I was detained about half an hour. Everything seemed to be all right in the bank, but, from force of habit, I opened the vault, and one look showed me that the climax had come. There was a hole through the roof of the vault, our safe was open, and lying on the litter of papers was a man. I did not know whether he was dead or alive when I summoned help, but we soon found that he was dead and lying in his own blood. The safe had been opened with wedges, and the $8,500 it contained had been taken. It was half an hour before I thought of Goldwaithe, and then he could not be found. We burst into his rooms, and about the first thing we found was a sachel containing our money.

The machine which I took to be a drill was a drill. A piece of the floor had been cut out, the drill had then done its work on the iron plates, and later on a chisel had been used to pick out the cement and remove the bricks. The robber could have begun work at 5 o'clock on Saturday evening, and he probably did so. Who was he? It was Goldthwaite! Fifty of us could have sworn it was he, and yet it wasn't. I had left him alive at the hotel, and he had skipped. Then who was it? His twin brother, as we afterward ascertained to a certainty. How did he meet his death? He had got into the vault and the safe and secured the money. He passed up and down by means of a rope. In going back the second time for further plunder he had encountered a piece of glass in the cement, and it had severed an artery in his leg.

Goldthwaite knew that I mistrusted him. He had, therefore, worked to throw me off my guard, and when the plan was ripe for execution he lay sleeping within ten feet of me, while his own brother was doing the work. We caught him three months later in New Orleans, and, while we could not satisfy the jury that he was one of the robbers, he was taken to Cincinnati on another charge and got a sentence of twelve years.—New York Sun.

Robinson Crusoe's Island.

The island of Juan Fernandez, once inhabited by Robinson Crusoe, is now tenanted by a former Austrian officer, Baron von Rodth, who, after being forced by the terrible wounds which he received at the battle of Sadowa, in 1866, to leave the army, grew tired of the monotony of existence in civilized Europe and determined to devote his fortune to a life of adventure. For fifteen years past he has been living on the island of Juan Fernandez with a small colony of natives and of European deserters from civilization, and only communicating with the world once a year, when he sends his fine sailing yacht to Valparaiso for provisions and supplies.—Harper's Weekly.

Lord's Prayer in a Breastpin.

Augustus L. Barrett has a curiosity in the shape of a breastpin, in which is set a small circle of paper hardly half an inch in diameter on which is written the whole of the Lord's prayer. What makes the work especially remarkable is that it was done with a quill pen. The words can be made out by persons with extra good eyesight without the aid of a magnifying glass. Moses Hall, an uncle of Mr. Barrett, did the writing.—Malden (Mass.) Mail.

FEEDING BOX FOR CATTLE.

A Virginian's Plan for Feeding Cattle and Restraining "Uglies."

A Virginia correspondent writing to Country Gentleman gives the following illustrated description of a feeding box for cattle. He says:

A GOOD FEEDING BOX.

As I soil my cows I have been annoyed with racks and other devices where on or two master cows would keep away all the weaker ones until they could fill up and walk off. From the box here illustrated four cows can feed at a time and neither reach the other, as they stand at opposite corners. By laying a 15-foot pole at each corner, fastening the larger end to the top of the box, and letting the smaller end rest on the ground, a practical stall is made for each cow, restraining the "uglies" from going around so often.

The boxes are 5 feet high and 6 feet square; have no bottom, and are cleaned by turning them over. The materials are scantling 2 by 4 inch and 20 feet long; for the sides, inch boards 6 inches wide and 12 feet long; and for the braces, 1½ inch boards 8 inches wide and 16 feet long. These cut without waste, giving six 6 inch strips on each side. Similar boxes have been illustrated before, but this one has an improvement in the top bar which prevents the cow getting into the box. For convenience only five side strips are shown; the number will vary with the width of lumber used or the maker's fancy.

Potatoes and Onions.

With many crops, says The New York World, rotation seems beneficial, independent of yearly manuring, to keep up the fertility of the soil. With some, however, it does not appear to be necessary. Potatoes and onions, especially the latter, do well on the same soil for years, provided they are properly fertilized. As both are pre-eminently hoed crops, the kind of cultivation they receive to make them profitable keeps the soil in the best possible condition for their growth. For the onion crop the ground should be exceedingly mellow and rich. Barn yard and hog pen manure are both excellent for this crop, provided they are well decomposed and thoroughly mixed with the soil. No crop will pay better for an uncommonly good preparation of the soil than this. A yearly top dressing of ashes applied to the onion beds and raked in before the planting is highly recommended.

For the potato the ground should be deeply plowed and well harrowed to pulverize it. The furrows for the seed bed should be deep and wide, to give the tubers room to form without obstruction from the firmer soil of their sides. For this crop the standard commercial fertilizers have given the best returns, and are now more commonly used than for any other. They may be sown broadcast or more directly applied. For their most economical use they may either be mixed with the loose soil in the bottom of the furrow before the seed is dropped, or be scattered on top of a first shallow covering, leaving the furrow to be filled when the shoots begin to appear. It is not quite settled whether above or below the seed is the best.

FROM A DUNGEON CELL.

HOW A TRIBUNE MAN FARED AMONG THE CONFEDERATES.

The Story Albert D. Richardson Told in His Narrative, "Field, Dungeon and Escape"—Twenty Months' Captivity and a Twenty-seven Days' Race for Liberty.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

THE circumstances of Richardson's capture by the Confederates were characteristic. When Grant's army was at Grand Gulf, on the Mississippi below Vicksburg, Richardson, Junius Henri Browne, also of The Tribune, and R.T. Colburn, of The World, joined an expedition fitted to run out past the Vicksburg batteries and got accommodations on a barge loaded with hay bales. After a terrible experience the expedition passed five miles of batteries and was "within ten minutes of safety" when it suddenly came to grief. "In the confusion caused by our evolutions in the eddies," says Richardson, "I had quite lost the points of the compass, and asked, 'In which direction is Vicksburg?' 'There,' replied Junius, pointing to the lurid smoke. 'I think it must be on the other shore.'

"'Oh, no; wait a moment and you'll see the flash of the guns.' Just then I did see the flash of more guns than I coveted, and four or five shots came shrieking toward us. Colburn and myself instinctively dropped behind the nearest hay bales. A moment after we were amused to observe that we had sought shelter on the wrong side of the bales—the side facing the Confederate guns. * * *

"'I suppose we can surrender,' cried a poor scalded fellow.

"'Surrender the devil!' replied Colburn. 'I suppose we will fight them!'

"It was very creditable to the determination of our companion, but, to put it mildly, our fighting facilities just then were somewhat limited.

"My comrades assisted nearly all the wounded and scalded men down the sides of the barge to the water's edge, and placed them carefully upon hay bales. Remaining there we had nothing to lose and nothing to gain, and I urged:

"'Let us take to the water.'

"'Oh, yes,' my friends replied; 'we will after a while.'

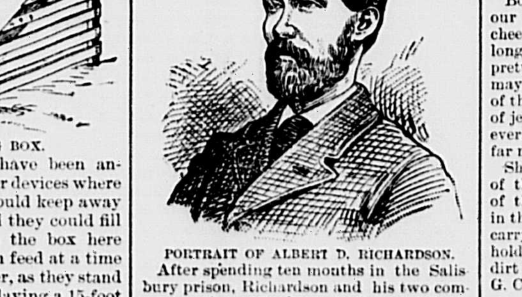

"Soon I repeated the suggestion and they repeated the answer. It was no time to stand upon forms. I jumped into the river, ten or fifteen feet below our barge. They rolled over a hay bale for me. I climbed upon it and found it a very comfortable means of navigation. At last, free from the instinctive dread of mutilation by splinters which had constantly haunted me, I now felt that if wounded at all it must at least be by a clean shot. The thought was a great relief.

"With a suspicion—not the ripe and perfect knowledge afterward obtained—that clothing was scarce in the southern Confederacy, I removed my boots, tied them together with my watch guard and fastened them to one of the hoops of the bale. Taking off my coat I secured it in the same manner."

Settling himself securely on his floating bale Richardson determined to escape down the river, but the enemy ceased firing and sent out a yawl and captured the whole party. The three correspondents gave the usual parole and went to Richmond for exchange, but the Confederate commissioner refused to release The Tribune men, and they lay in Libby prison and Castle Thunder several months. After employing counsel and trying every honorable means to secure justice the unfortunate men began to plot for escape.

Once they had everything planned to bribe the guards, but an accident revealed the scheme, and they were put in a dungeon for punishment, and were shortly afterward sent to Salisbury, N. C. About this time a correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, W. T. Davis, united his fortunes with The Tribune men. A friendly guard bargained to pass the trio over his beat on a certain night. Richardson and Browne were on hand, but an accident delayed Davis until the guard was relieved, and the others refused to proceed without him.

Again and again hopes of escape were frustrated by some trifle. Now and then desperation led to some more daring efforts, but these, too, failed. One day a body of prisoners rushed upon a guard relief, seized their muskets, and attacked the sentinels on their posts. In their haste all hands rushed to one point and attempted to pass the fence, but a couple of field pieces and the muskets of the reserve guard turned upon that one point, quelled the insurrection in three minutes. A scheme of tunneling was pushed far toward success, but the prison commandant took alarm and posted a second line of guards 100 feet outside the stockade, and that rendered egress by tunnels out of the question.

PORTRAIT OF ALBERT D. RICHARDSON.

After spending ten months in the Salisbury prison, Richardson and his two companions determined to take heavy risks to get out and make their way to the mountains of East Tennessee. The outlook, according to the statistics of escapes during their experiences in that prison, was not at all promising. Out of seventy prisoners that had passed the guard but five had reached the north. The others had been retaken or had been shot in the mountains. By extraordinary good luck the trio passed the guards on the night of Dec. 17, 1864. At the time all three were on duty in the hospital, and Davis and Browne held passes permitting them to go outside the first line of sentinels to a Confederate dispensary for supplies. This privilege had been enjoyed so long that they were allowed to go on sight. The night of the escape Browne loaned his pass to Richardson, and with Davis walked coolly out to the dispensary.

Richardson's exit is described in his narrative as follows:

"A few minutes later, taking a box filled with bottles in which the medicines were usually brought, and giving it to a lad who assisted me in my hospital duties, I started to follow them. As if in great haste we walked rapidly toward the fence. When we reached the gate I took the box from the boy and said to him, of course for the benefit of the sentinel:

"'I am going outside to get these bottles filled. I shall be back in fifteen minutes, and want you to remain right here to take them and distribute them among the hospitals. Do not go away now.'

"The lad understanding me perfectly replied, 'Yes, sir,' and I attempted to pass the sentinel by mere assurance. * * * The sentinel stopped me with his musket, demanding:

"'Have you a pass, sir?'

"'Certainly I have a pass,' I replied, with all the indignation I could assume. 'Have you not seen it often enough to know it by this time?'

"Apparently a little dumfounded, he replied modestly:

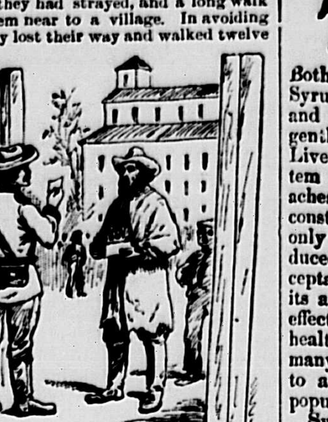

"'Probably I have; but they are strict with us and I am not quite sure.'"

The sentinel examined the document, which was all right in Browne's hands, but all wrong in Richardson's. But he did not know the difference, and told Richardson to pass on. Once outside Richardson met several Confederate officials who knew him and knew that he was out of his place, but the "peculiarly honest and business-like look of that medicine box" threw them off their guard. Instead of entering the dispensary Richardson hid his box and slipped under a convenient shelter. At dark his friends joined him, and the three passed the outer guard without difficulty. For The Tribune men this was the end of twenty months of captivity.

The first night and day were passed in the barn of a friendly citizen within one mile of the prison. The second night a Confederate lieutenant belonging to the Sons of America, an order of southern men who secretly aided the Union, met them and gave full directions how to reach friends on their journey. Then they set out on their long winter tramp, poorly clad and weak from long confinement.

The main guide of the refugees was a railroad track running west. They were often obliged to leave the line, however, to avoid crowded settlements, and in making detours were frequently lost. In these emergencies they relied upon chance friends among the slaves to direct them aright. One night they were rested and refreshed in a slave cabin, "the first dwelling," says Richardson, "that I had entered for twenty months. It was rude almost to squalor, but it looked more palatial than the most elegant and luxurious saloon."

The slave led them to the railroad from which they had strayed, and a long walk took them near to a village. In avoiding this they lost their way and walked twelve miles to gain half a mile. Another slave friend hid them for a day in his master's barn, remarking: "Master is a terrible war man, a Confederate officer, and would kill me if he was to find it out."

Regaining the right road the travelers walked on until daylight, when they discovered that they were being followed by a Confederate home guard. Another long detour was necessary to throw him off the scent. They next entered a region where slaves were few. Being almost starved, one of the party, who had secured a fair Confederate uniform for a disguise, entered a wayside tavern to get food. In the barroom a lounger gave him the sign of the Sons of America. This brought them a friend indeed, who loaned the party mules to ride and guided them five miles to the home of a strong Union man.

On the morning of the seventh day they found that they had made fifty miles of their direct journey. Their next chance friend was a woman whose acquaintance Richardson made by tapping at the door of a log cottage. After a sprightly colloquy she betrayed her sympathy with the Union cause. Richardson told his errand, receiving the cheerful salutation:

"If you are Yankees all I have to say is that you have come exactly to the right place."

Afterward she said to Richardson: "You were the first Yankee I ever saw. The moment I observed your clothing I knew you must be one, and I wanted to throw my arms about your neck and kiss you!"

On Dec. 30 they crossed Yadkin river into a region where Union homes were plenty. Communications had to be opened with women because the men were "lying out" to avoid impressment by the hated Confederacy. After allaying all suspicions the refugees found the people of great service.

"These men were walking arsenals. Each had a trusty rifle, one or two navy revolvers, a great bowie knife, haversack and canteen."

Guided and fed by such friends the refugees reached Tennessee early in January. Yet their perils were not over, for the mountains were patrolled by Confederate guerrillas. Once they had to pass within a quarter of a mile of a notorious rendezvous called Little Richmond. An invalid arose from his bed and guided them past the danger at the risk of his life. On another occasion their guide, the celebrated Don Ellis, aroused the party from sleep with the startling announcement: "We have walked right into a nest of rebels. Several hundred are within a few miles, eighty are in this immediate vicinity."

The refugees scattered among the mountains in groups, each group having a faithful guide. Richardson and others were led by a young woman who often performed this service, and whose name, Melivina Stevens, was not revealed until the war closed.

On the 14th of January, 1865, The Tribune printed this dispatch from its long lost correspondent:

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 13, 1865.

Out of the jaws of death; out of the mouth of hell. ALBERT D. RICHARDSON.

He had traveled 340 miles since leaving the prison twenty-seven days before.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Women of the Himalayas.

There is no seclusion of women in India, and great strapping girls dressed in the gaudiest of colors go about with flat plates of gold hanging to their ears, each of which is as big as a trade dollar. They have gold on their ankles and bracelets of silver running all the way from their wrists to their elbows. Their complexions, originally as yellow as those of the Chinamen, are bronzed by the crisp mountain air until they have now the rich copper color of the American Indian.

Both men and women look not unlike our Indians. They have the same high cheek bones, the same semi-flat noses, and long, straight black hair. If you take the prettiest squaw you have ever seen you may have a fair type of the average belle of the mountains. She wears two pounds of jewelry to the ounce of the squaw, however, and her eyes are brighter and she is far more intelligent.

She works just as hard, and the woman of the Himalayas does much of the work of the mountains. I see women digging in the fields, working on the roads and carrying immense baskets, each of which holds from two to three bushels, full of dirt and produce on their backs.—Frank G. Carpenter's Letter.

A Pleasing Sense

Of health and strength renewed and of ease and comfort follows the use of Syrup of Figs, as it acts in harmony with nature to effectually cleanse the system when costive or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

A Fool and His Money Soon Part.

How true some of those old sayings are. A friend of mine paid a travelling quack $50 to cure him of scrofula, from which he had suffered two years. He gave him a bottle of stuff which only aggravated the disease. When he went to consult him the second time, the quack had left for parts unknown. Upon learning the circumstances I recommended Sulphur Bitters. Five bottles cured him.—Editor Journal and Courier.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap rum or poor Whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will cure you where all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses

SULPHUR Bitters

The Dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your Druggist.

DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE.

If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure.

TO THE WINDS OF JUNE.

Blow gently, Winds of June! Each downy nest
Is full of unsung songs and unspread wings
That will respond to patient hoverings;
Soft rockings suit the rustic cradles best.

Blow gently, Winds of June! The bud is here
That soon will be transformed into the rose,
The sweetest miracle that nature knows;
A breath might mar the beauty of the year.

So easily the song drops out of tune,
So eagerly the sun absorbs the dews,
So quickly does the rose its petals lose,
That, for their sakes, blow gently, Winds of June!
—Mary A. Mason, in June St. Nicholas.

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, June 7, 1891.

A very much advertised young man gave Washington a small portion of his time early this week, and his handsome brown mustache, which by the way seems hardly large enough to cover a hole big enough for the owner to get two number seven feet into, and shining silk tile looked as jaunty as they did when this young gentleman first bounded into notoriety by reason of his father having been elected President of the United States; nevertheless there was a somewhat careworn look around the eyes of Russell Harrison, which may mean either and his skin looks as though he might be a little bilious. This was explained by a newspaper man who made an unsuccessful attempt to interview "Russ" in the following language to a group of fellow scribes, all itching to jingle the bells which "Russ" has recently been credited with carrying around as a part of his outfit: "I tell you boys, the old man read the riot act to Russ, about that Chicago interview, so strong that a dozen crow's feet formed around his eyes in as many minutes. No wonder he wouldn't talk to me; every time he sees a reporter he thinks of his father's anger."

TROUBLE OR LATE HOURS,

Mrs. Harrison expected by this time to have been settled for the summer in her cottage at Cape May Point, but one thing and another turned up to detain her, and now she hopes to leave here about June 20 and to take Mr. Harrison with her. She is in New York to-day bidding good-bye to her daughter and daughter-in-law, Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Russell Harrison, who sailed for Europe to-day to be the guests in London of Minister and Mrs. Lincoln and in Paris of Minister and Mrs. Reid.

A four cornered combination, consisting of a jealous husband, a giddy young wife, a handsome unmarried man and a female art-student, all but ruins all the same, has furnished Washington with something to talk about until the next sensation turns up. The giddy young wife will have time to think it all over while she is recovering from two wounds caused by pistol balls; the handsome single man may put in his time in the same way as he lies on the hospital cot to which he was carried with only a lady's night gown on for clothing, after the jealous husband got through using him for a target; the jealous husband as he languishes in jail awaiting his trial may develope a sorrow that he has not yet expressed for his wholesale shooting, and the female art-student, who is out on bail as a witness has probably, long before this, concluded that it is far better to give all one's time to the muses than to divide it with love and champagne. This was a four-cornered tragedy, and there are just exactly as many stories of how and why it occurred as there are corners.

FOND OF THE CUP THAT CHEERS,

June weather isn't probably the kind which the wisest people choose to get married in, but there has been a remarkably here this week, which a facetious friend says represented Hymen's job lots left over from the regular spring mating season.

"Reciprocity John" is the new cognomen which has been bestowed upon Hon. John W. Foster, who, for about a year, has been engaged as confidential agent of the State department, and who will be, during Secretary Blaine's vacation, in exclusive charge of the branch of the government which is trying to make reciprocal trade arrangements with other nations. Mr. Foster carries that mysterious air around with him that in the mind of the historical student is always associated with diplomacy. He always impresses a newspaper man as a fellow—I trust it is no offense to speak of him thus—who might, if he wanted to, furnish but he never wants to. It is only fair however, to say that Mr. Foster has been very successful in his diplomatic efforts, and that he is deep in the confidence of the administration, and knowing how to control his tongue has doubtless had much to do with both.

LOTS OF INTERESTING NEWS,

The many friends of Senor Romero, the Mexican minister here, were pleased to learn from him that there was no truth in the rumor that he was to be recalled and placed at the head of the Mexican Treasury department. Mrs. Romero, who is an American, has just returned from a very pleasant visit to New York. No family in the diplomatic circle is more popular than the Romero's.

I saw Sir Julien Pauncefoote, the British Minister, taking his constitutional to-day, and unless my imagination is at fault he looked as if he was in an unusually good humor. The cable news concerning the action of his government upon the Behring Sea question was calculated to make him feel pleased.

Ex-Congressman Owen, of Indianna, the newly appointed head of the bureau of Immigration of the Treasury department, created by the bill passed by the last Congress, and of which he was the author, ought certainly to make a good official, as he has for a long time given his attention almost exclusively to but owing to the defective condition of our laws on this subject it is not thought that a great deal can be accomplished at present. The new bureau can at least gather information that will enable Congress to intelligently legislate on this most important subject in the future. Everybody is interested in shutting out the idle, the vicious, the pauper and the unproductive immigrants, and it is only necessary to find a way to do it without injury to the honest, industrious immigrant who wishes to enjoy the boon of American citizenship, to secure the approval of nine tenths of our people.

The report of Sir Richard Tupper, which has just been published, as to his efforts to bring about trade reciprocity between the United States and Canada, shows him to be much more sanguine of something tangible being accomplished at the conference which is to take place in Washington next October than anyone here is.

Why is it that Ohio politics are always bobbing up in Washington? is one of the unanswerable questions. The latest phase, and one which may turn out to be very important, if the statements made concerning it be true, is that two members of the Executive Board of the Knights of Labor—Hayes and Devlin—have notified Mr. Harrison that unless the present Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing—the Knights of Labor of Ohio will this year take an active part in the Ohio campaign against the republican party. That the two gentlemen named were here in their official capacity is certain, and it is equally certain that they have preferred charges against the Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and would be pleased to see him removed, but whether they made the threat about going into the Ohio campaign isn't quite so certain, as neither Mr. Hayes nor Mr. Devlin would talk about it. Secretary Foster will, it is expected, this week decide what he will do about the charges against Capt. Meredith. The friends of the latter say that they will be ignored.

Secretary Noble is expected to return to duty this week, and it is probable that we shall soon know whether there is any truth in the constantly reiterated rumors of his intended withdrawal from the cabinet. It is believed here, although it cannot be officially authenticated, that Mr. Harrison is only awaiting the return of Secretary Noble to determine who shall succeed General Raum as Commissioner of Pensions. Gen. Raum still insists that he will not resign unless asked, and that he has assurances that he will not be asked to resign.

Ex-Senator Blair did not exercise much influence in shaping the policy of the republican party when he was a member of the Senate, and his influence is even less now that he is a stranded diplomate, drawing a salary as minister to a country that refuses to receive him; nevertheless it is interesting to note that he gives it as his opinion that the next republican national platform will declare in favor of the FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

If Mr. Blair be right Mr. Harrison will find it mighty difficult to run on that platform. A gentleman fond of asking unanswerable connundrums wants to know what would be the effect of the republican and democratic platforms declaring for free silver coinage and the respective conventions nominating Harrison and Cleveland, who are both opposed to free coinage?

Secretary Foster has not decided whether the interest to be paid on the extended four-and-a-half per cent. bonds shall be one, one-and-a-half, or two per cent. The national banks will gladly take them all anyway, so that the decision is entirely with the Secretary. But if these bonds were not necessary to them as security for their circulation would the banks be willing to take them at such rates of interest?

THE WIZARD'S LATEST.

Edison Will Exhibit Several Astonishing Inventions at the World's Fair.

Thomas A. Edison, the famous electrician and inventor, is preparing to astonish the world by the exhibit he will make at the World's Fair in 1893. "I shall have two or three things to show," said he recently, "which I think will both surprise and please the visitors to the electrical department of the Exposition, which, by the way, I am fully convinced, will be a great success. Two of these inventions are not yet ready to be described, or even characterized. The third, however, is so nearly perfected, that I do not hesitate to say something about it.

I hope to be able by the invention to throw upon a canvas a perfect picture of anybody, and reproduce his words. Thus, should Patti be singing somewhere, this invention will put her full length picture upon the canvas so perfectly as to enable one to distinguish every feature and expression of her face, see all her actions and listen to the entrancing melody of her peerless voice. The invention will do for the eye what the phonograph has done for the voice, and reproduce the voice as well, in fact, more clearly. I have already perfected the invention so far as to be able to picture a prize fight—the two men, the ring, the intensely interested faces of those surrounding it—and you can hear the sound of the blows, the cheers of encouragement and the yells of disappointment. And when this invention shall have been perfected," said Mr. Edison with the trace of enthusiasm's glow in his face, "a man will be able to sit in his library at home, and, having electrical connection with the theatre, see reproduced on his wall or a piece of canvas the actors, and hear anything they say. I can place one so it will command a street corner, and after letting it register the passing sights for a time, I can have it cast them on a canvas so that every feature and motion of the passers, even to the twitching of the face, can be seen, and if a friend passed during the time, you may know it. This invention will be called the 'Kinetograph.' The first half of the word signifies 'motion,' and the last 'write,' and both together mean the portrayal of motion. The invention combines photography and phonography."

Mr. Edison occupied nearly an acre with his exhibit at the Paris Exposition. As he wishes to show at Chicago all that he exhibited at Paris, and numerous other things besides, he is desirous of being accorded a greater space in 1893. The electrical exhibit is expected to be the wonder of the Exposition.

Advertising in a Hymn Book.

A poor congregation found itself badly in want of hymn books. The clergyman applied to a London firm and asked to be supplied at the church rates. The firm replied that on condition that the hymn books contained certain advertisements the congregation should have them for nothing.

The minister sorrowfully complied, thinking to himself that when the advertisements came they should be removed from the leaves. The hymn books arrived and they contained no interleaved advertisements. At the thanksgiving service the parson gave out the Christmas hymn, and the congregation sang the first verse. When they reached the last line they found that this is what they had been singing:

"Hark! the herald angels sing. Dash's pills are just the thing: peace on earth and mercy mild, two for man and one for child."
—London Tid Bits.

How to Mount a Horse.

Any woman who lives in the country, and who is not too stout, should be able to mount a horse from the ground unaided, writes Carl A. Nyegaard in The Ladies' Home Journal. If she attains to be anything of an equestrienne she should require no more assistance than a man, though she is handicapped a little by reason of her skirt. She should lower the stirrup sufficiently to reach it with the left foot, then placing the right hand on the upper pommel and the left hand on the lower pommel, by a sideway motion, right shoulder forward, spring lightly from her right foot and swing herself into the saddle. Once there, she should take her foot out of the stirrup, place her right thigh in its proper position above the pommel, and adjust her dress. The stirrup is shortened from the right side by pulling up the strap again. A good dancer will soon learn to mount.

MY TENDER CONSCIENCE.

I have a tender conscience,
That measures five feet three,
Whose slight reproof is worth whole tomes
Of cold divinity.

Who leads me by "a still small voice,"
And, with a loving glance,
Reminds me while the lamp holds out,
This sinner has a chance.

Whose form is ever by my side,
And at the door of sin
Thrusts out a white and rounded arm,
And bars the way within.

No man can ever go astray,
Who pauses to reflect
That he must meet those modest eyes,
And keep his self-respect.

So with a firm, unshaken front,
I bid old Satan flee:—
For I've a tender conscience,
That measures five feet three.
—Harry Romaine in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Disguised Princess.

BY MARGUERY. (MRS. FLORENCE HUNT.)

"There! Your things are all right, I think Sis," said Brother Harry, after placing Della's traveling bag in the rack, her cloak on the nail, and seeing her comfortably seated in the easy chair of the Pullman car.

Then he stooped over and whispered, though very audibly, "Now don't go talking to everybody you see. Keep your ears open and your mouth shut. Goodbye. Write soon," and he lifted his hat and hastened out of the car just as the train started. Della looked decidedly vexed at her brother's admonition. Perhaps it took away something of the sadness she had felt at leaving home, and the uneasiness consequent on her first journey alone.

Her mother having been ordered to the mountains for her health, her brother unable to leave school, where he was fitting for college, and her father engrossed with his business, there was really no one to accompany her. Still her brother's caution was not unnecessary for she was rather fond of talking.

She was just sixteen, small for her years, somewhat self-conscious and fond of books, especially of poetry, very imaginative, and rather posed in her set as an intellectual girl. She had, to read on the journey, a volume of Browning, which she had tried very hard to understand, and from which she was fond of repeating extracts to her girl friends with but little idea of their meaning.

She was going to pass the summer with a widowed aunt at her home in a little seashore town, half watering place, and locally noted for its literary society.

Her aunt wrote poetry, and Della felt she should be in a circle where she would be appreciated at full value. For at home her brother laughed at her, her mother was apt to interrupt her rhapsodies with the very practical suggestion that her stockings needed mending, and she had far outstripped her school fellows in her aspirations and literary desires. The train went puffing out of the town and the last familiar mark had been swept from view. There was nothing of interest to see in the woods through which they were passing, so Della opened her Browning and tried to lose herself in rapt contemplation of one of the poet's master-pieces. It soon became rather tiresome, for the motion of even the easy riding drawing-room car made her head ache, and the unaccustomed surroundings made it hard for her to fix her mind on the ideal. So she closed her book and looked around her. Nobody was inclined to speak to her, and only the attentive porter whose palm Harry had "crossed with silver" seemed to take any notice of her.

"Well," she said to herself, "Harry need not have worried about me. I think I am old enough to take care of myself. He is such a teaze. Besides there happens to be nobody but old people in this car."

Perhaps it was indignation that made her swing round rather forcibly in her revolving chair, and caused her to collide with a lady in the next seat who happened to be turning about at the same time. "Oh! I beg your pardon," stammered Della, blushing.

"And I beg yours," said the lady promptly, "it was a mutual mishap I am sure." The voice was very musical, and Della looked at the speaker intently. She threw back her heavy black veil, showing a wonderfully fresh, young face in marked contrast to the iron gray hair, which she wore low upon her forehead just above a pair of piercing black eyes. Her smile disclosed a set of fine white teeth and lit up a face of singular beauty.

Seeing Della looking at her, the lady said, "Pardon me again, but I heard your brother's last admonition. I am sure however he did not intend to apply it to an old lady like me, for a long ride in a train is tedious to a young girl." Then she took up the volume which lay in Della's lap and began to talk about the poet. She described him as faithfully as if she had seen him but yesterday; then went from one celebrity to another, giving charming anecdotes of London society, with which she seemed to be familiar.

Della sat spell-bound, listening to her talk. She was in a seventh heaven of delight. To meet one who had seen and talked to the great ones whom she admired from afar, was a pleasure indeed.

As the conductor came through the train and she handed him her ticket, her companion glanced at it and said, "Why! you too are going to Whitside. That is my destination."

"Oh! I am so glad," said Della, enthusiastically, "then I shall see you again. But you do not live there?"

"No," said the lady smiling, "I am only going there for the summer. I have taken Brant Cottage. Do you know where it is?"

"Oh yes. It is very near my aunt's house where I am going."

"That is very pleasant" she said, and then sat so long without speaking that Della fancied she had forgotten her. At last she said, "If we are to be neighbors, we should know each other's names. I am Mrs. Smith."

"And I am Adele Ellis. Della they call me at home."

"And your aunt?"

"Is Mrs. Stannow, the poetess," answered Della eagerly. "Do you know her? Some of her poems are lovely. Her "Sonnet on the sea-foam," and her lines to a "Frag of Sea-weed" have been universally admired."

"Oh! yes, I think I have read them both, I shall feel honored to live near a poetess, though I go to Whitside for quiet and repose. I have just met with a severe affliction, and so am not in society this season."

"I am sure my aunt will be pleased to know you," said Della.

And so the day passed in talk, with intervals of rest, until just before night the train arrived at Whitside. In the confusion of leaving and the excitement of meeting her aunt, Della lost sight of her new friend, until, as they left the station, she saw her entering a carriage, driven by a servant in a quiet, dark livery.

"Oh! my dear," said her aunt, "that's the lady who has taken Brant Cottage. Her servants and carriages came down yesterday and —"

"Oh! yes, aunt," interrupted Della, "I know her quite well. She is lovely. Has lived in London, and is most anxious to meet you, having read your poetry, though she is not in society this summer on account of a severe affliction." Della rattled this off much as a parrot recites a well-taught formula and with a little air of pride at knowing a person of so much importance.

"Really, my dear," said her aunt, as they entered an omnibus, "I am glad to know that Brant Cottage is let to such an acquisition to our little circle. I shall hope to meet Mrs. Smith very soon. I shall of course call, and so will Mrs. Bond if she goes to St. Andrew to church as she no doubt will, and I must have her at my teas; of course, she is literary and will appreciate our society and —" Aunt May was talking away in her usual manner, unconscious of her auditor, who however now interrupted her by saying:

"But auntie, I don't really think she will go out any. She said she wanted strict seclusion and that's why she came to Whitside."

"Ah! but the commingling of kindred spirits is not society as fashion calls it."

But here the omnibus stopped at the house, and the conversation turned upon other topics. The next morning Della went out for a walk, and it is almost needless to say she rambled towards the cottage. It was not far from her aunt's house which was on the outskirts of the little town, near the shore, while Brant Cottage stood almost on the beach itself, on the side of a wooded bluff, half concealed from view by the thick growth of savins and pine trees which surrounded it. The grounds sloped gradually down to the very shore, while beneath the bluff was a small pier, hidden by the overhanging cliff. It was a very retired spot, though across the water several miles away could be seen the great hotels and elegant residences at a noted watering-place. Della strolled down to the shore, glancing towards the cottage to see if she could get a glimpse of her new friend. But beyond the smoke rising from the kitchen chimney, she saw no signs of life.

She sat awhile upon the beach, and then more disappointed than she would acknowledge went back to her aunt's house. The next day was Sunday however, and Mrs. Smith appeared at St. Andrew's and was given a fine seat by the attentive usher. She sat so near Della that I am afraid she watched her more carefully than she attended to the service. After church, however, Mrs. Smith approached her and held her hand saying, "Ah! I am glad to see you, my little friend. Pray introduce me to your aunt." This request was eagerly obeyed by the blushing Della, and after a few graceful words in which Mrs. Smith alluded to Mrs. Stannow's poetry, she said:

"I hope you will permit my little friend Della to come and see me. I am in retirement this summer, but I fear I shall be lonely without some young face to cheer me, so do let her come."

And so Della's acquaintance ripened into an intimacy, for though Mrs. Smith had been very polite to the ladies who called upon her, she had declined all their numerous invitations to readings, teas, fairs, and so forth, with the exception of Aunt May upon whom she called in the morning sometimes, much to that lady's dismay, for the morning hours she always devoted to wooing the muse, leaving Della to amuse herself as best she could, in the house, the woods or on the shore. And Della's wanderings brought her always to one spot, Brant Cottage, where she spent many hours with its fascinating occupant.

Sometimes Mrs. Smith would read to her, or declaim dramatically from some play strange to Della, who sat as if entranced, listening to the music of her voice. She told her anecdotes of foreign travel, some of them so singular that Della found herself wondering what they could mean.

She sometimes asked Della what the gossips of the village said about her; and when the young girl repeated the praise of Mrs. Smith which sounded on all sides, for her charity—she always responded liberally to the appeals of Mr. Bond, the rector of St. Andrew,—and the admiration every one had for her beauty, she would laugh in her strange manner, and say half under her breath:

"What matters it?"

This laughter of Mrs. Smith's was the only disagreeable thing about her, and Della wondered how a person whose voice was so musical, could have such a harsh, strident, and repellant laugh.

Aunt May was quite sure that Mrs. Smith was a celebrity.

Daily she scanned the personal gossip of all the newspapers to see if she could find some clue to the fascinating lady's personality; but all in vain.

One day Della, who was now on the most friendly terms with Mrs. Smith, ran over to the cottage at an unusual time; for in spite of their intimacy, Mrs. Smith was only visible at certain hours of the day. The man, who was butler and footman, and who assisted the coachman in the care of the grounds, was sweeping the front steps and the door stood open. Della who had a new book to show her friend, ran past him and into the house before he could detain her. Mrs. Smith was not in the library whose door was open, so Della ran through it and knocked lightly upon the door of Mrs. Smith's bedroom which was just behind it.

"Come," was the reply. Della ran into the room; but who was this that stood before the mirror, in a white dressing gown, her long black hair streaming down her back, while before her on the table, lay a gray wig, crimped and braided, like Mrs. Smith's own hair?

Pickings.

"I don't see how that dinged fire went out!" he said savagely, as he got out of bed to start it again. "I put on lots of kindling wood."

"Perhaps, John," suggested his wife, turning over luxuriously for another nap, "it went out by the fire escape."

They were talking about trees. "My favorite," she said, "is the oak. It is so noble, so magnificent in its strength. But what is your favorite?"

"Yew," he replied.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Don't Do It,

Said my physician, who for six months had doctored me for dyspepsia without success, when I told him I was going to try Sulphur Bitters, they will only make you worse. I did try them, and now I am a well man and can eat anything. Sulphur Bitters are a great foe to doctors.—George Bastett, N. Y. C. and H. R. Railroad.

A Husband's Mistake.

Husbands too often permit wives, and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such serious results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere say it gives universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Woodworth & Co., of Fort Wayne Ind.; Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. C. Wolf, Hillsdale, Mich.; and hundreds of others say "It is the greatest seller they ever knew." It contains no opiates. Trial bottles and fine book on Nervous Diseases, free at A. M. Bachelder & Co.

GAZETTE CHATTER.

IF I WERE.

If I were but a poet,
With a happy heart for song,
I'd sing of maids and pleasures,
In blithe and merry measures,
And care,—I should not know it,
I'd sing the whole day long,
If I were but a poet,
With a happy heart for song.

If only I had any
Of the daintiness and grace,
Of Herbert, polished poet,
Or Praed whose verses show it,
I'd sing to grey-eyed Annie;
Write a lyric on her smile,
If only I had any
Of their daintiness and style.

School Improvement.

J. W. Armington, the veteran teacher of the Hunt grammar school, has recently turned his attention to procuring sweet music, and some little time ago the residents of Ward 3 were invited to contribute toward the purchase of a piano. The necessary amount was quickly raised and the piano, with cover, bought and paid for. It was put in the school room last Wednesday. It was very gratifying to Mr. Armington that the contributions were so liberal. There was a small surplus which was returned to the donors.

They Do Not Advertise.

There is not a trade or calling that can be named to which the advertisement is not vitally serviceable.—Weekly Journalist.

O, yes, there is. How about the counterfeiter's trade, or the Tennessee Moonshiner's business?

Half the Road.

While bicyclists have no right to ride on the sidewalk, they are, according to Massachusetts law, entitled to half the road when they are on the right side. Bicycle riders are entitled to fair treatment.

Beyond Town Limits.

—The school census of Randolph just completed shows a decrease of nearly 100 since the last census and consequently one or more schools have been closed.

—Holbrook is disturbed by a gang of house-breakers, for the arrest and conviction of which the selectmen offer a reward of $400.

—The school committee of Medfield have courage equal to their convictions. Chief Wade of the district police ordered an expensive system of ventilation put in one of their school buildings. Believing the present system a satisfactory one, they have appealed to the board of health to annul the action of the inspector.

—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union intends to make a notable exhibit at the Exposition, which it can do quite easily, as the headquarters and chief officials of the National and World's Societies are already located in Chicago. The work in every country, state and department will be shown by means of reports, photographs, literature, a model creche, temperance hospital and cafe, and whatever else, will illustrate what the organization is accomplishing.

—The Russian artist, Verestchagin, the exhibitions of whose remarkable paintings in Boston a few months ago will be well remembered, has become insane.

—The streams of Sandwich are being stocked with trout by the state authorities, 10,000 young trout having been placed in the several streams of that town.

—Philanthropic citizens have presented the city of Taunton with a fine tract of four acres of land, and a public park is to be the result.

—Land is purchased on which to build, and Stoughton will soon have an Odd Fellows' building.

—Since the post office was established in Quincy in 1795, there have been 11 postmasters in the office. Postmaster Adams has succeeded in securing portraits of them all and they are now grouped in a frame and hang on the wall in that office. The longest continued service was that of Daniel French from 1825 to 1849.

—The new district court at Stoughton opened last week. A judge, two associate judges, a clerk of the court and a large number of citizens were present, but the only business before the court was one simple drunk. May it never be more.

—Quincy is fast approaching the limit of her city debt. It is now $226,530.40 and appropriations are under consideration which if passed will take the figures above the limit.

—The Commercial Club of Holbrook is considering the proposition of the U. S. Hose Nozzle and Coupling Co. of Syracuse N.Y., to transfer its business to that town, provided $15,000 of stock be taken by the people of the place and the company be given a factory 150 feet long by 35 wide and one story high, to employ from 100 to 150 hands. A committee has been appointed to investigate the matter. Weymouth might consider some of these offers to good advantage.

—A mass meeting was held at Hudson with the object to induce the John P. Lovell Arms Co. of Worcester, employing 600 hands, to locate in Hudson. The town hall was crowded and about $15,000 was pledged towards a fund which the town will offer them to come.

Why not offer inducements for them to come to Weymouth? It ought to be possible to influence the Lovells in favor of their old home with equal offers.

—Ward 24 of Boston, or Dorchester, thinks that by the recent redistricting of the state into congressional districts, it is badly left for years to come. The possibility of its being represented in congress by John L. Sullivan is too much to bear.

—The estate of the late P. T. Barnum inventories $4,279,532, as entered at the probate court in Bridgeport.

—The Brockton S. of V. were named for Capt. R. B. Grover. That gentleman now offers, that should the Camp number 100 members in good standing the first day of August next, to take the entire Camp to the G. A. R. encampment in Detroit at his own expense.

—The local police of Rockland are using wheelbarrows for patrol wagons and simple drunks are trundled to the lockup in a one wheel carriage.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by druggists, 75c. per bottle.

FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1891.

Note carefully the changes in the Old Colony time table and don't get left next Monday.

The strawberry festival season is now at its full height, and the material for its enjoyment is plenty and cheap.

The long waited for summer is here at last. This week opened warm and the mercury has continued to play among the eighties. Straw hats are in order.

No matter what an English lord may do he can always seek consolation by marrying a New York girl. A title is more sought after there than in London where they are more common.

Caterpillars are still on the rampage and greet us everywhere. Presidents and other officers of village improvement societies can hardly agitate a more important subject than a vigorous war on these pests. It is late now but be on time next year.

The administration may find it as difficult to decide what shall be done with the Chilian insurgent steamer Itata, as it was to get possession of her. The courts will have to decide the question and it would have been cheaper for Uncle Sam if she had been allowed to escape.

Presidents of banks carrying $40,000 in money and securities ought not to leave their bags in a sleeping car while they ride in the dining or smoking car. It is not always there when they get back, as was learned by E. D. Thayer, president of the Brandon, Vt., National Bank a few days since.

Dr. Brouardel of the French Academy of Medicine says, France loses 14,000 persons per annum from smallpox, whereas Germany loses only 110. The great difference in the mortality from this disease in the two countries is accounted for by the strict enforcement of vaccination in Germany, in contrast to the carelessness in regard to the same in France.

Royal prerogatives are not of much account in England judging from the catechising the Prince of Wales was forced to undergo from the lawyers in the Sir William Gordon Cumming trial. That England is tending strongly toward democracy is evident, and the exposures of this trial will not hinder that much-to-be-desired result. The Prince was stripped of his royal glamour and stood before his subjects only a man, and a disgraced man at that. The old-fashioned reverence for the king is becoming a thing of the past and with good Queen Vic's death it will be apt to end entirely in England.

Weymouth benefits largely by the new arrangement of trains, to take effect on Monday. In addition to a number of extra trains, all trains are made express from Braintree. The running time of some of these trains will be only 22 minutes to Weymouth and only 27 minutes to East Weymouth.

South Weymouth also shares in the general improvement granted to this section.

Quincy is, we learn, much dissatisfied with the arrangement, losing 18 trains daily by the numerous expresses which will pass her by without stopping.

The Legislature of 1891.

The legislature which closed its long session yesterday has accomplished a good deal of business and will probably rank with its predecessors as being up to the average in executive ability, and in the individual ability of its members. Much good work has been done and many beneficial laws enacted, notably in regard to the bond investment companies, electric lighting for towns, punishment for drunkenness, the redistricting of the state, and others of less importance. Among the important bills that failed of passage were the salary grab bill of the impecunious members, and the rapid transit scheme of the West End Co., to obtain control of the streets of Boston for thirty years. Take it all in all Massachusetts can look back with pride to the General Court of 1891, its doings, and what it left undone. We ascribe no small part in this result to the large minority of Democrats. It is noticeable, that in both State and National affairs, the nearer a balance of power is maintained between the two leading parties, the better the legislation enacted, and the more carefully all proposed legislation is watched.

We hope Massachusetts will always be a close state.

A Scheme that Deserves Encouragement.

We call special attention to the attempt to be made to create a boom in real estate in Weymouth as announced in the advertisement to be found elsewhere in this paper.

It is very rarely indeed that we feel the liberty to mention any advertisement in our editorial or news columns, for the reason that it is not right to give one advertiser undue prominence over another, but in this case it seems to us that the endeavors of the gentlemen will, if successful, result in what will prove a public benefaction and therefore it is for the interests of all that they receive every encouragement possible.

We have faith to believe that Weymouth has a future of life and progress, if the boom can only be started.

We understand that this Association proposes to operate in any or all parts of Weymouth and in East Braintree as well, and therefore the scheme should interest men (and women too) in all those sections.

More property to tax, lower taxes, and more business,—let this be our watchword on all occasions and an era of great prosperity will surely be soon inaugurated.

The names of the gentlemen concerned in forming the proposed Association will assure unlimited confidence in the project by those with money to invest, and the terms are so easy that almost any one earning good wages and who has a little nest egg of $100 saved up, can become a stockholder.

The Electric Railroad.

We have inquiries put to us upon every hand which are something like these: Where are the electric cars which were to be running in June? Where is that link that was to connect all parts of the town by means of cheap and easy transit from place to place?

The days roll by and there is as yet no perceptible materialization of any part of the promised road.

Companies in many of the surrounding towns are introducing this peculiarly modern method of locomotion and seem to be doing a good and profitable business with it. At Plymouth the road is receiving a patronage beyond the most sanguine expectations of its builders. Randolph is now in connection with Brockton and Campello, and the record of the road thus early is from three to six hundred passengers per day.

Weymouth has about double the population of either of these towns and a much greater need of traveling facilities between its parts,—in fact it is generally acknowledged that the town is at a standstill until this improvement is secured.

What is it that blocks the wheels of progress in this matter? Is it a lack of interest on the part of the citizens, or is it a lack of ability on the part of a company to fulfill the promises made at the Town meeting when the franchise was practically narrowed down to one company?

We believe that this town needs an electric railroad now more than it needs any other thing, and that such a railroad will prove to be paying property. We also believe that if one company cannot or will not put it in that there are others, or that others can be formed who can and will put it in with little or no delay.

We would prefer to see this road built with home capital, but if our capitalists, or the Weymouth and Hingham Co. dally with the project much longer, we believe in inviting outside capital to come in and build and equip the road.

Business Enough if it Could be Induced to Come Here.

FITCHBURG, June 6, 1891. An important bargain was concluded here today, which will add a new and conspicuous feature to the industrial resources of this city.

The Lovell Arms Company of Boston has purchased the real estate and mechanical plant of the Haywood Chair Company here, and propose to utilize it to its full capacity in the manufacture of their specialties, bicycles and firearms.

The real estate includes five acres of land beside the tracks of the Fitchburg railroad, with a spur track running to the works. The main building is 30x50 feet and two stories high. There are two storehouses 100x50 feet, an office building 75x50 feet, and two large stables, beside other outbuildings.

The original cost of the establishment was $300,000, and it furnishes facilities for the employment of 1,500 men.

As a beginning of the new enterprise it is expected the company will bring here the machinery and business of the Iver Johnson company of Worcester, and it is also expected that Mr. Johnson and Col. B. S. Lovell will erect residences here in the near future.—Boston Herald, June 7, 1891.

The above item clipped from last Sunday's Herald leads us to comment upon the singularity of the fact that while business firms in want of new locations are constantly announced by the daily papers as settling in this place or that,—in fact, while all around us towns and cities are growing rapidly,—that Weymouth does not feel her share of the boom.

Business is dull, very dull, and money is scarce. Grocery men and dealers of all kinds report "business light and collections hard."

The reasons for this stagnation in our business we are not intending to discuss at this time, further than to state that want of natural advantages is not one of them. We know of no town with any better facilities for accommodating a manufacturing business than Weymouth, and it seems as if her business men might induce some of these large concerns to come here if the proper effort was made.

But in the case above quoted the Messrs. Lovell are members of an old Weymouth family and at present are among our most honored residents. Although they could not be expected to bring matters of sentiment into their business affairs, it is safe to say that if the same encouragement could have been offered them here as elsewhere they would have preferred to move their business to Weymouth rather than to Fitchburg. Possibly in this instance the opportunity to purchase a large manufacturing property at a very low figure would have outweighed any ordinary or extraordinary inducements that could have been offered here, but the old iron foundry property at East Weymouth is a splendid manufacturing property for some business, and has a large and abundant water power, which of course is the cheapest of all powers, and it seems as if a proper amount of energy and work might bring us some one to make use of it.

The Weymouth Club might well take this subject into consideration and see if new business cannot be brought into the town. We must press forward or we shall certainly drift backward. The local improvement societies are all right in their way and it is very nice to have our villages beautified, but we must have enough business to support the people who live in these villages or it will be necessary for residents to leave their beautiful homes to seek their livelihood elsewhere.

Carpenters and Painters to Meet.

The Carpenters and Painters of Weymouth will hold a public meeting in Reynolds hall, East Weymouth, Monday evening, June 22. There will be able speakers: Bros. Lloyd and McKay of Carpenter's District Council; J. H. Thomas and C. H. Wiggins of the Painter's District Council.

The committee of arrangements are: N. J. Grant, C. Blakney, A. McRae, G. H. Lord and B. Y. Knight, carpenters; W. F. Burrell, T. L. Kennison and T. J. McCristle, painters.

Ladies are invited. Doors will open at 7 o'clock and speaking will begin at 7.45.

The Creed of Nationalism.

Weymouth Gun Club.

The Gun Club held another successful shoot last Saturday afternoon, the weather being fine. There was a large number of participants. On percentage of birds killed C. F. White was first with 76 per cent. F. Farrar secured second, 74 per cent., Barnes third, 66 per cent., Shaw fourth, 57 per cent., Patridge fifth, 50 per cent., Hobart sixth, Nash seventh, G. Farrar, eighth, Worthen ninth, Jacks tenth. The score:

3 pair doubles—Everett and Hobart 1st, C. F. White, F. Farrar, Shaw, Barnes, G. Farrar 2d, Nash and Worthen 3d.

5 birds—C. F. White and Jacks 1st, Barnes, Worthen, Partridge 2d, G. Farrar, F. Farrar, Nash 3d, Shaw, Hobart 4th.

10 Birds—F. Farrar 1st, Shaw, C. F. White 2d, Hobart, Partridge 3d, Jacks and Nash 4th.

10 Birds—C. F. White 1st, F. Farrar 2d, Hobart 3d, Nash 4th, Shaw, Partridge 5th, G. Farrar 6th.

10 Birds—Barnes, Shaw, F. Farrar 1st, C. F. White, Hobart 2d, Worthen 3d.

3 pair birds—Nash 1st, C. F. White and F. Farrar 2d, Shaw, Hobart 3d, Partridge 4th, G. Farrar, Worthen 5th.

10 Birds—C. F. White 1st, F. Farrar 2d, Partridge, G. Farrar 3d, Hobart, Nash 4th, Shaw 5th, Worthen 6th, Jacks 7th.

6 Birds—F. Farrar, C. F. White 1st, G. Farrar 2d, Nash 3d, Shaw, Worthen, Partridge 4th, Hobart 5th, Jacks 6th.

A Bereaved Family.

Hon. James H. Flint has been sadly bereaved recently by the loss of his mother, a most estimable lady and the nearly fatal sickness of his father, uncle, and aunt, all of whom resided together in Paper Mill Village, Middleton. Mrs. Flint was taken sick with the grippe on Wednesday but improved and was considered out of all danger, Saturday and Sunday, May 23 and 24; but on the following day, Monday, the disease developed into pneumonia and she grew rapidly worse until her death which occurred on Thursday, May 28. During this time Judge Flint's father and uncle and aunt were all prostrated with the grippe and so prevalent was the disease in the village that it was impossible to procure nurses or any help. Judge Flint was with them most of the time officiating as nurse and in various other capacities necessitated by the exigencies of the occasion. The other members of the family are now improving and no serious results are anticipated in their cases. Mrs. Flint was 68 years old. Funeral services were held Sunday, May 31. The family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sorrow.

Obituary—Mrs. Geo. S. Gove.

On Sunday, June 7, Mrs. Betsy T. wife of George S. Gove, after months of suffering, passed quietly away. Mrs. Gove having been an invalid for several years was seldom seen in society, but will none the less be missed by the large circle of friends by whom she was deeply loved.

The Saturday preceeding her death closed the fifty-fourth year since her marriage to the husband who still survives her. She bore her long suffering with that characteristic fortitude which comes to one who trusts in Him "who doeth all things well," and waited patiently for the messenger who would release her.

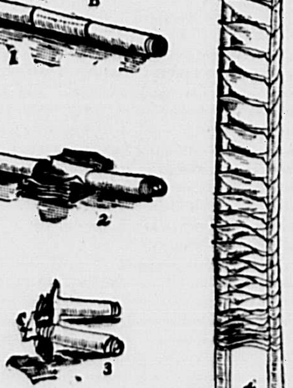

"When the messenger came she was ready to go;
Her countenance beaming with a Heavenly glow.
She had kept the faith, had fought the good fight,
And welcomed the dawn of Heavenly light."

The funeral services were held at her late residence Wednesday afternoon, Rev. B. F. Eaton, assisted by Rev. Oliver Huckel, officiating. The remains were borne to the village cemetery; Dana Smith, Harrington Smith, Elgard Lowry and W. P. Sanborn were the bearers.

DEVOTED TO THE ENTERTAINMENT OF BOYS AND GIRLS.

How to Make a Jacob's Ladder of Paper or Tracing Cloth, as Recently Told for the Benefit of the Youthful Readers of Wide Awake.

In the first place cut a strip of strong, smooth paper about six inches wide and perhaps a yard long. Wind this carefully around a lead pencil and gum down the end. Draw out the pencil, and you will have a hollow roll six inches long. Cut the roll crosswise about two-thirds of the way through in two places, as shown in Fig. 1, by a and b. The section in the middle between a and b ought to be about two inches long. Cut this middle section half way through lengthwise, as indicated by the dotted line in Fig. 1, and it will open out and look like Fig. 2. Bend the ends of the roll back as shown by Fig. 3, take hold of the first step which is marked c in Fig. 3, and pull the ladder out into shape as in Fig. 4.

MAKING A JACOB'S LADDER.

The transformation is really quite surprising. While smooth, firm paper will answer very well, the best material of which to make a Jacob's ladder is tracing cloth, as it is very strong, and being also very smooth pulls out and shuts up in a very fascinating way. Tracing cloth can be procured at any store where artists' materials are sold.

A True Tiger Tale.

Have you ever seen a cat catch a mouse and hand it over to her kittens, to teach them how to kill? Well, a tiger is merely a big cat, and she teaches her cubs almost in the same way, only not with mice. An East Indian officer witnessed a scene of this kind: An old bull bison had been the victim, and the tigress had disabled him by breaking one of his right fore legs just below the knee. She never touched the throat, the usual place of seizing, but allowed the cubs to worry the disabled animal. The eye witness relates that the cubs acted exactly like kittens, advanced and retreated, and worried the victim, all the time mewing and snarling, while the tigress sat near by watching their antics and occasionally giving the bison a blow with her paw when he showed undue activity. The officer shot the tigress and one of her cubs when his curiosity had been gratified, and he remarks that he could not help thinking, "Suppose it had been a human being on whom the cubs were practicing!" The supposition is an awful one, but it has doubtless been realized many times.

Jocko, the Monkey.

A friend of the writer owns a monkey which answers to the name of Jocko. The children of the house and Jocko are boon companions, and of a summer afternoon enjoy a frolic together upon the lawn. One day some one threw a match down, and the grass ignited, making a little blaze. Jocko saw it, stopped and looked, then glanced all around, and seeing a piece of plank not far off ran for it, crept cautiously to the fire, all the time holding the plank as a shield between himself and the flame, then threw the plank on the fire and pressed it down and extinguished it. What child could have reasoned better and done more? Although, perhaps, no danger could have come from the fire, still no one knows what the result might have been, and the monkey evidently believed that prudence is the better part of valor.

ONE NIGHT IN THE SCHOOL-ROOM.

One night in the school-room
The books on the shelves
Determined to hold
A convention themselves.
Down came a fierce Grammar
And rapped on the floor,
And of spellers and lexicons
Up leaped a score.

Then an Atlas demanded
What meant such a row!
And a French Reader answered,
First making a bow,
"It is time we should know
What the young people think
Their school-books are for,
When they blot us with ink,

"And tear out our titles,
And loosen our leaves,
Or pile us in heaps like
Disorderly sheaves.
We are worth better treatment,"
The Reader averred,
"And I," he said firmly,
"Resolve to be heard."

Then eight ranks of figures
Came marching along,
The tide of their plaint
Swelling out like a song.
"We are hated and scorned,"
Said a six and a five.
"Tis a wonder," chimed ten,
"That we're even alive."

A History next
Arose, solemn and grand,
With the air of a conqueror
Viewing the land.
"I confess," said the tome,
"To a certain contempt;
From troubles like yours
I am always exempt.

"If you interest the young,"
The big volume went on,
"They will haste to your tasks,
And obligingly con
Whatever you wish;
But a history, no doubt,
Is different from figures
That put a child out."

What might have been done
Had not morning appeared
I cannot conceive
Of the strange and the weird.
When nine o'clock came,
With the children themselves,
The books were all safe
In their nooks on the shelves.

Annual Supper of the South Weymouth Improvement Association.

About 250 members of the South Weymouth Improvement Association, ladies, and invited guests sat down to the annual supper in Fogg's Opera House, Tuesday evening. At 7.30 o'clock President E. B. Downs called the meeting to order and invited Rev. Henry C. Alvord to invoke the divine blessing.

After partaking of the abundant supplies of strawberries and cream, cake and ice cream, rolls and coffee, bananas, oranges, etc., which had been provided by the ladies, the president briefly outlined the work of the association during the decade of the existence, and introduced as the orator of the evening Hon. William E. Barrett of Melrose, speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

He indorsed the work of the association saying that in Melrose they had a similar one, and that he considered it an honor that their constitution had served as a model for the organization of the South Weymouth Society.

Referring to the new time-table of the O. C. R. R., he said that with increase of trains to and from Boston comes a decrease in town feeling, in the old neighborly interest in one another's welfare which exists in the typical New England village. Town division, while an excellent mode of advertising a place, he did not consider necessary for Weymouth with the wealth of memories connected with its more than two and a half centuries of corporate existence. Improvement associations must work to cultivate good citizenship which will work for the common good and the public welfare to counteract the tendency toward the division of the masses into classes, social, political and religious, whose influence should militate against the common weal. Incidentally Mr. Barrett complimented the Weymouth Gazette by saying that it was the best country paper he knew of.

The officers of the Improvement Associations and business clubs of Rockland, Abington, North Abington, Weymouth, North Weymouth, and East Weymouth had been invited to be the guest of the association and most of them were present. Among the absentees were Representative Z. L. Bicknell and Nathan D. Canterbury, Esq.

Short speeches were made by President C. B. Collins of the Rockland Commercial Club; President Augustus Wright of the Abington Business Club; President J. W. Armington of the Weymouth Improvement Association; I. M. Norcross, Esq., Superintendent of Schools, Weymouth; President J. W. Bartlett of the North Weymouth Improvement Association, and Judge George W. Kelley of Rockland.

The musical part of the programme was furnished by the Wildey Lodge orchestra, who generously volunteered their services to the association, and by the Turner family quartette of Rockland, Noah Turner, bass; his daughter, Mrs. Crocker, alto; her daughter, Miss Jennie Crocker, soprano; and Mr. Williamson, tenor. The singing of the old songs by this family quartette containing three generations was one of the features of the evening.

Six Miles an Hour is the Legal Limit of Speed.

Last Friday evening in response to the public notice given in these columns and by private invitation, about thirty horsemen assembled at the junction of Central and Pleasant streets.

After considerable preliminary adjustment of equine paraphernalia the procession started "around the square." The vigor with which this initiatory dash was executed was extremely suggestive of the entrance of a squadron of Cossacks into a hostile village, the realism of the performance being heightened by the martial music of the bugle blown by one of the leaders.

After time had been given for the straggler, who had been somewhat demoralized by the rapid pace of the outset, to take breath, the cavalcade of thirty-two, escorted by the bicyclists of the village, moved down Pleasant street to invade the quiet outlying hamlet of Lovell's Corner and to cause East Weymouth to tremble at this unannounced erruption of prancing steeds.

About two hours after the start the survivors returned claiming to have made the circuit of East Weymouth and the Landing. Not content with this, some of the more expert gave exhibitions of horsemanship to the populace between Independence and Columbian squares for some time longer, Long after they had retired one straggler came into the village who had dismounted at the Landing and had led his horse the rest of the way, believing that to be the more comfortable mode of locomotion.

Messrs. Mayberry and Rogers seem to be the most indefatigable riders as they were out again Saturday, and appear nearly every day. They have gained considerable reputation for horsemanship, and already have numerous engagements to break horses to the saddle and to ride hitherto unmounted steeds.

If those who participated in the first "meet" survive, it is proposed to repeat the performance and to form a regularly organized riding club. Members of this club will not be allowed to appear "bare-back," as did a portion of the riders last Friday. No event in recent times has so stirred to its depths the calm of South Weymouth as has this affair.

Teachers' Examination.

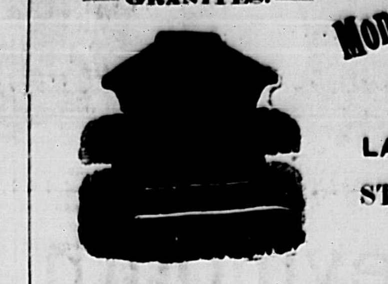

The annual examination of persons desiring to be considered applicants for positions in the Weymouth schools will be held at North High school, Weymouth, Saturday, June 13, at 9 o'clock. Members of the Training class, and persons now teaching who have taught less than a full year in town, will be expected to be present. Others desiring to take the examinations must communicate with the Superintendent before June 12.

BASE BALL.

North Weymouths vs. Beacons.

At the Sea street grounds, Saturday, the North Weymouths crossed bats with the Beacons of Hingham. The score, four to three in favor of the North Weymouths, was the result of a well played game. The Beacons had their regular battery while King of Holbrook and Bearce of East Weymouth served for North Weymouth. The following was the make up of the North Weymouths: King, p.; Hyland, 2b.; Woods, c.f.; Bearce, c.; F. Holbrook, 3b.; Mawn, s.s.; B. Holbrook, l.f.; Keefe, 1b.; Blanchard, r.f. From Saturdays game we are unable to judge the strength of the teams as far as the fielders are concerned, but the battery and basemen showed up well.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
North Weymouth,	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	1	1	—4

POINTS

—King's drop ball puzzled them all. As a young amateur he is a pitcher of note and the Old Spain boys will do well to retain him at any price.

—The St. John's of Quincy are after King and it is either Quincy or North Weymouth—Where is the most money?

—"Warry" played a good game behind the bat even if many tried to rattle him.

—The last man out on the Hinghams was disposed of by a genuine schoolboy's trick. Hyland held the ball at the second bag and when Mahaney of the Beacons stepped off the game was ended.

—Hyland although he did indulge in a clam bake in the morning put up a good game.

—Wood's stick work surpassed all other.

—It was a pitcher's game and King turned trump.

—The Beacons have a good captain. A gentleman is he on the field.

Wyomings vs. Institutes.

A crowd of about 500 people witnessed the game Saturday afternoon between the Institutes and the Wyomings of Melrose. The first inning was disastrous for the home team, the visitors making nine runs off Bagley's pitching in that inning. The new pitcher, Warren Hersey, went into the box in the second inning, and had he received any kind of decent support the home team would have been the winners even after the terrible rattling of the first inning. The score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Wyomings,	9	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	1	—12
Institutes,	2	1	0	2	2	2	0	0	0	—9

INSTITUTE BASE BALL GOSSIP.

If Hersey had been in the box the first inning the score might have been different.

Did you hear Asa? If not you missed it.

Marions vs. Sapphires.

The game of last Saturday on the Lake street grounds was a walkover for the Marions. Following is the score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Marions,	6	5	4	0	2	3	1	0	2	—23
Sapphires,	0	0	1	1	0	0	2	0	4	—8

The batting of Lynch and Donahoe of the Marions and P. Casey of the Sapphires were the strong features of the game.

The Young Men's Social Club will play the St. Mary's of West Quincy at that place on Saturday and the Marions will put up a good game on the Lake street grounds.

Business Notices.

[Notices under this heading, 3 lines or less, 25 cents.] [Each additional line, 5 cents.]

—It is only a few days ago since the trunk lines and their connections fixed the rate to St. Paul and return at $29.50 on the occasion of the holding of the annual convention of the Christian Endeavor societies, which takes place there in July next. Now the Boston & Maine and its connections comes to the front and offers a rate of only $20.50 from Boston to St. Paul by any of their various routes, with the privilege of returning via through car routes. At the same time the sleeping car rate has been fixed at only $4. This rate is shorn of all emoluments, commission, etc., which in the case of the other lines are paid out of their $29.50 rate, presumably to parties who may be interested in getting up the excursions. At the same time, if a sufficient number of people signify their intention to go via any of the Boston & Maine routes, a special train of dining and sleeping cars will be run, leaving Boston July 6, affording excursionists a view of the White Mountains at sunset, and arriving at St. Paul on Wednesday a. m., in time for the opening of the Christian Endeavor convention, on the afternoon of that day. Under the operation of the interstate commerce law this reduced rate cannot be confined to the Christian Endeavor Society but is open to the general public. With such unprecedented low rates the convention this year bids fair to be an unqualified success. Meanwhile New England Agent Miles and his assistants are lustily singing:

Where are you going, my pretty maid,
To the Endeavor Convention, sir, she said;
They tell me the rates are extremely low,
Only $20.50, if by the Maine you go.

—A. E. Richards & Co. have just cleaned the Knights of Pythias' carpet and it was put down yesterday looking "as fresh as a daisy."

—Don't forget that the best place in East Weymouth to get your hair cut or a shave is at the new rooms of J. J. Lawler & Co., in Gardner's Block, Jackson square.

Musicale.

The recital by the pupils of Miss M. Abbie Rogers in Odd Fellows Hall last Friday evening was listened to and enjoyed by a full house. As a rule, such recitals become monotonous before reaching the end of the long programme, but on this occasion there was sufficient variety in the selections and life in the execution to keep the large audience interested and entertained to the end.

The first number was a piano duet by Misses Daisy Pratt and Lottie Randall. Miss Gertrude Bartlett followed with a piano solo, and she was followed in succession by a solo by Miss Fannie Raymond; Misses Ryan (Ethel and Gertrude) in a duet; Miss Yelma Browne, Miss Belle Newton and Miss Emma Pratt in solos, Misses Grace Lovell and Belle Newton in a duet; Master Percy Shaw in one of his best violin solos; piano solos by Misses Mary Marden and Grace Rich; piano duet by Misses Grace Tilden and Abbie Bates; solos by Misses Bessie Tower and Lottie Randall; Misses Gertrude Stirkler and Florence Pratt in a duet.

A very pleasing deviation was here made by the introduction of Miss Etta Joy in the song "Fleeting Days," which was heartily applauded. Miss Lucie Litchfield continued the programme with a solo, and Misses Abbie Bates, Annie Dyer and Hattie Thayer each in turn played solos.

The programme was again varied by a cornet solo by Miss Stirckler, after which Miss Clara Newton gave a piano solo followed by Florence Pratt and Annie Dyer in the closing numbers of the list, and the end had come and the audience went away quite pleased with what their eyes had seen and ears heard, with this one exception, that some had heard that this was Miss Rogers' last recital and as an entertainer of the public and a conscientious teacher she will be much missed.

New Club.

In response to a call issued early in the week, Engine Hall at East Weymouth was well filled last night with leading business men and citizens, for the purposes of organizing a Commercial Club to promote the interests of the place. Dr. Joseph Chase was elected chairman and W. C. Earl, secretary.

The meeting was addressed by E. G. Cutter, D. M. Easton, N. D. Canterbury; C. H. Burdette, F. D. Thayer and G. M. Hoyt. Much interest was manifested in the enterprise.

Steps toward a permanent organization were taken by the appointment of Dr. Jos. Chase, E. G. Cutter and C. H. Burdette to draft Constitution and By-Laws, and W. T. Rice, D. M. Easton, E. G. Bates, F. D. Thayer and R. T. Shaw to submit a list of permanent officers to be balloted for at the next meeting, which will be held in the same place Thursday evening, the 18th.

Fourth of July.

As there is an urgent demand for a celebration of the Fourth of July in the village of Weymouth and East Braintree, the self constituted committee of last year has been called upon to call a meeting and make arrangements for the same. A meeting will be held on Monday evening next, at Engine hall, 7.30 o'clock. The committee has a fund, deposited in the bank, that was left over from last year's celebration, and is ready to turn it over for the same purpose this year. If sufficient money can be obtained it is proposed to have an horrible procession, games, sports, a band concert and fireworks. The committee urge all to be present and arrange for a proper celebration of the day.

Buttons.

"When is a button not a button?" is the conundrum to which an answer has been attempted by certain firms of importers. They maintained that a button was not a button when its middle had not been pierced with the holes necessary for attaching it by threads to the surface of cloth or other dress goods—in other words, that no button is whole without holes. It has just been officially declared, however, by the Board of General Appraisers that a button is a button, hole or no hole.

A Safe and Profitable Investment

On the evening of June 9th a meeting was held in the hall over the Union Bank, in response to a call signed by Francis Ambler, T. A. Watson, Wm. H. Clapp, John J. Loud, Chas. T. Crane, James H. Flint, Chas. P. Hunt, Frank H. Mason, John B. Rhines and others, to consider the expediency of organizing a

Or in land to be improved and sold, as may seem best for the interests of the Association, which has in view also the IMPROVEMENT OF THE TOWN, by the opening up of land for building purposes, tastefully laying out streets, squares, small parks, etc.

The meeting unanimously decided to organize such an association and appointed Wm. H. Clapp, Frank H. Mason and Chas. P. Hunt a committee to receive subscriptions for shares of stock. In furtherance of this object subscriptions will be received by the undersigned for shares, until June 22d at which time another meeting will be called, the organization perfected. by the adoption of articles of association, election of officers, etc. As the number of shares for sale is limited to fifty, it is expected they will be quickly taken, so that any one wishing to invest will do well to send in his name early, as, first come, first served, will be the motto. Any further information will be furnished by applying to either member of the committee., who do not hesitate to recommend this as a safe and profitable investment. No money will be received until the shares are all taken and the proper officers are appointed to receive it.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Railroad at Canajoharie, N. Y.

Guaranteed Cure for La Grippe.

We authorize our advertised druggists to sell you Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with la grippe and will use this remedy according to directions, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We make this offer, because of the wonderful success of Dr. King's New Discovery during last season's epidemic. Have heard of no case in which it failed. Try it. Trial bottles free at the drug stores of A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth; E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look; if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look, and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and tonic, acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches, boils, and gives a good complexion. Sold at the drug stores of A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth; E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth. 50c. per bottle.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

Commander Hayward Sick.

Postmaster C. W. L. Hayward has been under the weather the past fortnight, the result of hardships and privations endured in Andersonville prison, that bane of so many Union soldier's lives. He turned out with Reynolds Post 58, G.A.R., Memorial Day, contrary to the advice of his physician and the exertion was too much for his impaired health. His hosts of friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Braintree.

Founder's Day.

The annual Founder's Day exercises of Thayer Academy, which usually come on the 9th of June, were observed on Saturday last, the 6th. Since the founding of this noble institution, it has been customary for the Senior Middle class to have charge of all the exercises connected with the proper observance of the Founder's birthday. The programme consists of a very high order of addresses and declamations which are delivered to a very select audience composed of the best people of this and neighboring towns and cities.

One very pretty feature is the planting of the ivy by the class at the front of the building, and while the audience have adjourned to witness the planting of the ivy the hall is cleared for dancing which follows for the remainder of the afternoon.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

One Woman Who Had Plenty of Business Talent.

In a dispatch to The New York World is an interesting story about Mrs. M. V. Taylor, of Washington, Pa., a dealer in oil well castings. Mrs. Taylor was a widow with a child to support. She learned bookkeeping and got a place with an oil firm. While with them she obtained a thorough knowledge of oil well supplies. She had an eye to advancing herself in business as well as keeping books, and took a contract for furnishing the casing to drill a well, in consideration of which she got a sixth interest in the well. But the company fell through, and Mrs. Taylor was left with the expensive casing on her hands. But well casings were scarce just then, and the shrewd woman sold hers for more than she paid for it. With that rare gift for looking ahead which is given to about one person in half a million, Mrs. Taylor saw that hundreds of wells would be drilled and more casings would be wanted than could be supplied, so she bought a large quantity of this particular machinery, all she could get, sold it at a great profit and made her fortune.

Women always keep their old love letters. It is a dangerous practice, but they will do it. The Vienna Allgemeiner Zeitung says there is a woman not far from that city who is undoubtedly 114 years old. The birth records, so carefully kept in European countries, show her to have been born in December of the year American independence was declared. Yet when the census taker visited her and naturally stopped to have a little chat, she showed her first love letter, yellow with age, which she had kept a century, having received it when she was 14 years old. How like a woman!

It is said privately that it was the woman suffrage party which defeated Senator Ingalls. Many months ago the message was sent quietly from one woman's club to another in Kansas, "Do all you can against Senator Ingalls." The work was as quiet as the message itself, but it is claimed that it was effective. In the farmers' organizations women have almost as much influence as the men themselves. Perhaps the caustic tongued statesman will one day learn that it is not wise to antagonize even the women.

Women are the ones to right their own wrongs. If they cannot do it they do not yet deserve to have them righted.

Among the war correspondents during the Indian ourbreak was one woman, Bright Eyes, a half breed Indian lady, who held her own with the best. She represented The Omaha World-Herald.

Emma Abbott owed her rise and success in life to women, yet she left not a penny to help other forlorn and struggling women up in the world. Perhaps she would have done so if she had lived longer and thought more deeply on the woman question.

I commend especially to the attention of women this paragraph from an address by Cardinal Gibbons:

It seems to me that some writers are disposed to lay undue stress on the amiable and tender qualities of Mary and of holy Christian women, without dwelling sufficiently on the strong and robust points of their character. The Holy Scripture in one place pronounces a lengthened eulogy on woman. What does the Holy Ghost especially admire in her? Not her sweet and amiable temper or her gentle disposition, though of course she possessed those qualities. No; he admires her valor, courage, fortitude and the sturdy virtue of self reliance. He does not say, "Who shall find a gentle woman?" but rather, "Who shall find a valiant woman? As things brought from afar and from the uttermost coasts is the price of her." It is only heroic virtues, or virtues practised in an heroic degree, that the church canonizes.

Miss Walford is an English girl who has become an expert in deciphering old English manuscript. Her services are in great demand among British lawyers, who in their search for legal precedents are obliged sometimes to go back to manuscripts of the Thirteenth century. In a famous church suit recently the lawyers on both sides of the case were obliged to call on Miss Walford.

I do not know who wrote the following, but it is as beautiful as it is true:

More and more do those who were perhaps first interested in the cause of woman's emancipation, with a desire to remedy this or that specific wrong, come to feel that there is underlying this movement a great spiritual truth, and that the freedom of woman is equally essential to the development of both halves of the race. The interests of men and women never have been and never can be antagonistic.

A remarkable character is Rocky Mountain Kate, of Leadville, Colo. If she ever had any other name it is forgotten. She wears a man's cowhide boots, a world too wide for her, and an old gingham sun bonnet. Her occupation is house cleaning, and we are given to understand she does it well. When she does a day's cleaning she takes home with her broken victuals from the table at the mansion where she toiled in the sweat of her brow. This keeps her in food. Kate also takes home with her cast off garments which charitable ladies give her on her house cleaning rounds. This is very kind of the ladies, and it is doubtful if Kate has had a really new gown in twenty years, so they say. But there is another part to this honest toiler's story. Rocky Mountain Kate has an income of $1,000 a month from houses in Leadville, and a large amount of property in Denver besides, all amassed from her little savings in the washing and house cleaning business.

Women do not drink or smoke. But I sometimes think the petty personal gossip which forms so large a part of the conversation of some of them is worse than smoking, especially when the gossip becomes spiteful and of a criticising kind. Then it certainly hurts themselves worse than smoking would do. Girls, if you cannot talk anything except personalities don't talk at all.

A newspaper tells us all about the admirable qualifications of Mrs. Potter Palmer to be the president of the women's board of managers of the Chicago exposition. We are informed that her eyes are coal black, shaded by long lashes, and that her teeth are very white and regular. Her hair was once blue black, but is now changing to gray. What splendid intellectual and business qualifications these are, to be sure!

Always Have a "Leader."

The merchant who would secure and hold a large custom should make it a point to always have some "leader"—something he can recommend as unusually good value for the money, or unusually desirable for some reason. Customers may come to buy the "leader," on which the margin of profit is apt to be quite narrow, but a good salesman can usually succeed in "broadening the horizon" of the average purchaser, if he once gets him in hand, and has honest goods and plenty of them in sufficient variety. Leave some advertising to be done after the customer enters the store.

A Point for the Advertiser.

Pay your readers the compliment of assuming that they will understand what you have to say to them, even if it be technical. If you make or sell first class dry goods tell where yours differ from any one else's, point out how to tell good cloth or lace or whatever you sell. Show the economy in buying the kind that you carry, or, if you carry more than one grade, of buying the best.—Polytechnic in the Office.

IN THE SEPOY WAR.

RELIEF OF THE LUCKNOW GARRISON BY GENERAL HAVELOCK.

He Fought His Way Through the Mutineers' Lines, Carrying Strength and Hope to the Imprisoned—Re-enforcements Followed and Massacre Averted.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

LUCKNOW, the capital of the British department of Oude and the seat of the chief commissioner, fell before the mutinous sepoys May 24, 1857. The commissioner, Sir Henry Lawrence, fortified the residency and a considerable space around it preparatory to a siege, pending the arrival of relief from some regular British troops. Early in July Sir Henry was mortally wounded, and the news reached Gen. Havelock at the close of a successful campaign, ending with the recovery of Cawnpore July 17. Cawnpore was the nearest British station to Lucknow, and forty-two miles distant. Havelock set out at once with 1,500 men.

The rebellious sepoys did not purpose to allow Havelock a simple march between Cawnpore and Lucknow. He fought two battles successfully, and then that summer pest of India, the cholera, set in, and in a few days his effective force was reduced to 1,000 men. On the 12th of August he attacked and routed an overwhelming force of rebels that were lying in wait to attack him. The victory cost him 140 men, and, warned by his experiences on the first ten miles of march, he decided to return to Cawnpore. On the 16th he fought a large body of sepoys under the chief rajah of the district, Nana Sahib, drove them off, and then gave his army a month's rest. During this interval Cawnpore was placed in a state of defense, so as to be held by a small garrison while the main army was marching upon Lucknow.

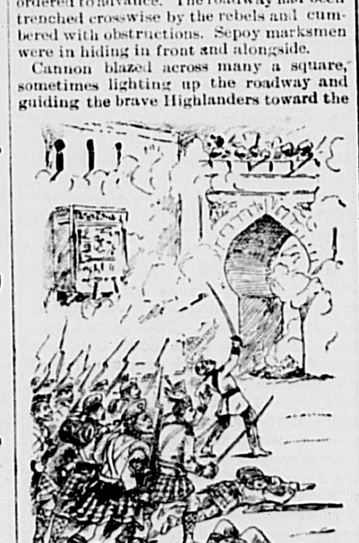

Meanwhile the situation at Lucknow was critical in the extreme. The besieged at the residency numbered 900 Europeans and 700 loyal natives. They occupied the residency and outbuildings and were completely surrounded, the rebels mustering about 50,000. The latter maintained a continual fire upon the residency, and in time compelled the evacuation of the upper portion. They also ran mines beneath the outbuildings and occasionally stormed the intrenchments. These tactics were adopted by the wily rebels in order to wear out the endurance of the imprisoned men. In addition to overwork, fighting, exposure and insufficient food, the besieged went through a season of cholera and other diseases.

For some days at the beginning of the siege the sepoy fire caused an average loss to the besieged of ten daily. Intrenching tools were scarce in the British camp, and the few that could be secured were ultimately carried off by deserting laborers. On the 24th of July a spy from Havelock's camp reached the residency with intelligence that a relief force was marching up from Cawnpore, and for thirty-five days an anxious vigil was maintained to note the approach of succor. The lookout was stationed on the tallest building within the British inclosure, and in the range, of course, of hostile fire. The unequal contest raged without intermission for weeks, or until the coming of Havelock on the rebel rear. Then a large force was drawn from the ranks of the besiegers to form a line facing the other way.

On the 23d of September Havelock arrived within cannon sound of Lucknow, and ordered a royal salute fired to announce his presence, and it was heard by the beleaguered garrison with joy. But the entrance to Lucknow was not to be cheaply won. The sepoys had placed cannon to sweep every bridge and exposed crossing and the buildings swarmed with sharpshooters. The 23d, 24th and 25th were passed in continuous fighting in the streets and outlying villages, and on the evening of the last day the head of column rested under the shelter of an Indian palace, 500 yards distant from the British inclosure around the residency.

The Seventy-eighth Highlanders were ordered to advance. The roadway had been trenched crosswise by the rebels and cumbered with obstructions. Sepoy marksmen were in hiding in front and alongside.

Cannon blazed across many a square, sometimes lighting up the roadway and guiding the brave Highlanders toward the goal. The leader of the line, Gen. Neill, was killed, and the men halted to wreak vengeance upon the sepoys in the building whence the fatal shot came. But Havelock was at the front and gave the word to press on. On they went, charging and cheering, to the very gate of the besieged residency. The joyous welcome has been celebrated in song and story. Relief, long prayed for, long expected, was at hand.

The wounded and sick soldiers and the women and children of the united columns numbered 1,500, and there were not sufficient carriages to remove them in the event of opening the road back to the Ganges at Cawnpore. But the relief column added new blood to the defense. The loyal natives in the garrison were on the point of deserting on account of the privations and rigors of the protracted siege. Even with the aid of friendly sepoys the garrison had not been sufficient to properly man the lines. These were already so contracted that the rebel batteries were within 600 yards of the residency and the quarters.

The morning after his arrival Havelock took the aggressive, and by several bold sorties cleared the rebels away from a space over a thousand yards in length between the residency inclosure and the city on one side, and as far as the river Gumti on the rear. Many rebel batteries were spiked and the gunners bayoneted, and in this way the dangerous fire of some of the nearest cannon was silenced and the besieged secured greater freedom. In the territory retaken by these sorties many mines were found ready for loading. One of them had already reached as far as the principal defensive work, and a delay of a day in the arrival of Havelock might have placed the besieged in the power of the cruel sepoys.

But if Havelock had missed the chief mark at Cawnpore, and had brought something short of complete salvation to the distressed garrison of Lucknow, his daring work had turned the tide in India and broken the backbone of the mutiny. He had proved that Europeans could battle with summer heat, disease, and every other hardship of a campaign in the tropics and whip the sepoys against odds. All India rang with his praises, and the small garrisons at the several stations could look without flinching at the enormous numbers of rebels around them, counting upon a day of reckoning when the English soldiery should get to work. Early in November Gen. Sir Colin Campbell marched on Lucknow from Cawnpore with about 5,000 European and loyal native soldiers. On the evening of the 15th he signaled to the garrison that he was at hand. The next morning the fighting began, watched from the roofs of the garrison buildings with painful interest. The road was cleared by Sir Colin's artillery until he reached an immense garden called Sekundur Bagh. The inclosure stood in his pathway, and was surrounded by a high wall of solid masonry loopholed for rifles. At this point the rattle of musketry began. British cannon were brought up within forty yards and the wall was breached. Through small openings a handful of men entered, and with the bayonet cleared the way for others. The astonished rebels threw down their arms and begged for mercy, but in vain. Bayonet, rifle and revolver did their bloody work until every sepoy in the garden had been slaughtered. Two thousand rebel bodies were removed from the inclosure. On the 17th the last sepoy position fell, and on the 19th all the non-combatants of the garrison were removed by stealth. Soon after reaching Sir Colin's main encampment, Gen. Havelock fell ill, and on the 24th he died. Sir Colin brought to his bedside news of his elevation of the order of Bath and congratulations for having first carried relief to Lucknow. GEORGE L. KILMER.

"DINNA YE HEAR THE SLOGAN."

THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW.

Oh! that last day in Lucknow fort;
We knew that it was the last,
That the enemy's mines had crept surely in
And the end was coming fast.

To yield to that foe meant worse than death,
And the men and we all worked on;
It was one day more of smoke and roar,
And then it would all be done.

There was one of us, a corporal's wife,
A fair, young, gentle thing,
Wasted with fever in the siege,
And her mind was wandering.

She lay on the ground in her Scottish plaid,
And I took her head on my knee;
"When my father comes home frae the plow," she said,
"Oh! please then, waken me."

She slept like a child on her father's floor
In the flecking of woodbine shade,
When the house dog sprawls by the half open door,
And the mother's wheel is staid.

It was smoke and roar and powder stench,
And hopeless waiting for death;
But the soldier's wife, like a poor tired child,
Seemed scarce to draw her breath.

I sank to sleep, and I had my dream
Of an English village lane
And wall and garden, till a sudden scream
Brought me back to the rear again.

There Jessie Brown stood listening,
And then a broad gladness broke
All over her face, and she took my hand
And drew me near and spoke:

"The Highlanders! Oh! dinna ye hear
The slogan far awa'?
The McGregor's! Ah! I ken it weel;
It is the grandest of them a'.

"God bless the bonny Highlanders;
We're saved! we're saved!" she cried,
And fell on her knees, and thanks to God
Poured forth like a full flood tide.

Along the battery line her cry
Had fallen among the men,
And they started, for they were there to die;
Was life so near them, then?

They listened for life, and the rattling fire
Far off, and the far off roar
Were all; and the colonel shook his head,
And they turned to their guns once more.

Then Jessie said: "The slogan's dune;
But can ye no hear them noo?
The Campbells are comin'! It's nae a dream;
Our succors ha'e broken through!"

We heard the roar and the rattle afar,
But the pipers we could not hear;
So the men plied their work of hopeless war,
And knew that the end was near.

It was not long ere it must be heard,
A shrilling, ceaseless sound;
It was no noise of the strife afar,
Or the sappers under ground.

It was the pipe of the Highlanders,
And now they played "Auld Lang Syne;"
It came to our men like the voice of God,
And they shouted along the line.

And they wept and shook each other's hands,
And the women sobbed in a crowd,
And every one knelt down where we stood,
And we all thanked God aloud.

That happy day when we welcomed them in Our men put Jessie first;
And the general took her hand, and cheers
From the men like a volley burst.

And the pipers' ribbons and tartan streamed,
Marching round and round our line;
And our cheerful cheers were broken with tears,
And the pipers played "Auld Lang Syne."

—Robert Lowell.

Gypsum for Clover.

The plants that derive profit from gypsum include all known to the agriculturist, but some more than others profit by the fertilizer, says American Cultivator. Clover stands at the head of the list as one responding quickly to the application, and it will often make all the difference between a good and a bad crop of clover whether the gypsum has been applied. One hundred pounds of land plaster to the acre, sown broadcast, will prevent a clover patch from being burnt up by a dry spell, and 200 pounds spread over the fields beforehand will give the clover a splendid start. It may be sown at seeding time, or when the plants are up, but the former method seems preferable, for it will then enable the plants to get a good catch. Gypsum is thus made the foundation of a good crop of clover, and if the young crop is threatened by a drought gypsum can come in as a topdressing. Even during very severe droughts land plaster will avert direful calamity in the clover field if applied early enough, says the authority quoted.

Bee Gleanings.

At a recent meeting at St. Catherine's, Ont., a vote was taken on the question of outdoor versus indoor wintering of bees. The majority favored packing on summer stands.

Mr. Thomas G. Newman urges on the readers of The American Bee Journal the importance of their making bee and honey exhibits at the agricultural fairs, and gives some very good reasons for so doing. There is no doubt about the attractiveness to the average fair goer of bees in glassed hives and honey in glass crates.

If separators are to be used, which shall they be, wood or tin? I believe the general decision is that tin is preferable with wide frames, and wood with the T supers, says a correspondent in The Beekeepers' Review.

"Ripe" honey is honey which has by evaporation become sufficiently thick to be sealed in the cell.

The queen cells are elongated and are the ones in which queens are reared.

Root tells that the slatted honey board is now scarcely ordered, and he has almost ceased making them. Fixed distances and thick top bars are running it out entirely. Of course queen excluding honey boards are as popular as ever.

A tested queen is one whose progeny has been examined and found pure.

A separator is a strip or piece of tin or wood placed between section boxes to insure straight combs.

Swimming Baths for Children.

It is now generally agreed that young children should not be taught to swim, as they are so susceptible to fatigue and cold and so generally impressionable. Up to two or three years, prolonged immersion in cold or even warm water is not safe. Much, however, depends on the temperament of the child in question; if placid, fearless and healthy he might occasionally be given a swimming lesson, but he should not remain in the water at first more than six or eight minutes, nor should he be given a lesson oftener than once a week, or at most twice.

Should he show dread of the water and cry or struggle much, he should not be taken to it a second time till the summer of the next year; the most serious results might otherwise be the consequence. Should he be cold after immersion, restless, or lose his appetite, that, too, would be an indication to be careful. A wise and thoughtful parent will learn as quickly as any doctor what the little fellow can or cannot safely bear.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Oil of turpentine, or benzine, will remove spots of paint or varnish from cotton or woolen goods. They should be washed in soapsuds after the application.

AT CHICAGO IN '93

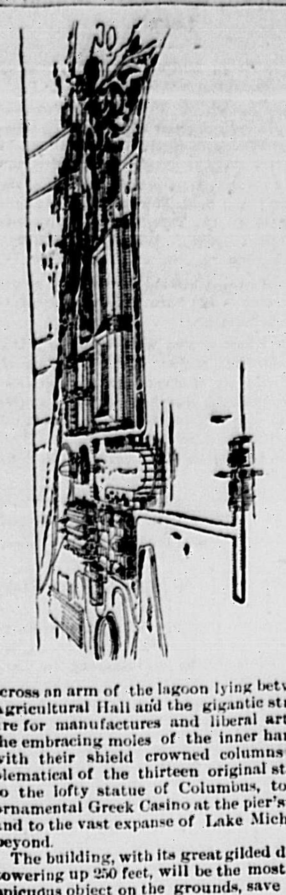

The Magnificence of the Display Can Now Be Appreciated.

THE STUPENDOUS STRUCTURES.

The Various Buildings Will Present All Ancient and Modern Styles of Architecture, and the Arrangements for Visitors Will Be More Convenient Than in Any Previous World's Fair.

It is at last possible to form some idea of the magnificence of the World's Columbian Exposition as it will appear in May, 1893. By common consent the buildings which have been designed to house the various exhibits have been termed palaces, a title which their magnificent proportions and artistic lines have fully earned. It is doubtful if such an aggregation of palatial structures has ever been gathered together within such a compass. Seven stupendous buildings, any one of which will cover more ground than the national Capitol at Washington, monuments alike to the genius of the architects as well as the progress of national architecture, fitting temples in which to celebrate the anniversary of an event of unequaled importance in the history of the western continent—such will be the World's Fair edifices at Chicago in 1893.

The birdseye view herewith presented gives a fair idea of what the Exposition will look like. The grouping of the buildings, which was the work of Mr. John W. Root, consulting architect of the board, has been pronounced perfect.

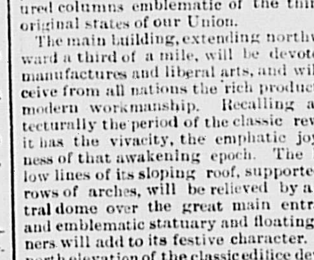

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF EXHIBITION.

Ex-President Gage, in his annual address to the shareholders of the Illinois corporation, thus referred to the general layout of the fair grounds and buildings:

By reason of the greater picturesqueness of a lake shore site, and the superior accessibility of Jackson Park, both by water and land, and for the additional reason that, being now for the most part unimproved, it is more readily adaptable to our purposes, Jackson Park has been chosen as the principal site of the fair.

The eighty acres at the north which are now laid out and under cultivation form but a small fraction of the entire area of this park, which extends a mile farther south, broadening constantly along the curving shore of the lake. In this unimproved portion, much of which is thickly wooded with native trees, the ground is being prepared for a system of lagoons and canals from 100 to 300 feet wide, which, with the broad, grassy terraces leading down to them, will pass the principal buildings, inclose a wooded island 1,800 feet long, and form a circuit of three miles navigable by pleasure boats.

MINES BUILDING.

These canals, which will be crossed by many bridges, will connect with the lake at two points; one at the southern limit of the present improved portion of the park, and the other more than half a mile farther south, at the great main court of the Exposition. At this point, extending eastward into the lake 1,200 feet, will be piers which will afford a landing place for the lake steamers, and inclose a harbor for the picturesque little pleasure boats of all epochs and nations which will carry passengers along the canals, stopping at numerous landing places.

This harbor will be bounded on the east, far out in the lake, by the long columned facade of the Casino, in whose free spaces crowds of men and women, protected by its ceiling of gay awnings, can look east to the lake and west to the long vista between the main edifices, as far as the gilded dome of the Administration Building. The first notable object in this vista will be the colossal Statue of Liberty rising out of the lagoon at the point where it enters the land, protected by moles which will carry sculptured columns emblematic of the thirteen original states of our Union.

The main building, extending northwestward a third of a mile, will be devoted to manufactures and liberal arts, and will receive from all nations the rich products of modern workmanship. Recalling architecturally the period of the classic revival, it has the vivacity, the emphatic joyousness of that awakening epoch. The long, low lines of its sloping roof, supported by rows of arches, will be relieved by a central dome over the great main entrance, and emblematic statuary and floating banners will add to its festive character. The north elevation of the classic edifice devoted to agriculture will show a long arcade behind Corinthian columns, supporting a series of triple arches and three low graceful domes.

The lofty octagonal dome of the Administration Building forms the central point of the architectural scheme. Rising from the columned stories of its square base 250 feet into the air, it will stand in the center of a spacious open plaza, adorned with statuary and fountains, with flower beds and terraces, sloping at the east down to the main lagoon. North of the plaza will be the two buildings devoted to Mines and Electricity, the latter bristling with points and pinnacles, as if to entrap from the air the intangible elements whose achievements it will display.

South of the plaza will be Machinery Hall, with its power house at the southeast corner. A subway at the west will pass under the terminal railway loop of the Illinois Central road to the circular Machinery Annex within. North of this railway loop, and along the western limit of the park, will be the Transportation Building. Still farther north, lying west of the north branch of the lagoon, will extend the long, shining surfaces and the gracefully curving roof of the Crystal Palace of Horticulture.

Following the lagoon northward one will pass the Women's Building, and eastward will reach the island devoted to the novel and interesting Fisheries Exhibit, shown in an effective, low roofed Romanesque structure, flanked by two vast circular aquaria, in which the spectator can look upward through clear waters and study the creatures of ocean and river. This building will be directly west of the northern opening of the system of lagoons into Lake Michigan, and in a straight line with the Government Building and the Main Building, which extend along the lake shore to the southeast.

North of the lagoon which bounds this fisheries island lies the present improved portion of Jackson Park, which will be reserved for the buildings of the states and of foreign governments. The Illinois Building will occupy a commanding position here, its classic dome being visible over the long lagoon from the Central Plaza. Along the Midway Plaisance will be placed a number of special exhibits like the historical series of human dwellings, reproductions of famous streets, etc., and it is probable that some of these may overflow into Washington Park. At the junction of the Midway Plaisance with Jackson Park is the site chosen for the Proctor Tower, which, rising 1,100 feet in the air, will command a majestic view of the beautiful grounds and buildings brilliant with light and color, and the great city lying between boundless levels of land and sea.

THE PROCTOR TOWER.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.

The most imposing and beautiful of all the great palaces to be erected on the World's Fair grounds will be the Administration Building. It will be the most ornate, and, in proportion to its size, much the most costly of them all. Standing on high ground in the center of a grand court formed by Machinery Hall on the south, the twin buildings for electricity and mines on the north, and on the west the great transportation loop encircling the mammoth Machinery Annex, it will command a magnificent view eastward, across an arm of the lagoon lying between Agricultural Hall and the gigantic structure for manufactures and liberal arts to the embracing moles of the inner harbor, with their shield crowned columns emblematical of the thirteen original states, to the lofty statue of Columbus, to the ornamental Greek Casino at the pier's end, and to the vast expanse of Lake Michigan beyond.

The building, with its great gilded dome, towering up 250 feet, will be the most conspicuous object on the grounds, save only the Proctor Tower, a mile or more to the northward, and from it the view to the eastward will be unquestionably the most beautiful which the Exposition will afford.

Richard M. Hunt, of New York, president of the American Institute of Architects, and also of the board of World's Fair architects, is the designer. It is the unanimous opinion of his associate architects that he has presented the finest conception possible within the limitations of the sum made available for the construction of the edifice. This sum is $650,000.

According to Mr. Hunt's plans the building, which covers an area 225 feet square, consists of four pavilions 84 feet square, one at each of the four angles of the square of the plan, and connected by a great central dome 120 feet in diameter and 250 feet in height, leaving in the center of each facade a recess 82 feet wide, within which is a grand entrance to the building. The general design is in the style of the French Renaissance, carried out in the academic manner of the Ecole des Beaux Arts. The first great story is in the Doric order, of heroic proportions, surmounted by a lofty balustrade and having great piers at the angles of each pavilion crowned with sculpture.

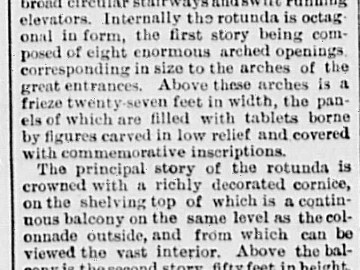

The second story, with its lofty colonnade, is in the Ionic order. Externally the design may be divided in its height into three principal stages. The first stage consists of the four pavilions, corresponding in height with the various buildings grouped about it, which are about 65 feet high. The second stage, which is of the same height, is a continuation of the central rotunda, 175 feet square, surrounded on all sides by an open colonnade of noble proportions, it being 20 feet wide and 40 feet high, with columns four feet in diameter. This colonnade is reached by staircases and elevators from the four principal halls, and is interrupted at the angles by corner pavilions crowned with domes and groups of statuary.

The third stage consists of the base of the great dome, 30 feet in height and octagonal in form, and the dome itself, rising in graceful lines, richly ornamented with heavily molded ribs and sculptural panels, and having a large skylight of glass to light the interior. At each angle of the octagonal base are large sculptured eagles, and along the springing lines are panels, with rich garlands. This great dome will be gilded, and, rising at the end of the long vistas, which open up in every direction, across the lagoons and between the adjoining palatial buildings, will form a fitting crown to the first and second stages.

ILLINOIS STATE BUILDING.

The four great entrances, one on each side of the building, will be 50 feet wide and 50 feet high, deeply recessed, and covered by semicircular arched vaults, richly coffered. In the rear of these arches will be the entrance doors, and above them great screens of glass, giving light to the central rotunda.

The interior features of the building will even exceed in beauty and splendor those of the exterior. Between every two of the grand entrances, and connecting the intervening pavilion with the great rotunda, is a hall or loggia thirty feet square, giving access to the offices and provided with broad circular stairways and swift running elevators. Internally the rotunda is octagonal in form, the first story being composed of eight enormous arched openings, corresponding in size to the arches of the great entrances. Above these arches is a frieze twenty-seven feet in width, the panels of which are filled with tablets borne by figures carved in low relief and covered with commemorative inscriptions.

The principal story of the rotunda is crowned with a richly decorated cornice, on the shelving top of which is a continuous balcony on the same level as the colonnade outside, and from which can be viewed the vast interior. Above the balcony is the second story, fifty feet in height. The walls are embellished with pilasters, between which a frieze of windows is placed, giving light to the rotunda from the rear wall of the surrounding colonnade.

From the top of the cornice of this story rises the interior dome, 200 feet from the floor, and in the center is an opening fifty feet in diameter, transmitting light from the exterior dome overhead. The under side of the dome is enriched with deep panelings, richly molded, and the panels are filled with sculpture in low relief and immense paintings representing the arts and sciences. In size this rotunda will rival if not surpass the celebrated domes of similar character in the world.

As to the uses of the Administration Building, each of the corner pavilions, which are four stories in height, will be divided into large and small offices for the various departments of the administration and lobbies and toilet rooms. The ground floor contains in one pavilion the fire and police departments, with cells for the detention of prisoners; in the second pavilion the offices of ambulance service, the physician and pharmacy, the foreign department and the information bureau; in the third pavilion the postoffice and a bank, and in the fourth the offices of public comfort and a restaurant.

No. 100.—An Enigma.

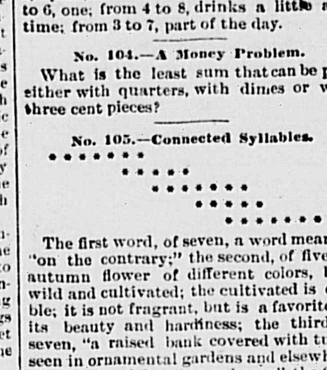

There was a castle built whose marble walls
Were spotless as December's crystal drift;
No portal wide, nor postern gate, nor rift
Gave easy entrance to its secret halls.

Arched were its ceilings, and a curtain soft
And seamless as the overspreading blue
That bounds the farthest stretch of mortal view
Lined the whole structure round, alow, aloft.

It bears within a calm and tideless sea
Of silver, lucid as the morning light;
Upon its tranquil breast, superbly bright,
A golden orb floats ever peacefully.

No living form, nor hurrying feet nor eye
Have ever pierced those deep and voiceless shades;
Yet roistering life, with wily escapades,
Burst from its walls to bide its time and die.

Like sapphires in the night,
And in their joyous radiancies
Like diamonds in the light;
Her lips are dainty rubies twain,
Like cherubs of the spring;
My heart doth yearn to hear again
Her laugh of silvery ring;
Her ears unfold like coral sheaths
In tint, in curve, in curl,
Her speech perfume of amber breathes
And falls with gentle purl;
Ah! true thou art a jewel, love,
A masterpiece of old,
But better still than all above,
Her pa is eighteen karat gold.

Entitled to the Best.

All are entitled to the best that their money will buy, so every family should have, at once, a bottle of the best family remedy, Syrup of Figs, to cleanse the system when costive or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

A Fool and His Money Soon Part.

How true some of those old sayings are. A friend of mine paid a travelling quack $50 to cure him of scrofula, from which he had suffered two years. He gave him a bottle of stuff which only aggravated the disease. When he went to consult him the second time, the quack had left for parts unknown. Upon learning the circumstances I recommended Sulphur Bitters. Five bottles cured him.—Editor Journal and Courier.

The Secret of Success.

A. M. Bachelder & Co., druggists, believe that the secret of success is perseverance. Therefore they persist in keeping the finest lot of perfumeries, toilet articles, cosmetics, drugs and chemicals on the market. They especially invite all persons who have palpitation, short breath, weak or hungry spells, pain in side or shoulder, oppression, night mare, dry cough, smothering, dropsy or heart disease to try Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure before it is too late. It has the largest sale of any similar remedy. Fine book of testimonials free. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is unsurpassed for sleeplessness, headache, fits, etc., and it contains no opiates.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap rum or poor Whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will cure you where all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses

SULPHUR Bitters

The Dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied.

Get it of your Druggist.

DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE.

If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure.

PRIMARY SCHOOL.

By Mrs. E. E. Brown.

Sitting in the school-room all the Summer day,
While your thoughts are wandering many a mile away;
Teaching young immortals, scarce higher than your knee,
The way to fame and fractions by the way of three times three;
Going with precision through the dull routine,
Answering curious questions, that in print were never seen;
Lengthening out your patience, some emergency to meet,
Wearied by the shuffling of little restless feet.
Till you look with anxious longing to the green hills just in sight,
Or the blue wave brightly glancing in the glorious Summer light;
Called away from scenes of beauty to enforce some well-known rule—
Bless me! this is trying—teaching Primary School!

Meeting every morning, as you step within the door,
With greetings warm and earnest, from hearts sincere and pure;
And you see how at your coming bright eyes the brighter glow,
Till you think it worth a fortune such honest love to know.
And you enter on your duties with patience new and strong,
Chanting with the dear ones some simple morning song;
Teaching young ideas the way they ought to shoot,
Sowing seeds of knowledge that in time shall turn to fruit;
Calming angry feelings that will oftentimes arise,
Soothing little sorrows that have moistened gentle eyes;
Solving moral problems independent of all rule—
Really, this is pleasant—teaching Primary School!

Washington Letter.

(Regular Correspondent to the Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, June 15, 1891.

Gen. John M. Schonfield, the grizzled old warrior who enjoys the honor of commanding the United States army and the pleasure of occupying as offices a suite of beautifully decorated and furnished rooms in the handsomest government building in Washington, would doubtless greatly enjoy the comments made by Mrs. Grundy since his coming marriage to a young girl was announced here. The society widows, old maids, and "buds" are one and all in a disgruntled state of mind because the general did not select one of them for a wife, and their comments upon his bad taste are numerous and some of them very acid; but, bless your soul, the vinegar will all have evaporated and been succeeded by honey by the time the newly wedded couple shall have completed their tour and taken up their permanent residence in this city: the social position of the wife of the commander of the army will cause the bride to be surfeited with flattery when she gets here.

Hon. Charles E. Mitchell, Commissioner of Patents, who is they say soon to retire from office, more's the pity, is evidently a man of courage. He has by an amendment to the rules of practice governing the Patent Office succeeded in breaking up a that has been going on there for many years at the expense of the poorer inventors, those who find it difficult to pay the necessary expenses of an appeal from the decisions of the Examiners, of which there are about one hundred in the office. It has been the custom of some of these Examiners to reject large numbers of applicants for patents that should have been allowed, carefully preserving the address of the applicant, and when a large number of these rejections have been accumulated, to resign and go into business as a patent attorney, sending out a carefully worded circular which secures the patronage of a very large per centage of the applicants whose claims these very men had knowingly unjustly rejected. Congress has in vain been appealed to; but Commissioner Mitchell has effectually killed this underhand business by making it a rule that no man can appear as attorney for an application upon which he has ever passed in any way as an employe of the patent office.

YOUNG "JAMIE" BLAINE, who is a standing example of the failure of nature to transmit even a small portion of the father's brain to the son, used to, before his marriage, ape the rough and ready athletic style, but since his return from Europe, where he was initiated into the Prince of Wales' set—he would have been just in his proper element at Tranby Court,—has blossomed into an aspirant for the throne of the king of the dudes, and his vacant upper story and trunk full of "Lunnun" made clothes give him something to base his claim upon.

It was discovered this week that there are

NO "OLD MAIDS" IN WASHINGTON,

although the number of unmarried ladies who have passed the age of—well, be charitable and say thirty, are legion. The important discovery was made by a New York maiden lady, who owns to thirty-three and says she is proud of being an "old maid." She suggested to a friend whom she is visiting here, and who is a year or two older than herself, that they give an old maid's luncheon, a form of amusement which she says has made lots of fun for New Yorkers since the quiet season began, "Just the thing," cried her friend joyously, "but" and her face lengthened visibly, "I cannot take part in it; I am no old maid." "And would you believe it," said a New York lady, "after spending two days in calling upon those whom I knew to be within a year or two of my age, I was compelled to abandon the idea of an old maid's luncheon because of my inability to find any old maids to attend it. Queer town this."

Mr. Harrison is said to be deeply concerned on the silver question and very anxious to acquaint himself with the in all sections of the country upon this very important question. According to my information, which is unquestionably reliable, no man of prominence calls upon Mr. Harrison without having his opinion asked about silver and being questioned about the sentiment of the people in the section from which he comes. It is supposed that this active interest is caused by recent statements of those who will have much to do with the shaping of legislation in the next Congress that a free coinage bill would be among the first passed after the Fifty-second Congress meets. Both republicans and democrats would like to get this silver question decided before the Presidential campaign, and it may be, although it is extremely doubtful, that Mr. Harrison intends springing a surprise on the country by signing the bill after it is passed.

Secretary Foster has by no means lost interest in Ohio politics since he entered the Cabinet, and he has gone to Ohio to put in some licks for '92, and to find out how much danger there is for the republican party in the

in the state.

Col. W. W. Dudley, who is usually classed as an anti-Harrison man, hasn't a high opinion of the recent anti-Harrison gathering at Indianapolis. He says of it: "They are acting like a lot of fools. The idea of their trying to do anything like that eighteen months before the convention. The thing is not important or significent. It is simply a move of some of Gresham's friends to bring him out as a candidate. There is always opposition to Mr. Harrison in Indiana. Whether that opposition is strong enough at this time to prevent his getting the delegation no man can tell." The democratic view of the movement was expressed by Ex-representative Stockslager, of Indiana, now here. He says: "there always has been considerable but the Harrison people have the machine, and you know what that means in politics. Regardless of the popular sentiment, having the machine is apt to give Mr. Harrison control of the state delegation, but if he is nominated I do not think he can carry the state in '92."

OPPOSITION TO MR. HARRISON IN INDIANA,

It is on the cards for the friends of Senator Gorman to make open war upon Mr. Cleveland, should he show any signs of crawling out of the "soup" where the Gorman people claim he now is.

Representative Mills is in town to remain quite awhile, and he has savagely jumped on the newspaper men who have been printing interviews with him, and says he has not been interviewed for months.

BASE BALL.

Base ball clubs wishing the full scores of their games printed in the Gazette, will please send them in on Monday.

North Weymouths vs. Beacons.

A crowd of 300 people was present last Saturday to witness the second game of ball between the home team and the Beacons of Hingham. King, whom the St. Johns of Quincy were after, has signed with the North Weymouths for the season, and pitched one of his magnificent games, being batted for only four safe hits. The features of the game were the back-stop work of Bearce and the second base playing of Clark, also of Woods who played centre. Buttimer, Conlon and Cresswell, played fine game for the Beacons. The score:

Earned runs, North Weymouth 8; 2-base hits, E. McGrevey, King, Clark, B. Holbrook; struck out, by King, 10, Whelan, 4; stolen bases, North Weymouth 9, Beacon 3. Umpire, Ed. Boyle. Time, 2 hours.

North Weymouths will cross bats with the Centres of Hingham June 20.

Manager Keefe has made no mistake in getting Doane, late of the Braintrees, to cover first base.

North Weymouths would like to hear from the Actives of South Weymouth.

King, by his fine work in the box, has won hosts of friends.

Institutes vs. Elmores of Bridgewater.

A crowd of about 300 were pleased to see the home team pull out of a bad hole last Saturday at the park. As usual, in the first inning, Hersey received wretched support, netting three runs and nearly the game to the Elmores. The feature of the game was the batting of the Institutes and the pitching of Hersey, he striking out 14, and allowing only two hits. There was considerable kicking owing to the decisions of the umpires. The score:

Time of game, 2 h. 20 m. Umpires, Lyons and King.

Institute Base Ball Gossip.

Mr. Ryan was missed as an umpire last Saturday but it is hoped he will appear tomorrow and do the decent.

Mr. Goodspeed gave the boys many valuable points which they thank him for.

Manager Corridan should appear earlier and practice his men in position before entering a game in the future.

Hersey played the game of his life.

Bagley wanted a runner, but King was on to him and would not have it.

King is a kicker, so is Corridan.

Vernons of Cambridge tomorrow 3 p. m.

Marions vs. Braintrees.

On the Lake-street grounds last Saturday the Marions took an easy victory from the Braintrees by the following score:

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Struck out, by Lynch 6, by Sullivan 4; base hits, Marions 13, Braintrees 8; errors, Marions 3, Braintrees 15. Umpires, Lynch and Donahoe.

The Y. M. S. C. were defeated Saturday at West Quincy by the St. Mary's by a score of 19 to 9.

No game on the Lake-street grounds next Saturday. The Marions will cross bats with the King Phillips at Rockland.

A Disguised Princess.

BY MARQUERY. (MRS. FLORENCE HUNT.)

CHAPTER II.

Della stared at the lady, whose face flushed with dismay. "I thought it was my maid," she said. It was Mrs. Smith's voice. Her eyes flashed with anger.

"How came you here now?" she said.

"Oh! forgive me," faltered Della, "I came to bring this book and I am so sorry—"

But Mrs. Smith laughed and said, "You have discovered a secret; but I know I can depend on my dear little friend to keep it." Her voiced had softened and she was smiling sweetly.

"Sit down here, dear one," she said, pointing to an easy chair, "and I will explain."

Then she told Della in hurried tones, different from her usual rather languid manner, that she wore the gray hair for a protection. "I am alone in the world, child, and so young that I must for the present counterfeit age to keep me from being molested by wicked people. But why should I let you know, dear Innocent," (her favorite name for Della) "of the wickedness of the world? Only I beg you to keep my secret. Will you not, Petite?"

"Indeed I will, dear Mrs. Smith," said Della, with all a child's delight at having a secret intrusted to her.

"Shall we not take a drive?" said Mrs. Smith, evidently wishing to change the subject.

Della assented eagerly; to ride behind the pair of fine, black horses was a delight to her, indeed. Mrs. Smith rang the bell, and when William came, ordered the horses. He seemed to hesitate and said something in a low voice. Della caught only the words "last night" and "very tired."

"Pshaw! William, you are too careful of those lazy horses," said Mrs. Smith. "Do tell James to harness at once."

Then Mrs. Smith began to dress. She deftly braided her long black hair and wound it closely about her head. Then she put on the gray wig, which fitted snugly, and was changed from a young woman of twenty-five to one of fifty.

"Quite a transformation, my little Innocent," she said, "and I know I can trust you to keep my secret."

"Oh! yes, indeed, to the death!" exclaimed Della.

Mrs. Smith laughed her unpleasant laugh, and then they both went out to the carriage which had driven up to the door. The coachman looked rather cross, as he sat upon the box, and the footman after helping them in went back into the house.

"See to things," said Mrs. Smith to him, and he nodded his head rather disrespectfully, Della thought.

"Any news about town?" asked Mrs. Smith, after a short silence.

"Oh, yes, I forgot to tell you," answered Della. "Auntie May says for you to sleep up stairs, Mrs. Smith, for there has been another robbery over at Sandy Beach. The fourth this month; and this time it was Gov. Black's cottage, and they took all the silver and Mrs. Black's diamonds. Several thousand dollars worth, Auntie said."

"But I've no diamonds here, dear Innocent, and but very little silver, so I am not afraid. But how slowly we are going. What is the matter with the horses, James?"

"Tired, marm."

"Tired! Lazy and overfed, I fancy. Come, whip them up, we want to go faster."

But in spite of her commands the horses did not go fast and at last they were turned towards home.

To say that Della did not think of the secret intrusted to her would be false. She could hardly sleep that night, but kept tossing about unable to close her eyes. Before them always was the figure in the white dress, with long black hair streaming over it, and the youthful face flushed with anger and fear. "Perhaps," she said to herself, "Mrs. Smith is a princess in disguise;" and quickly to the imaginative child came confirmation of the idea in hundreds of little circumstances before unnoticed. Her conversations about European society, the celebrities she had known there; her carrieges and horses all spoke of wealth, and her dislike for society was not strange to one accustomed to royalty. Della thought she would have something to tell the girls when she got home again. Even teasing Harry would not venture to tell her not to talk to strangers when he found she had made the acquaintance of a princess.

Then her imagination soared still higher, and she fancied herself at court with Mrs. Smith. "One, two, three," sounded the old hall clock, and the roosters were beginning to crow in a distant farm-yard before Della fell asleep. But in dreams the same fancies pursued her, and she was just trying to back out from a royal presence that wore a gray wig very much askew, and having very difficult work in managing her train, when she was awakened by her aunt's voice, saying:

"Della, my dear, do wake up. 'Tis ten o'clock, and Mrs. Smith has been over to see if you are ill today, and I was just in the midst of my "Ode to a Star." I had the rhyme to ecstatic and now I've lost it. Ecstatic—pragmatic—didactic,—no, that's not it. Do hurry down, dear. I cannot stop to see her."

Della dressed as quickly as possible, and went down to her friend who sat on the piazza awaiting her. Mrs. Smith seemed worried and anxious. Her face looked drawn and pale. She caught Della by the hand and said:

"You have not told?"

"Told what, dear Mrs. Smith?"

"About this," and she touched the gray wig.

"No, indeed, answered Della, indignantly. "I promised."

"Forgive me, dear Innocent, said Mrs. Smith, with her sweet smile. "But if you knew how anxious I am to keep it a secret, for the present."

"Reasons of state," thought Della, and then said aloud, "You may depend upon me, Mrs. Smith." Just then Aunt May came out. She had lost her far-away look, and Della knew she had not found the missing word.

"Oh, my dear Mrs. Smith, have you heard? The Duncans were robbed last night. It is supposed the robbers came from a distance, as Mrs. Bligh, who was sitting up with her sick child, heard a carriage driven past the house last night, or rather this morning about one o'clock. She said it was going very fast, and had two horses. I am very much alarmed, aren't you?"

"I never have been," said Mrs. Smith.

"I do wish, Mrs. Smith," said Aunt May, "that you would come over tomorrow evening. We have a tea at six and then a delightful reading from Browning in the evening. If you could only be persuaded to assist us. Do come."

"I am almost tempted to accept your invitation," said Mrs. Smith. "Tomorrow I expect my lawyer, and if he leaves in time I may run over. I will send you word, however. Now, I really must go and let this little girl have her breakfast. I cannot see you tomorrow, dear, so do not come over for I shall be busy with Mr. Prim all day. So au revoir."

"Do try to come in the evening," said Aunt May.

"If possible. Good morning," and she was gone.

All the next day Della was busy helping her aunt, for the lady had but one servant. and when she was to receive her friends much additional work was necessary.

No word came during the day from Mrs. Smith. At last after tea Della said to her aunt:

"Can't I run over to Mrs. Smith's? Perhaps she has been too busy to send over, and I can persuade her to return with me."

"Do dear child," said Aunt May, "you will not be missed and I am so anxious to have her come."

So Della slipped out of the house and hastened toward the Cottage. It was in the dusk of the evening, and as she ran across the fields taking the shortest cut, she saw approaching the shore a small steam yacht, rather an unusual sight at Whitside. She gave no thought to it, however, supposing it had come from Sandy Beach where such crafts were numerous.

The close carriage stood by the door of the Cottage, but nobody was near, and the horses were fastened to a post. Della said to herself, "Oh! I am afraid that old lawyer is still there," and ran into the house. The library door was not closed and a bright light shone across the floor from Mrs. Smith's room through the open door.

Della entered the room; her light footfall was evidently unheard. Before a table, covered with silver stood Mrs. Smith, her back to the door, while a man was hastily packing some of the pieces. They were talking in low, hurried tones.

"If the boat doesn't come," Mrs. Smith was saying, when Della approached her putting her hand on her arm, saying:

"My aunt—"

But she was rudely interrupted by a fierce oath from the man whom she now recognized as James the coachman, though he did not wear his livery. Mrs. Smith grasped her firmly by the arm and said, "How came you here?"

Too much frightened to reply, Della said nothing.

"She is a spy," said the man, "and the police are already on our track. Where is William?"

"He is looking for the boat, I suppose," said Mrs. Smith. "But I can trust this little girl."

"You are a fool," said the man, and he seized Della roughly by the shoulder.

"Don't hurt the child," said Mrs. Smith, she has been a good friend to me."

"I'll put her where she won't blab," said he. He pushed poor Della into a narrow closet near the chimney, locking the door, and then rolling a table against it. Della, though half dead with fright, heard him scolding Mrs. Smith severely, but did not understand what he was saying. The closet was very small, and soon overcome with fright and want of air Della fainted away. When consciousness returned, she was lying upon a sofa in the library, several men standing near her, one of whom she recognized as the village constable.

"She is coming to," she heard him say. "Yes 'tis Mrs. Stannow's niece."

Della began to cry. She felt sick, miserable and frightened.

"Don't cry, child, said one of the men," but tell us how you came in the closet."

Della told as best she could.

"I believe they've escaped us again," said her questioner, who was a detective. "Do you know how they went?"

"No," said Della, "but I heard something about a boat."

"Then we've lost them. Heard anything of a strange boat about here, Jones?" said he to the constable.

"No, sir," was the answer, "but one could have come up to the pier down below without any body seeing it."

Della said nothing. In fact at that moment she had forgotten the steam yacht she had seen approaching the shore.

Mr. Jones carried her back to her aunt's house and explained to her the situation.

Mrs. Stannow had not thought of Della's absence, supposing she was passing the evening with Mrs. Smith. Judge of her consternation when she found that poor Della had been in a den of thieves.

"That Mrs. Smith is a notorious woman, marm, so they say," said Mr. Jones, "and could deceive Satan himself. "Their game has been for her to play the lady, and they've been robbing all the houses round and kept the silver right under our very noses in Brant Cottage. They used to drive here in the dead hours of the night. That James, the coachman, is the worst burglar unhung, and that William ain't far behind him. I guess they won't catch them, for they went off in a yacht." This much Mr. Jones explained to Aunt May; but poor Della paid for her acquaintance with the robber "princess" by an attack of fever which left her so weak it was months before she was allowed to talk about the affair. Then it seemed like a horrid dream. Only it left her with a great dread of strangers, and she never in all her life spoke to one again without being properly introduced.

Perhaps it should be explained that the so-called Mrs. Smith was a foreign adventuress, who had, though well-educated and handsome, become the confederate of two of the most desperate characters in the country, and it was not strange she deceived the little community at Whitside, and gave society there a shock from which it was a long while recovering.

THE END.

Glory or Death.

Lieutenant Robert E. Peary is an aspirant for fame as an Arctic explorer or willing to give himself to the cause of scientific research in the frozen north, and proposes to write his name by the side of Drs. Franklin and Kane, and Lieuts. Hall, Greely and others.

The expedition which Lieut. Peary has in charge sailed from New York the 6th inst., and expect to land on the shores of Greenland the middle or last of July. He will erect his home there and probably spend the winter in study and preparation for next season, when he expects to find the north pole.

But little is known of the interior of Greenland, researches thus far having been confined to the coast line.

The natives believe the interior to be inhabited by a tribe of fierce and malignant beings. Lieut. Peary will try and cross this ice continent, and the coming book will not be the "Dark Continent" but the "Ice Continent."

In 1721 Hans Egede, the apostle of the Esquimaux, landed in Greenland, and Arctic research has been going on from that time with hardly sufficient results to justify the suffering and cost which has attended it.

Hold it to the Light.

The man who tells you confidentially just what will cure your cold is prescribing Kemp's Balsam this year. In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00

Points on Newspaper Subscription.

Dr. Tuckerman, editor of the Workman, Cleveland, Ohio, has taken some pains to collect and compile the decisions of the United States Court on this subject, and gives to the Washington Post, as a result of his investigations, the following:—

First—Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to renew their subscriptions.

Second—If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

Third—If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the post-office to which they are directed, they are responsible until they have settled their bills and ordered them discontinued.

Fourth—If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher and the papers are sent to the former address, they are held responsible.

Fifth—The courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office or removing and leaving uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Sixth—If subscribers pay in advance, they are bound to give notice at the end of the time, if they do not wish to continue taking it; otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it, and the subscribers will be responsible until express notice, with payment of all arrearages, is sent to the publisher.

The latest postal laws are such that newspaper publishers can arrest anyone for fraud who takes a paper and refuses to pay for it. Under this law the man who allows his subscription to run along for some time unpaid and then orders it discontinued, or orders the postmaster to mark it "refused," and have a postal card sent notifying the publisher, leaves himself liable to arrest and fine the same as for theft.—[Daily Optic.

Hints for the Season.

—Don't find a secluded spot and go bathing alone until you can swim.

—Don't lose an opportunity to learn to swim.

—Don't fool with some comrade in the water who can't swim but just a little.

—Don't dive from an elevated position unless you know the depth of water and all about the bottom.

—Don't remain undressed after coming out of the water.

—Don't go in more than once a day, especially in fresh water.

—Don't lie about it when you go home; if you have been in and your mother asks about it, say yes.

—Don't make the boy lie by putting too many restrictions on him. He wants to swim, he ought to swim and he will swim.

Newspaper Changes Hands.

The Boston Daily Traveller has passed into new hands and will be run on a "broad guage track."

The paper will be non-sectarian and non-partisan, it will favor a vigorous protector of our common school system; an educational qualification for the right of suffrage; a ballot reform that will secure to every voter in the country a right to vote without intimidation and a revision of the naturalization and immigration laws.

Beyond Town Limits.

—Deacon Porter of Avon not satisfied with an award given him for the taking of a spring of water, and further aggravated by the proximity of Italians employed on the water-works, took his revenge by blowing up a town building with dynamite. Building and tools were destroyed.

—In Brockton people do not dare to keep money in the house on account of burglars and are paying grocers bills or depositing in the savings banks. Send us a few burglars.

—C. Mason Moody, the treasurer of Franklin Co., pleads guilty of embezzlement and is under $10,000 bonds for trial in July.

—Winthrop indulges this week in a town-meeting called by a justice of peace, the selectmen refusing to listen to the petitioners.

—Gov. Russell has agreed to attend the Bridgewater cattle show this year.

—The Mayor of Springfield sat down on the tailors who organized suit clubs, as it is a violation of the lottery law. About 500 young men are interested in different clubs, and but few get a suit.

—Harriet Beecher Stowe was 80 years old last Sunday. She is said to have aged very rapidly the past few years and the brilliant mind that conceived "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is almost a blank.

—By the readjustment of the salaries of second-class post-offices announced Monday, Postmaster Adams of Quincy gets an increase of $200 per annum. Other cities and towns to get an increase were Amesbury, Amherst, Attleboro, Beverly, Brockton, Gardner, Hyde Park, Middleboro, Natick, Newburyport, Newton, Plymouth, Waltham, Westboro and Westfield, $100 each; Haverhill, Newtonville, Peabody and South Framingham, $200 each; Wakefield, $300; Everett, $400. Decrease—North Adams, $100; Clinton $600. A very satisfactory showing for the growth of the city of Quincy. Postmaster Adams' salary will be $2,300.—Quincy Ledger.

—Quincy had the pleasure of a real circus yesterday. Since she has attained the dignity of being a city she must have all the accompaniments of the position. We suppose some of her enterprising citizens will erect a theatre soon.

—The new Wollaston Unitarian Church was dedicated on Monday evening.

Handsome versus Homely.

Who is that fine looking lady that we just passed, Clara? Why, that is Mrs. Snow. Well, there, what a change; when I saw her last, her skin was so sallow and muddy looking, it's no wonder I didn't know her. What has produced that lovely complexion? I heard that she took Sulphur Bitters, the great Blood Purifier, and now would not be without it.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood. Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers. For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters. Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Price 50 cts. and $1 per bottle, at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

He Yelled Kemp's Balsam.

I yell "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." I always do when I hear a man cough, and I can't help it. It saved me and it will cure you. I was threatened with pneumonia last winter and it broke it up. It helps the children out when their throats are sore, cures their coughs, and tastes so good. The first dose helps you. So writes A. R. Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Railroad at Canajoharie, N. Y.

FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1891.

If the third party is to cut any substantial figure in national politics it cannot continue to mean one thing in the South and another in the West and still another in the East.

Ex-senator Ingalls says Blaine will never be president, but Blaine need not feel uncomfortable on account of what Ingalls says. He made such a bad break in prophesying his own political future that the words of this prophet should be taken by contraries.

An exchange says that neither Solomon, Plato, Socrates, Homer, Cæsar, nor Martin Luther were smokers. In the absence of any evidence to prove that they were or were not, we accept the statement, and might add that neither did they use ice in the summer or warm their toes with steam heat in the winter; and for similar reasons they neither used electric lights nor traveled in steam cars.

The very dry weather of the past few weeks has told naturally upon all kinds of vegetation. Gardens, as a rule, are but little ahead of what they were a fortnight ago; fruit is beginning to drop from the trees; berries are drying up in the fields; and grass, having come to a standstill, is being cut, although in most instances upland grass is very light. The rain of Wednesday and Thursday was a blessing indeed.

Captain Andrews and Captain Lawlor were to start on the 17th on their 2,800-mile race across the "great pond," but the rough weather delayed their departure. Although wishing them, personally, no harm, it might be a good thing for their future foolish imitators if they should both be drowned. Such exploits serve no useful end and are only attempted to obtain cheap notoriety.

Who now finds fault with our East winds? There never was a community more grateful for anything than we were for the cool sea-breeze which set in about 6 o'clock Wednesday morning after two days and nights of unprecedentedly hot weather with the thermometers ranging from 95 to 102 in the shade according to location. East winds are one of the greatest blessings of our climate as well as its curse.

Let us indorse the words of the poet:

"Welcome, wild North-Easter!
Shame it is to see
Odes to every zephyr,
Ne'er a verse to thee."
—Charles Kingsley.

McKinley Vindicated.

It is nearly five months before the state election in Ohio and yet the convention has been held to nominate the Republican gubernatorial standard bearer for the campaign.

The convention making the nomination was an enthusiastic one and made an unanimous choice of Major McKinley by acclamation, which means a vindication by the Republicans of Ohio of the man, and if he is elected, will mean an endorsement by the state of the celebrated tariff bill of which he was the father and the prophet. The fight will be fierce on both sides.

The Seals to have a Rest.

The seal question is now sealed and the sealers will also be sealed (up) if they are caught poaching by either the Queen's or Uncle Sam's war ships.

The treaty concluded last Monday between the United States and Great Britain settles a long pending question, and one that at times has been considered possible to breed hostilities between the two countries.

The poor seals will now have a long holiday until next May.

The weather during the past week has been hardly appropriate for the discussion of seals, or of seal skins. We will, however, venture the prediction that there will be as many sealskin garments next season as ever, notwithstanding the restrictions, and that those with "web and woof" will predominate as heretofore.

The Notifications to Subscribers.

Many of our subscribers have received during the past week, a postal card informing them of the date of expiration of their subscription and that if paid within 30 days they would be allowed the 50 cents discount according to our advance terms.

We hope none of our patrons will take offense at these notifications as we intend hereafter to send out similar ones the first of each month to every subscriber whose subscription expires during that month. We adopt this method solely for the convenience of our subscribers. Our terms, as all are aware, are $2.50 per year but a discount of 50 cents is made when the subscription is paid in advance. We are continually asked by individuals—"When is my subscription due? I want to pay it in advance but I have forgotten the date it expires." We find this so common that we have adopted the method of notification, that everyone may know when his subscription is due and thus be enabled to take advantage of the lower cash terms. It would be, perhaps, more profitable for us to say nothing to these forgetful subscibers, but allow them to run by the thirty days' time and then charge them all $2.50. We should thus make 50 cents on every person who was a little careless in the matter, but we feel that it is, perhaps, more just, and surely more kind, to give every one a special notice within a few days of the expiration of his subscription.

We will say that we hope at the end of a year that we shall not have one delinquent and that we shall not be obliged to charge anyone the $2.50.

Bunker Hill Day.

The Seventeenth of June was partially observed here as a holiday, most of the business places closing for the whole or a part of the day. No special celebration was, however, observed, and indeed we believe that it is not the custom outside of Charlestown and her immediate neighborhood to make much of the day.

The anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill is worthy of more attention than is generally accorded to it. That battle was the first real fight of the Revolutionary war. Skirmishes there had been, and at Concord and Lexington the British had been opposed by the patriots in an irregular fashion, from behind stone walls, and entirely without organization. But at Bunker Hill the American troops first stood up to face the direct assault of the British red-coats.

It was here that the lie was first given to the braggart boasts of the enemy that the Americans could not face the fire of the British regulars and would shrink in terror from their invincible bayonets. Time after time on that memorable day were the assaults of the king's soldiers repulsed and the red-coats driven down the hill; and at last, when, heavily reinforced, they succeeded in reaching the top, it was only after the ammunition of the brave band of defenders had become exhausted.

The battle of Bunker Hill was thus virtually a victory for the Americans, although they were finally driven from the hill, and the effect of this battle was to awaken a great confidence in the Continental army, in their ability to meet the British soldiers on even terms.

The magnificent monument towering above the city of Charlestown fitly commemorates the heroic example set by our forefathers on that day.

Opening Day of the Monatiquot Yacht Club.

Beautiful weather and a fine breeze made a model yachting day for the Monatiquot tars and their ladies last Friday, the occasion being the formal opening of the season.

The regatta announced for 3.30 o'clock brought out an unexpectedly large number of boats, many of the Club's skippers not yet having their yachts in racing trim.

The boats present and time made by each was as follows:

FIRST CLASS.

Name and Owner.	Length. FT.IN.	Actual time. H.M.S.	Corr'd time. H.M.S.
White Fawn, H.A. Jones	25 00	0 47 40	0 34 46
Moondyne, A. J. Shaw	24 10	0 50 41	0 38 47
SECOND CLASS.
Diadem, L. Hayward	18 02	0 51 26	0 34 55
Sans-Souci H. E. Pray	19 06	Not taken.
Third Class.
Bess, W. G. Cherrington	17 03	1 24 26	0 58 42
Spy, E. W. Whitmarsh	16 00	1 35 22	1 08 13
Monatiquot, C. G. Sheppard	20 04	1 35 28	1 12 43
Lora, D. Whalen	18 01	1 40 10	1 16 18
Wasp, Theo. P. Willey	17 05	Not taken.
Elf, H. E. Souther	19 11	Withdrawn.
Spider, A. E. Pratt	19 09	Withdrawn.

After the race, the yachtsmen, their friends, and ladies were regaled with a supper in the upper hall.

For the evening's entertainment dancing was the chief amusement and Hartshorn's orchestra played excellent music throughout the evening. Ice cream was served bountifully to all. The promenade about the building was very pleasant while listening to the sweet music.

The number present was rather small and although somewhat of a disappointment to the committee in charge, it was ascribed to the excessive heat of the day. Those who came however, had a good time and the affair may be considered a successful opening of the season.

Dancing does not seem to be as attractive in this vicinity as in years past, and some of the yachtsmen suggest some other form of entertainment for Ladies' Day.

The Fourth of July.

The call for a meeting of those interested in arranging a programme for a public celebration of the Fourth brought out a number of friends of the movement at Engine hall last Monday night, and a start was given to the project by the appointment of several committees. The meeting adjourned to Friday evening (to-night) at same place, at 7.45 o'clock, when it is hoped a large attendance will boom the matter into great popularity.

A considerable sum of money will be needed to make the programme of an interesting nature and thus attract the people to stay at home. It is more of a benefit to a town to keep the holiday spending money of the people within its own borders than the unthinking will allow, and storekeepers and others can well afford to contribute to this fund for that reason.

The programme for the day is, as yet, open to suggestions from all and new and novel ideas will be gladly received. Of course there will be sports of various kinds, an horrible procession, perhaps; and band concerts in the afternoon and evening, with very likely a display of fireworks.

These details will be decided upon when the available amount of money is known.

Quincy Yacht Club's First Regatta.

The Quincy Yacht Club held its first regatta of the season Saturday. The courses sailed were the usual ones off the club house at Hough's Neck. The wind was strong from the southwest and the boats made good time.

There were first and second cash prizes in each class of $10 and $5, and in the first and third classes the Sanborn trophies were sailed for.

As a result of the race, the White Fawn and Erin in the third class, Madge and Mabel in the second, and the Rocket and Flora Lee in the third classes, secured the cash prizes, while the White Fawn and Rocket got a leg in the trophies.

The Corinthian rules, compelling each yacht owner to sail his own craft, gave the amateurs an opportunity to show their proficiency. The judges were George E. Pfaffman and E. B. Glover.

The Posy, owing to an accident, did not arrive until after the race had started.

Prohibition Country Convention.

The Plymouth County Prohibition Association will hold its tenth annual Convention and Conference in Clifford block, Whitman, on Wednesday June 24, at 10 o'clock a. m. A business meeting will be held in the forenoon. In the afternoon, there will be short addresses and discussions on several topics of interest to Prohibitionistr. In the evening, addresses will be given by Wm. H. Partridge of Newton, Rev. C. D. Harp of Duxbury, and Rev. H. A. Ridgway of Brockton. All friends of the cause are invited to attend.

Home Runs.

The two vegetables that a base ball nine love best and are always talking about:—Lettuce beet.

When are base ballists unhappy laborers? When they are out on strikes.

There was a young man played base ball,
He only played once, that was all—
He sprained all his fingers,
Put his nose out of joint,
This unhappy novice at base ball.

Evans—Ames.

CHILDREN'S SUNDAY.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, EAST WEYMOUTH.

At the Congregational church, East Weymouth, Children's Day was observed with service of unusual interest. In the morning the pastor preached to a large congregation from the text, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The singing was under the direction of Mr. T. H. Emerson. A pleasing feature of the morning service was the baptism of Marshal Tucker, infant son of Winslow M. and Lucy Tirrell. The church was very prettily decorated with flowers.

In the evening there was a very interesting Sunday-school concert. The programme consisted of an organ voluntary, Mr. R. T. Raymond; recitations by members of the infant class under the direction of Mrs. E. C. Hawes and Miss Susie E. Pratt; recitations by Mary Keith, Jessie Pratt, Helen Dunbar, Cora Burrell, Edith Sloan, Fred Garey, Garfield Burrell, and Robert Raymond; class exercise by Miss Cain's class; exercise prepared by Miss Susie Raymond and given by twelve girls; violin solo, Percy Shaw; exercise "The Arch of Character" by nine girls; remarks by the pastor.

UNION CHURCH, SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

Last Sunday was devoted to the children by the Union church, South Weymouth, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bolster, preaching a sermon for the occasion in the morning, and exercises as follows were held in the evening:

Organ, anthem, prayer; Welcome greeting, chorus; In Blossom Time, Jenny Clough; The Rose, Dorothy Nash; Our Mother, Mildred Nash; I'm Just a Little Girl, Rosalie Hersey; Summer Day, infant class; Wonderful Children's Days, three girls; A Merry Brown Thrush, God's Little Ones, four children; Why Have the Bluebirds Come, Crawford; Two Mites, the Wentworths; solo and duet, John Vining and Fred Bolster; A Listening Bird, Harry May; Cluster of Blossoms, infant class; Daisies White, infant class; Doing its Best, Mamie Hunt; Sunbeams, Leonard Newell; Greeting, songs and flowers; Talking in Their Sleep, three girls; Why he Sang, Arthur Bolster; solo, John Vining; God Knows, Mary Thayer; Two Raindrops, Eddie Loud; Gospel of the Flowers, duet; Flower Sunday, Laura Holbrook; Some Boys of the Bible; Violets, Florence Pitcher; Lessons in the Garden, Sydney Cook; Little Qua Riress, Alice May; Acquainted with Jesus, Corn and Lilies, Lola Hunt; Little Field Preachers, Farewell, Lou Reed; Doxology.

SECOND CONGREGATIONAL.

At the Second Congregational church, South Weymouth, last Sunday was observed as Children's day, Rev. Mr. Alvord preaching a sermon for the occasion in the morning and the following programme was given in the evening:

Voluntary; Scripture, pastor; Hymn No. 815, congregation; reading, Ruth Tower; recitation, Helen Reed; Little Servants, children; song, Mrs. Dyer; recitation, Lilla Smith; anthem, Carrie Dyer; recitation, choir; recitation, Mamie Tirrell; recitation, Marion Tirrell; song, Lina Loud; recitation, Susie Loud; recitation, Freda Tirrell; recitation, Bertha Tirrell; duet, Mary and Addie Dyer; recitation, Anna Stetson; recitation, Bessie Nash; reading, Etta Joy; reading, Lida Dean; reading May Carpenter; remarks, pastor; collection; Hymn No. 176; prayer, pastor; benediction.

UNITARIAN CHURCH, EAST WEYMOUTH.

Children's Sunday was observed at the Unitarian church by services of more than usual interest. The floral displays were very elaborate showing much skill in arranging, and when the building was lighted the effect was quite charming.

The exercises of the evening were in charge of W. F. Winsor, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and consisted of music, responsive reading, recitations by members of the school, short address by the pastor, and a very pleasing duet by Mrs. Whiting and Mr. D. P. Lincoln.

The singing by the children was especially fine and was quite a credit to Miss Abbie Pratt who was in charge of that part of the exercise.

School Teachers' Elected.

At the meeting of the school board last Tuesday evening the following teachers were elected for the ensuing school year: North High School—L. Herbert Owen, Louisa E. Humphrey, Josephine Center. South High School—Edgar R. Downs, Jessie F. Smith. Ward 1—Frank L. Kelley, Grace W. Mitchell, Jessie A. Custance, Nettie E. Bradford, Jennie W. Rice, Clarabelle Pratt. Ward 2—Walter L. Sayward, Addie M. Canterbury, Brit E. Harlow, Martha E. Belcher, Mary A. Webster, Annie McGreevy, Lizzie C. Tirrell, Kate C. Keohan, Susie B. Litchfield, Mary A. Dee, Carrie J. Gardner, Alice G. Egan, Martha J. Hawes. Ward 3—Barbara Hunter, Edith Keith, Mary E. Lord, Emma F. Parker, Mary E. Walsh, Anne B. Hunt, Helen L. Rockwood, Mary E. Crotty. Ward 4—A. Amelia Jordan, Nellie Holbrook, Fannie E. Hawes, Mary E. Grundstrom. Ward 5—Jennie M. Allen, Emma J. Smith, Ella M. Clark, Hattie L. Reed, Jennie T. Holbrook, L. Gertrude Bates, Sadie Stetson. Teacher of Music—Robert F. Raymond.

5 Cents for your Seat.

At the ball game last Saturday afternoon between the Bridgewaters and the Institutes, a number of amusing things occurred among the audience. One of the most noticeable was when a well known shoe manufacturer, who is noted for his jolly good nature, approached a small boy and said "Boy, do you want to earn five cents?" The boy nodded in the affirmative, and the gentleman said, "I'll give you five cents for your seat." The boy looked up, shook his head and gazed straight out to the diamond where the game was going on. The crowd enjoyed it immensely and there was a general smile. Seats are at a premium.

License Petitions.

Petitions were presented to the Selectmen at their meeting last Monday requesting them to grant druggists licenses. They were signed by leading citizens of the town. Action was deferred until next Monday.

School Matters.

The improvements ordered by the state Board of Police last year amounting to about $3000 have been countermanded. This was done in response to a request of the school committee.

The Diplomas.

Judge James H. Flint will present the diplomas at the North High school graduation exercises.

H. A. Thomas will present those of the South High.

The Greatest Strike.

Among the greatest strikes that of Dr. Miles in discovering his New Heart Cure has proven itself to be one of the most important. The demand for it has become astonishing. Already the treatment of heart disease is being revolutionized, and many unexpected cures effected. It soon relieves short breath, fluttering, pains in side, arm, shoulder, weak and hungry spells, oppression, swelling of ankles, smothering and heart dropsy. Dr. Miles' book on Heart and Nervous Diseases, free. The unequaled New Heart Cure is sold and guaranteed by A. M. Bachelder & Co., also his Restorative Nervine for headache, fits, sprees, hot flashes, nervous chills, opium habit etc.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumpton and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

A REST FOR SOLONS.

Massachusetts Legislature Finishes Its Session.

THE SESSION WAS SHORT

As Compared with Previous Years—Important Work Accomplished Briefly Summarized—Substantial Presentations to the President and the Speaker.

BOSTON, June 12.—The legislature of 1891 was prorouged at about 7:30 p. m. yesterday.

The thanks of the senate were unanimously extended to President Sprague, and he was presented with "The Flying Mercury" in bronze, with mahogany pedestal.

Speaker Barrett was presented with a handsome mahogany clock, suitably inscribed.

The thanks of the senate were voted to Clerk Coolidge, also to Sergeant-at-Arms Adams.

What Has Been Accomplished.

The legislature of 1891 was in session for 156 days, the shortest period, except in 1888, since 1884. In that time it passed 423 acts and 118 resolves. Of these 423 acts were signed by the governor; eight were allowed to become laws without his signature, and two were vetoed and the vetoes sustained. The session has been held under peculiar circumstances, politically, and measures have had to run the gauntlet of a Republican house, a tied senate and a Democratic governor.

As usual, there was an attempt on the part of members—unsuccessful, however—to raise their own salaries, and a proposition to consider the salary question during the recess was defeated by the senate, as also a bill to fix the salaries for 1892. The vexed question of the Sam Adams bust was settled, and it will hereafter be labeled "Washington." The state board of education has been requested to investigate the subject of manual training and industrial education, and to the railroad commissioners have been committed the subjects of pensioning railroad employes, and the "zone" system of fares. A liberal appropriation has been made for the World's fair at Chicago, and three committees have been authorized to sit during the recess to consider the registration of land titles, the consolidation or abolition of state commissions, and the matter of a general and improved form of municipal charter and laws.

The Warmest Contest

was over the bill to redivide the state into congressional districts, which went before the governor in the shape in which it left the committee, and was signed during the last days of the session. The matter of the establishment of municipal lighting plants, although reported on adversly, became a law. The taxation of street railway franchises occupied much of the time of the committee on cities, and a bill was reported, but it finally was sent to the rapid transit commission, in company with the proposed elevated and underground road. There has been less liquor legislation than usual and less attempt to alter this class of laws. In the end the friends of the public bar were successful, and that of use has been stricken from the statutes.

Fraternal beneficiary organizations, endowment companies and the bond schemes have received a large share of attention. A stringent bill affecting the first named was reported, and the fight came over its application to the law of last year, as to whether it should affect all companies or only those formed since a certain date in 1890; the upshot was that the whole matter was sent over to the next legislature. The bond schemes have been forbidden entirely. The taxation of foreign corporations has also occasioned much debate, the original bill containing many features which were considered harsh and unjust to the corporations; these were taken out, and a bill passed which, if it does not do much good, will at least do no harm.

Several matters which had almost reached the perennial class will be out of the way for the future, having become now part of the law. Among these are the weavers' fines bill, the change in the punishment for drunkenness, and the regulation of the sale of household goods containing arsenic. The companion of the weavers' fines bill, that to regulate the hours of tour-workers in paper mills, was successful in the house, but met its usual fate in the senate. Those which have been knocking at the door for several years, and which are the regulation of mercantile agencies, the sale of new railroad stock at public auction, woman suffrage, publication of election expenses, legalization of sale of cigars, etc., and of harbor work on Sunday, amendment to the employers' liability act, the dog question and several matters intended to increase the taxable property of the state, including the "doomage" bill.

Two proposed amendments to the constitution have been agreed to for the second time, that to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting and that to require a majority of either branch of the Legislature for the transaction of business. Biennial elections was unsuccessful, as was also a proposition that the consent of a majority of the inhabitants of a town should be required for its division.

As usual, there has been much legislation and attempted legislation regarding the city of Boston. One of the most important is that for the appointment of a board of survey for the location, laying out and construction of highways.

The Cry of the Farmers has at last been heard, and the result is a bill to prevent deception in the manufacture and sale of imitation butter, and another to establish a state dairy commission.

The Mechanics' Savings bank of Reading and the Pentucket Savings bank of Haverhill have been incorporated, and the Shawme Savings bank of Sandwich has been dissolved, as well as the Revere Co-operative bank and the Canadian Co-operative bank of Lowell. New safe deposit and trust companies are the State Street of Boston, Haverhill, Gloucester and Mattapan; loan and trust companies, Winthrop, Somerville, North Essex of Newburyport and Fall River. Many of these bills, in fact nearly all of them, have been allowed by the governor to become laws without his signature.

Bills Affecting the Cities of the State are: Relating to the apportionment of sewer assessments; authorizing the ordinances to govern the sale of prepared wood, slabs, etc.; relating to the watering of streets; relating to stables; relating to temporary loans by cities and towns; to restrict the height of buildings. Cambridge, Haverhill, Holyoke and Taunton have been authorized to borrow money outside their debt limits.

There have been no radical changes in the election laws, but many minor improvements have been made.

New incorporations: Boston, Cape Cod and New York Canal company, Gloucester Board of Trade, Petersham memorial library, Waushacum Lake company, Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial society, Dorchester Historical society, the Security Live Stock Insurance company. Authority has been granted for the formation of a corporation for the purpose of generating and furnishing hydrostatic pressure for mechanical power. The commissioner of corporations has also been authorized to change the names of corporations.

Legislation Affecting Railroads has been various minor amendments to the grade crossing law; to allow further time for the extension and construction of the New York and Massachusetts railway, and of the New York and Boston Inland Railroad company; relative to the making up and shifting of freight trains and the sounding of locomotive whistles; to authorize the Boston and Lowell Railroad corporation to increase its capital stock; to regulate the heating of passenger cars, and to authorize the Boston and Maine railroad to acquire by purchase the road, franchises and property of certain railroad corporations.

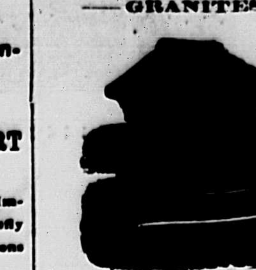

Miscellaneous Legislation:

To give towns jurisdiction over highways and county bridges; relative to sessions of registrars of voters in towns; to incorporate the town of West Tisbury; to provide for the filling of vacancies in town offices; to prohibit the employment of prisoners outside their places of confinement; to provide for the use of machinery in the state prison, reformatories and houses of correction; relating to trials in the superior court without a jury; to establish the district court of Southern Norfolk; conferring additional jurisdiction upon the superior court, including the trial in capital cases; to enlarge the jurisdiction of notaries public; to prevent persons from unlawfully using or wearing the badges of the Sons of Veterans and Woman's Relief corps; to authorize foreign life insurance companies to transact the business of accident insurance; to regulate the sale of candy shells inclosing liquor containing alcohol; relating to the unlawful issuing of certificates of divorce; concerning the better protection of infants; to provide against the depredations of the gypsy moth; concerning the militia; to authorize the state board of agriculture to collect and circulate information relating to abandoned farms; requiring the examination of reservoirs, reservoir dams and mill dams by county commissioners; constituting nine hours a days' work for county employes; to incorporate the trustees of public reservations; to prevent the manufacture and sale of clothing made in unhealthy places; relating to the bribery of certain public officers; relating to the distribution of the school fund; relating to the promotion of anatomical science; to aid small towns to provide themselves with school superintendents; relating to the employment of minors who cannot read and write in the English language; raising the compulsory school age to 15 years in cities and towns where opportunity is given for industrial education.

More Water.

Many residents are asking,—What is the matter with the water service? No high pressure Sunday and none in the morning of either Monday or Tuesday. Many takers could hardly draw any water at all, and the lawn hose was rendered wholly useless in some localities.

JOHN KELLEY, Weymouth, Mass.

The Monatiquot Yacht Club to boast a 40-footer.

On Saturday last, E. F. Linton, of Brooklyn, the Vice-Commodore of the Monatiquot Yacht Club, purchased the sloop yacht Hypatia. She is now being put into commission and will be sailed around from New York when ready.

The Hypatia is about 36 ft. water line and 41 ft. over all. She is a beauty and closely resembles the famous Burgess boats: is painted white, has an overhanging stern, although not so long as the Burgess sterns. She is a very roomy and comfortable boat and has ample cabin accommodations for cruising, with a fore-castle room for the crew.

While the Hypatia is a fast boat and is rigged for racing, that is, has a large sail plan, but we learn from Mr. Linton that he does not expect to do much racing with her but will probably take many delightful cruises about the bay and along the North shore. With the Monatiquot flag carried aloft by this 40-footer the club will gain an increased prestige in the brotherhood of yacht clubs.

Mr. Linton arrived here on the morning of the 17th and made arrangements for the dredging of a large basin back of his house, to be six feet deep at low water so that his 40-foot steam launch, the Enid, and the other boats of his little fleet may float there at all times of tide. The suggestions of the government inspector, Mr. Gillan, were sought and are to be adopted and the work will be under his supervision.

It is being suggested that now, while the dredger is in the river, the Yacht Club ought to have the little brooklet in front of the Club house deepened so that the fleet could make a landing there at low water. Perhaps the example of what Mr. Linton is doing for his personal convenience may stir them up.

A Monatiquot Yacht Captures First Prize in a Gale off Nahant. The Posy is not a Fair Weather Craft.

The Posy, Capt. R. G. Hunt, surprised her friends and astounded her enemies by the manner of her sailing during the northeast storm of the 17th, in the regatta off Nahant. The wind blew a gale and the sea was very rough, so rough that the larger proportion of the boats entered failed to start, and of the seven starters in the Posy's class, all withdrew excepting the Posy and Whie Fawn. Some of those who backed out were the famous Cape boats, who are always praying for "a breeze," and this time got more than they wanted. That the Posy should battle around the course under a two-reefed mainsail and a storm jib, showed pluck in her skipper, Mr. J. James, of Hull, and an unlooked-for ableness in the boat herself.

The White Fawn, also a Monatiquot yacht, won the second prize. She did fine work, coming in a few seconds ahead of the Posy but losing the race on corrected time, being the larger boat.

The Latest on Wrinkles.

The latest idea in regard to wrinkles is that they are entirely unnecessary, and may be avoided if you will but "mind your eye," or, more properly speaking, mind both eyes. This is to be done by keeping them widely opened, in child fashion, during the day time, and by closing them softly and evenly when you settle yourself for sleep. With the last moment of consciousness the face must be composed and the eyelids shut firmly, but not compressed, for this will make little wrinkles in them; neither must they be puckered up at the corners, as for a smile.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

The Usual Form for Notes of Acceptance or Regret in Answering Invitations.

Notes of acceptance or regret should be written briefly but courteously, and in the same person as that in which the invitation to be answered has been sent, says a writer on manners who is a member of New York's most exclusive circles; either "Dear Mrs. Green: It gives me great pleasure," etc., or "Mr. and Mrs. Brown accept with pleasure Mr. and Mrs. Green's very kind invitation for Tuesday evening," etc. In writing or answering invitations, or even letters, it is considered bad form to use figures instead of writing the numbers out. Invitations should always be answered in the present tense.

Invitations on a visiting card to a general entertainment require no answer, unless one is particularly requested.

In declining an invitation a polite excuse for absence should always be given. For instance, "Mr. and Mrs. Brown regret extremely that a previous engagement prevents them from accepting Mr. and Mrs. Green's kind invitation to dinner, Tuesday," etc.; or, whatever the reason may be, endeavor to express it politely in the note sent in reply.

The Charm of Fine Manners.

No one who has an appreciation of grace and beauty in nature or in art can fail to recognize the charm of fine manners in an individual. We rejoice in them as we do in a lovely sunset view or a beautiful piece of architecture or a fascinating poem, for their own sake and for what they express. But even beyond this they have another attraction in the magnetic power they exert upon all beholders in setting them at ease, in sweeping away shyness, awkwardness and restraint, and in stimulating them to the expression of whatever is best worth cherishing within them. It is undoubtedly true that the presence of fine manners, whether it be in the home or the social circle, in the workshop or the counting room, in the visit of charity or in the halls of legislation, has an immediate effect in reproducing itself, in diffusing happiness, in developing the faculties, and in eliciting the best that is in everybody.

Ladies' Visiting Cards.

The newest visiting cards for ladies are large and inclining to square in shape. A young lady's card just out, from a fashionable New York stationer's, measures 2¼ by 3¼ inches, and the engraving is the small, somewhat heavy script that has been in use for some time. The street address is placed in the lower right hand corner.

A Safe and Profitable Investment

On the evening of June 9th a meeting was held in the hall over the Union Bank, in response to a call signed by Francis Ambler, T. A. Watson, Wm. H. Clapp, John J. Loud, Chas. T. Crane, James H. Flint, Chas. P. Hunt, Frank H. Mason, John B. Rhines and others, to consider the expediency of organizing a

After the following plan, viz.: The Association to have a capital stock represented by, and limited to 50 shares, requiring a payment down at the start, of

One Hundred Dollars on Each Share, and thereafter a

MONTHLY PAYMENT OF FIVE OR TEN DOLLARS,

as may be hereafter determined, until the shares shall have become worth $1,000 One Thousand Dollars each. The capital so raised and accumulated to be invested according to the best judgment of a Board of Investment, in desirable pieces of improved real estate, yeilding satisfactory returns. preferably

REAL ESTATE LOCATED IN WEYMOUTH AND VICINITY.

Or in land to be improved and sold, as may seem best for the interests of the Association, which has in view also the IMPROVEMENT OF THE TOWN, by the opening up of land for building purposes, tastefully laying out streets, squares, small parks, etc.

The meeting unanimously decided to organize such an association and appointed Wm. H. Clapp, Frank H. Mason and Chas. P. Hunt a committee to receive subscriptions for shares of stock. In furtherance of this object subscriptions will be received by the undersigned for shares, until June 22d at which time another meeting will be called, the organization perfected, by the adoption of articles of association, election of officers, etc. As the number of shares for sale is limited to fifty, it is expected they will be quickly taken, so that any one wishing to invest will do well to send in his name early, as, first come, first served, will be the motto. Any further information will be furnished by applying to either member of the committee., who do not hesitate to recommend this as a safe and profitable investment. No money will be received until the shares are all taken and the proper officers are appointed to receive it.

—Owing to an error of the compositor in last week's issue the notice of the game to be played between the Actives and the Hingham Centers was confused with the account of the game between the Wessagussets and the Alerts of Atlantic, in which contest the Wessagussets were victorious 11 to 10. The Actives were beaten by the Hingham Centers last Saturday 8 to 3. The same day the Wessagussets beat the King Philips, Jr., club of Rockland 26 to 4.

—The second "meet" of the horsemen was held last Fridry evening. A smaller number attended than was present the week before. They rode to Rockland. Quite a number of new saddles have been purchased, and there are rumors of a wholesale importation of saddle-horses from North Carolina.

—A party of a dozen well-known citizens of this village started at 2 a. m. Monday on a fishing excursion to Minot's Light via Cohasset. They returned about 6 p. m., having had excellent success among the denizens of the deep. Sixty fishes were taken. John A. Fogg was "high line," having sixteen to his credit, the largest weighing about eight pounds. Neptune was propitious and exacted no tribute from his visitors.

—The graduating exercises of the South High School will be held in Fogg's Opera House next Friday evening. Owing to the large number of graduates, the largest in the history of the school, the exercises will begin at 7.30 o'clock instead of 7.45 as formerly. Seats will not be reserved after that time, and holders of tickets will confer a favor upon the class and the school authorities by being on hand promptly that the exercises may be finished at a seasonable hour. A reception will be given by the class to their friends at the conclusion of the graduating exercises.

—At the Union church Sunday afternoon Wildey Lodge I. O. O. F. and Abigail Adams Degree Lodge D. of R., attended a service in memory of brothers and sisters deceased during the past year. Mr. M. S. Nash, for many years principal of the Hanover High School, delivered the address.

—D. D. G. M. Louis A. Cook delivered a memorial address before Webster and Vida Lodges I. O. O. F. at Whitman last week.

—The thermometer at E. Nash's drug store registered 96 in the shade Monday afternoon and 98 Tuesday at the same hour.

—Children's Sunday will be observed at the Universalist church next Sunday.

—Free lemonade will be served at the auction sale of house-lots by Louis A. Cook next week Saturday. Already over 300 estimates have been registered. The plan of the lots has been prepared and the house-lot to be given away will be indicated upon it before the sale. Pleasant View is to be the name of this locality which is now opened up for settlement. Nearly all of the building in South Weymouth within the last five years has been in this neighborhood. A dozen new houses have been erected in that time, and four more are to be finished this season.

—Speaker Barrett was shown the beauties of South Weymouth from F. Wilbur Loud's new laudau, on the occasion of his visit as the guest of the Improvement Association.

—Mrs. Lucinda French observed her seventy-second birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Adoniam Vining at South Weymouth, Wednesday. There were 35 friends present. A collation of ice cream, cake, etc., was served. A barge load of East Weymouth friends were conveyed there by E. C. Raymond.

—At the Cat Show held for the last two weeks by the Boston Cat Breeders' Association, Mr. J. Forest Torrey was awarded a very handsome medal as 2d prize for handsomest cats. There was about 100 on exhibition and his was very much admired.

Lack of Interest.

The management of the Orcutt family reunion has decided not to hold any reunion this year owing to a lack of interest.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by druggists, 75c. per bottle.

—Chas. Carpenter is home again from a trip through the west.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Jordan are spending a few days with friends at Beverly.

—The schools, stores and factories closed the 17th. A large number of citizens attended the celebration at Charlestown.

—E. F. Linton was in town on the 17th.

—Artemus Binney who mysteriously disappeared some time ago arrived home on the 17th. He has been working in a town near Boston.

—A. J. Richards & Sons have bought a new hoisting engine.

—Mrs. Sarah W. Glover of Dorchester, a sister of the late Naaman L. White, this week presented John Griffin with the deed of a lot of land on Elliot street in appreciation of the faithful services rendered by that gentleman. John is very much pleased with the gift. The land adjoins the land on which his house is located.

—The sunrise guns at the forts in the harbor could be distinctly heard in this village on the morning of the 17th.

—A charming garden party was given by the directors of the Little Light Bearers of Union church last Saturday afternoon on the lawn of Mr. Erastus Nash. Mrs. Alden and Granville Bowditch, Mrs. C. T. Crane, Mrs. Albert Hobart and Mrs. Erastus Nash were the patronesses. There were a number of invited guests, including Rev. Mr. Huckel, the pastor. The children had a jolly time with tennis playing, see-saws, chorus singing, pony riding and abundant ices and other refreshments.

—The installation of Rev. Mr. Huckel as pastor of Union church will take place next Tuesday evening. The preacher of the occasion will be the Rev. Dr. Reuen Thomas of the Harvard church, Brookline, Dr. Thomas has been pastor of the Harvard church for fifteen years, is an eloquent preacher and lecturer, the author of several books, the president of the Congregational Club of Boston, and last year was the American preacher before the International Peace Congress at London. Dr. Thomas goes abroad again in a few weeks to preach for the famous Dr. Joseph Parker of London. The installation service also includes addresses by the Revs. Dr. Dean of Holbrook and Bolster of South Weymouth. The public is cordially invited.

—Miss Susan C. Richards graduated this week from Lasell Seminary at Auburndale. At the Class Day exercises on Monday evening she read the Class History, which was one of the brightest and wittiest parts on the programme; at the Commencement exercises on Wednesday evening she read an interesting and well written essay.

—The Strawberry festival of the Y.P.S.C.E. connected with the Universalist society will be held in Lincoln hall, Wednesday evening next, the time having been changed from Tuesday evening on account of the Installation services at the Union church. A very attractive entertainment will be given. See small bills.

—Master Chas. E. Hunt of this village and Master Edward Sampson of North Weymouth, went to Tufts college yesterday to take the preliminary examinations for admission to the Freshman class. There are six boys in Tufts from this vicinity:—A. Everett Peterson, George Arnold, Lewis Arnold, Howard Edson, Clarence Eaton and Joseph Hardwick. Peterson and Geo. Arnold are members of the Senior class. Five of these boys were from a single class in the Sunday school connected with the Weymouth Universalist society.

—A meeting of the Executive committee of the Weymouth Improvement Association was held at Arcanum hall, Monday evening. It was reported that there was a balance on hand of $2.50 from the supper. Also a vote of thanks was passed to those who furnished the musical entertainment. The night policeman reported that he would like an incandescent light in Lincoln square after 12 m. He was appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions for the same. There was a discussion in regard to the Electric railroad and a committee of four was appointed to secure subscriptions for shares, namely: D. J. Pierce, F. H. Mason, E. C. Porter and John E. Hunt. $10 was appropriated for the Broad street school house grounds.

—Children's Day at Union church was exceedingly pleasant. The pulpit decorations were very pretty. The solos by Mrs. Worster and Miss Annie F. Loud, the boy's quartette and the children's chorus, as well as the choir's special anthems were much enjoyed; and the morning address of Rev. Dr. W. A. Duncan of Boston, and the evening talk on "Roses and Lilies" by Rev. Mr. Huckel were timely and suggestive.

Weymouth Heights.

—Mrs. L. S. Thompson has been visiting her home in Pontiac, R. I.

—The dime party given at Mrs. Charles Nash's Tuesday evening was quite a success. A good sized number was present and the eatables soon disappeared. About $8.50 was obtained toward defraying the expenses of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's lecture.

—Edmund Humphrey is dangerously ill.

—Miss Lottie Easton of Somerville has been visiting Mr. I. L. Wildes the past week.

—Emerson L. Hunt, Rev. M. Blanchard and several others started at 1.30 a. m. Wednesday morning on a fishing trip to Lilly pond, Scituate. A goodly number of the finny tribe were landed and will probably form the subject of many a "fish" story.

—W. H. Crockett is enjoying a two weeks vacation.

—Mrs. Quincy Pratt is improving after an illness of about two weeks.

—Mrs. Farren's ice cream parlor has a good patronage.

—Next Sunday Rev. Mr. Johnson of Peabody is expected to fill the pulpit of the Old North church. He is reported to be one of the ablest preachers of Essex county.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

Among the people of the stage who are said to be contemplating matrimony is J. K. Emmet. The future Mrs. Emmet, according to rumor, is Helen Sedgewick, a clever actress and a daughter of Commodore Brady. Rose Coghlan, formerly the wife of Clinton G. Edgerly, is about to go to the altar again, it is whispered, at the side of John T. Sullivan, an actor and manager from Detroit. Margaret Mather, whose previous conjugal venture was not a happy one, will try again, this time finding a husband in the leading man of her company, Otis Skinner.

Augustin Daly and A. M. Palmer are both enthusiastic collectors of dramatic literature. Fanny Davenport is a careful reader of history. Richard Mansfield is an omniverous reader. Francis Wilson's literary hobby is Napoleon Bonaparte. He reads French as well as English. Daniel Frohman and Ned Harrigan both read popular novels. J. K. Emmet reads all sorts of literature in three or four languages. Ada Dyas and Agnes Booth are fond of books, as are also Lily Langtry and Lillian Russell. Clara Morris frequently spends hours in a bookstore, and leaves with half a dozen volumes in her arms.

Francis Wilson's new house at New Rochelle, N. Y., is three stories high, the top story being devoted to a miniature theater.

Alfred McDowell, the comedian who died not long ago in Baltimore, had played the part of Asa Buck in "Mugg's Landing" more than 1,000 times.

William Haworth, brother of Joseph Haworth, the famous actor, is making a reputation as a playwright. A new nautical drama from his pen, called "The Ensign," will be produced next season.

BICYCLE NOTES.

The solid tire is fast becoming obsolete on English race tracks. So general has the pneumatic's use become that by next year the solid will be a curiosity if ridden at all in races.

Montagu A. Holbein, the English road rider and champion for twenty-four hours' ride, is a great believer in walking, often covering as much as thirty miles on foot, and finishing with sixty miles awheel.

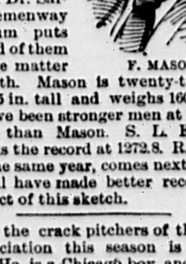

The annual election of the New York Bicycle club placed the following members in office: President, F. W. Kitching; vice president, Frank I. Stott; secretary, W. E. Findley; treasurer, E. J. Shriver; captain, J. M. McFadden.

The pneumatic being still an uncertain mount in some respects, the cushion is receiving more than usual attention. W. F. Murphy, who has been riding a cushion ordinary, speaks very highly of it, while Gerwing, of Denver, thinks it will in a measure re-establish the ordinary as a racing favorite. Murphy won on both a pneumatic safety and a cushion ordinary at the Berkeley games, so that his opinion is the more valuable.

Under a new law just passed at Canarsie, L. I., any wheelman caught riding on the sidewalk will be fined ten dollars, while the roads are sandy and impossible to ride.

The Strongest Man at Harvard.

Here is a picture of the strongest man at Harvard. His name is F. Mason, and he is well known among college athletes as a clever ball player, a good man at football and an all round expert in the gymnasium. There are many more famous athletes who wear the crimson than Mason, but his record of 992.8 in Dr. Sargent's Hemenway gymnasium puts him ahead of them all in the matter of strength. Mason is twenty-two years old, 5 ft. 5 in. tall and weighs 160 pounds. There have been stronger men at Harvard, however, than Mason. S. L. Foster, of 1885, holds the record at 1272.8. R. W. Boyden, of the same year, comes next, and ten men in all have made better records than the subject of this sketch.

F. MASON.

One of the crack pitchers of the American association this season is John F. Doran. He is a Chicago boy, and is doing great work in the box for last season's pennant winners.

In a different way from that advocated by the Nationalists, but none the less surely, co-operation rules the hour. In these times the individual can do nothing in great industrial enterprises. He must combine with those in the same line of business. One of the largest combines in the country has been made among the tobacco warehouse men in Louisville and Cincinnati. They have formed a corporation with a capital stock of $4,000,000 and authority to issue bonds to the amount of $1,000,000.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—As the years go by the flag for which he fought is more highly prized by J. Q. Spear, so much so that he has erected a flag-staff on his own grounds, and last Saturday raised his flag and dedicated it with a very pretty ceremony. To Miss Julia Sylvester was given the honor of hoisting the flag for the first time. A select quartette of ladies sang The Star Spangled Banner and other patriotic airs. Short speeches were made and war experiences reviewed. Lemonade was served and the meeting broke up with cheers for the flag.

—Peter W. French is attending the Master Mechanic Railroad Convention at Cape May.

—Isaac Lawrence and family have gone to the Vineyard for the season.

—The home of Col. B. S. Lovell was the scene of a very pleasant affair last Friday night, the occasion being an entertainment and sale by the "Whatsoever Circle" of King's Daughters, Mrs. W. T. Rice, president. The entertainment consisted of piano duet by Mrs. G. W. Baker and Mr. A. M. Raymond; songs by the Hummel quartette, Mrs. H. F. Thayer of Holbrook, and Miss Jennie Thayer. Ice cream and other refreshments were served. The tables of useful and fancy articles and home-made candies were well patronized, the affair netting about $75 which goes to charity work. In entertaining the two hundred people present Mrs. Lovell was ably assisted by Miss L. Charlotte Lovell and all had a good time.

—Stephen Cain, Jr. is confined to the house with a severe attack of rheumatism.

—Mrs. Oliver Burrell and daughter, Mrs. Mark R. Plaisted, of Riverside, Cal., are visiting their old home and friends, having arrived Wednesday night, making the through trip in six days.

—G. C. Pratt of Jackson, Mich., who took from Weymouth the celebrated vocalist, Miss Ruth Holbrook, is visiting friends here with his son.

—Geo. Dyer is missed from his business, being confined to the house by illness.

—N. D. Canterbury, John A. and Arthur M. Raymond and their wives celebrated the anniversary of the battle Bunker Hill by a supper at the Bowen house, Weymouth Neck, and think it not necessary for people to go out of town to get a first-class shore banquet.

—Crescent Lodge No. 82, I. O. O. F. will hold memorial services in Odd Fellows Hall Sunday, at 2.30 p. m. Past Grand James M. Usher and P. G., H. A. Thomas will address the meeting. The singing will be by the Hummel Ladies Quartette and the Haydn Male Quartette. The public are invited.

—Wednesday, June 17, the East Weymouth W. C. T. U. spent the day with Mrs. Chas. Wollaver at her residence, Wollaver Farm, Hingham. A nice clam chowder was served at noon. The regular meeting of the Union was held in the afternoon, after which vocal and instrumental music was given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond and Misses Lillie and Edith Wollaver; songs by Edith Burrell; recitations by Mrs. Sarah Bagley, Harold Burrell, and Charles Gumb. A collation of cake and cream was then furnished and a vote of thanks was most heartily given Mrs. Wollaver for liberal hospitality.

—The Loyal Legion held a pleasing entertainment at Temperance Hall, Monday afternoon. The last meeting of the season will be held next Monday afternoon, when final arrangements will be made for the anniversary.

—Mrs. Barnes of Lowell is visiting Mrs. Nelson W. Gardner.

—Barzillah Holmes and Ezra Davee of Plymouth are visiting Frank Holmes.

—The Reform Club has taken a new lease of life and added interest is brought out at each meeting. The gathering Monday night was no exception to the rule and in spite of the excessive hot weather there was a good attendance and much enthusiasm manifested. Two new members were added to the club.

—John K. Bean has leased the old two story schoolhouse building on High street. It is reported that the upper room will be let to the Holiness people for their meetings.

—Constable Furnald of Quincy and Officers Bailey, Tirrell and Ells raided the premises of Patrick Lonergan on Pleasant street and seized a small quantity of hard liquors. Lonergan was fined $60 for keeping liquor with intent to sell, in the Quincy court Tuesday. He appealed.

—Mrs. Daniel C. Earle of Lynn has been visiting her son, W. C. Earle.

—Mrs. Charles H. Delano of Chicago is visiting friends in this place.

—The residence of John K. Bean has been made more attractive by the application of a coat of paint.

—Mrs. Henry B. Raymond, County President of the Norfolk County W. C. T. U., presided over the quarterly convention of the Union at Medfield, last Friday.

—The teachers of the Washington school will make a new departure this year, and will have their Visitors' Day exercises in the morning instead of in the afternoon as heretofore. Tuesday will be Visitors' Day in Miss Belcher's, Miss Webster's, and Miss McGreevy's rooms; and Wednesday in Miss Tirrell's, Miss Keohan's, and Miss Litchfield's rooms. All are cordially invited to attend.

—Rev. Daniel S. Healy, pastor of the church of the Immaculate Conception, has been granted a vacation. His place has been taken by Rev. Father Bolan of Gloucester.

—A party composed of Lawyer C. H. Burdette, James L. Lincoln, Samuel Healey, Percy Williams, Joshua Cook, James A. Roarty and Edward McGrath made a fishing trip to Minots Light with Captain Collier from Cohasset Harbor Wednesday. The sea was so rough that the majority of the party were too sick to fish and although they threw plenty of bait overboard six fishes was the result of the trip. A pool was made up for the first fish, the largest fish, and the most fish caught by any member of the party. Percy Williams received the prize for the first catch, J. A. Roarty the prize for the largest, and Williams and J. L. Lincoln divided the honors on the largest catch, 2 each.

—Will H. Pratt has the sympathy of the public in the loss of his little daughter.

—Visitor's Day at the Middle street school: Miss Egan's and Miss Hawes' room Tuesday, beginning at 2 p. m. Miss Dee and Miss Gardner will hold their exercises in Miss Dee's room, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Parents and friends are cordially invited.

—The "Twilights" of the Valley beat the Lovells Corner's by a score of 7 to 6 at the latter place last Saturday.

—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Burgess are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a daughter.

—Mrs. Job Young is visiting her daughter Mrs. W. F. Burrell at Holbrook.

—A delegation from Pilgrim Lodge No. 485 K. of H., were the guests of Grand Guardian Fred M. Hersey at Hingham, Wednesday evening.

Braintree.

Children's Sunday.

Last Sabbath was Children's Sunday and the day was so observed at the First Parish church. The pulpit, the platform—indeed the entire end of the church was profusely decorated with flowers and presented a beautiful appearance. The weather was perfect and allowed the children to be out in large numbers, and look very charming and kept very still as they certainly did. A very successful and interesting programme of exercises was given by members of the Sunday-school under the direction of Deacon Thomas Sampson, superintendent; a number of children were presented for baptism and an appropriate sermon by the pastor concluded the services. Vesper services were held in the evening from 6.30 p. m. to 7.30 p. m., and were of a similar character to those of the morning.

—Frank Rudderham, one of Braintree's young men who has considerable skill in the science of base ball, has signed for the season with the John P. Lovell Arms Co.'s team.

—Canoeing is becoming almost as much of a rage as tennis. The launching of a handsome canoe by Philip Fowler occurred at Morrison's pond Wednesday afternoon, and after the accomplishment the Canoe Club picnicked in their canoes in the middle of the pond.

—The lawn party which was to have been given at Mrs. Josephus Shaw's was held at the chapel Wednesday evening and drew quite a large number notwithstanding the inclement weather. No entertainment was given as the change of weather was too sudden for any arrangement, but with ice cream, cake and lemonade every one enjoyed a social time and passed a pleasant evening.

—The new time-table arrangement which went into effect Monday is causing needless anxiety and no little comment among the people. A practicable solution of the rapid transit problem for suburbans has been attempted and will no doubt be effected by the capable and energetic superintendent of the Old Colony, and with the throng of persons desirous to take advantage of the facilities the pecuniary benefit to the town cannot be small.

—O. Q. Ball, driver of oil wagon for Maverick Oil Company, dedicated his new barn Friday night. Delegations were present from Weymouth and a host of friends and neighbors. The dedicatory speech was by Rt. Hon. John Foster Gray of Weymouth, after which a valuable light driving harness, made by Hill & Langley of Boston, was presented to Mr. Ball, Mr. D. F. Joy of East Weymouth making the presentation speech. Mr. Ball responded in a few well chosen remarks in a feeling manner. Tirrell's orchestra of East Weymouth furnished music and the ever-comical Danny Haley entertained the audience with songs and clog dancing; Mr. Welch of East Weymouth rendered a few selections on the harmonica. A bountiful collation was served and merry couples tripped the light fantastic till early morning.

—The graduation exercises at the Thayer Academy will take place Saturday afternoon, June 27, at 1 o'clock, and the High school graduation will be in the Town Hall, Thursday evening, June 25, at 7.45 o'clock.

—The Odd Fellows initiated two new candidates at their meeting Tuesday evening, and later sat down to a very appetizing "spread."

—The Rebekah's of South Braintree visited the lodge of Milton last Friday night and enjoyed a very pleasant time.

—Thirteen to eight was the score between the Braintree club and that of the Standard Clothing Co. of Boston, in favor of the latter, on French's common last Saturday.

—Children's Sunday was very appropriately observed and the church beautifully decorated at the South Congregational church last Sunday. Rev. E. O. Dyer preached an interesting discourse and next Sabbath will preach from the text, Church Creeds.

—On Decoration Day the Junior Tennis Club entertained some Weymouth tennis players by whom they were badly beaten, so much so that in order to preserve the standing of the club Messrs. Hollis and Patten visited the players on Hunt's grounds at Weymouth last Wednesday, the 17th, and defeated Messrs. Field and Hunt 3 to 1.

North Weymouth Gleanings.

—Mrs. Lemuel Torrey received quite severe injuries from a fall Tuesday. Mrs. Torrey is over eighty years old, and the injury to her hip, it being broken in two places, is such that recovery is doubtful.

—J. R. Orcutt has put in a handsome soda fountain.

—David Kidder is confined to the house by slight illness.

—Sunday night a team coming around Torrey's corner slew in such a manner as to throw the seats and the two occupants on to the sidewalk. The horse was in an exhausted condition and the men half drunk. It was claimed by the driver that the team was from the Arcade stables, Boston, and that he was taking it back there, but there being a suspicion that it was not all right the citizens refused to let the team go on. Upon this the men started on a run toward Quincy, but were overtaken by officer Walker and carried to the lock-up. They were taken to Quincy court the next morning and then it transpired that the team was stolen from the proprietor of the Pilgrim House, Centre Hill. When the Quincy court is through with them they will be taken to Plymouth to answer the charge of horse stealing.

POLE VAULTING.

Malcolm W. Ford Describes a Popular and Simple Sport.

HOW TO BECOME AN EXPERT AT IT

A Lively Brain Is More Necessary Than a Particularly Athletic Body—The Best Records—How to Handle the Pole. Dangers of the Game.

Pole vaulting is a game which strikes the average spectator as being unusually daring. To do it well an athlete must have plenty of science, for it is a combination of a little strength of arm, a little spring in jumping and a little speed in running. A champion at it need not be very strong, speedy or active, but he must have the ability to use what athletic talent he has to the best advantage. The game looks difficult, but in reality it is very simple. Any ordinary man, after a month's practice, should clear in the neighborhood of 9 feet. The average scratch competition at it is won between 10 feet and 10 ft. 6 in. There are only about a dozen athletes in the whole world who have cleared between 10 ft. 6 in. and 11 feet, and the only ones on record who have cleared over 11 feet are E. L. Stones and Thomas Ray, of England, and H. H. Baxter, of America. Stones holds the world's record at 11 ft. 7 in. Ray has cleared 11 ft. 6¼ in. and Baxter 11 ft. 5 in., the latter constituting the best American record.

RISING TO THE BAR.
[From an instantaneous photograph taken especially for this article.]

A beginner at the game is apt to be appalled at clearing even such a height as 6 feet, his arms are so unused to the exercise and he feels so perfectly at sea that he generally sprawls over the ground when using any force. The best practice for a novice is to get a good stout pole, one measuring between 12 and 14 feet in length and about 1¾ inches in diameter at the thickest part, which should be the middle. The pole may taper a little toward the ends. It should be of ash or hickory or any strong wood that is not too heavy. Spruce and pine have been used in some cases on account of their lightness, but unless they are extra large they are quite likely to break when an extra strain is put on them.

THE USUAL STYLE.
[From an instantaneous photograph taken especially for this article.]

Athletes should take extra care never to use a pole too light for them. The fact that some athletes do use poles that are altogether too weak is no reason why the custom should not be condemned. Several cases of death have occurred by the poles breaking and the jagged end piercing the athlete's body, and broken arms and fractured ribs have been numerous. If the beginner acquires the habit of using a strong, heavy pole he will find that there will be no inclination to use a light one, on account of his losing confidence by doing so.

The first trial at the game should consist in jumping a height which can be easily cleared. If the beginner is in a gymnasium he should use a pole with a spike in the end, and stick it on a block provided for the purpose underneath the bar to save the floor from injury, and also to give the athlete a better hold. If out of doors he should dig a hold in the dirt right underneath the bar, putting the end of his pole, which should be blunt, in the hole, which should not be over 6 inches deep. After accustoming himself to the exercise, and getting a little skill in lifting with his arms when in the air, he may go a little higher, but under no consideration should he try to clear a height where he must use so much force that he loses control of himself.

DROPPING THE POLE.
[From an instantaneous photograph taken especially for this article.]

The accompanying illustrations show very well the salient features of the game, and one can judge how far apart the arms should be on the pole, what sort of grip should be used and how the body must be handled while in the air. "Rising to the Bar" shows an athlete with his hands about three feet apart, and before he can clear it he must lift a good deal with his arms. A novice must not expect to be able to do so well as this athlete probably did, for he will not have the science, but this quality will come with practice. The novice need not hold his hands so far apart as this one, but they should be at least two feet apart.

The illustration, "The Usual Style," shows an athlete well over the bar with his chest to it. He has turned completely around, and there is probably no fear of the bar being displaced unless his arms should accidentally hit it. It will be noticed that his legs are thrown high in the air. It depicts the general style unusually well, and although it would be impossible for a beginner to go through the same movements even on a much lower height, still, with constant practice, it will be acquired before the athlete is aware of it.

"Dropping the Pole" illustrates the ending of a vault. The athlete is completely past the bar, and although it looks as though his right arm might displace it, still, when the body is so far advanced as this picture shows, all danger is past. The pole has been let go of and thrown a little back, as can be seen by the way it is leaning. The athlete will drop lightly to the loose dirt dug up for the purpose on one side of the bar, while the pole falls on the other side, and the leap is made. Pole vaulting is a game where great improvement can be made, because so much head work and so little athletic qualities are required as compared with other events.

ELECTRICAL BUILDING.

The Electrical Building occupies an area 350 feet 11½ inches in extreme width, and 766 feet 7¾ inches in extreme length; the area covered by the building is 211,190 square feet, or 4.85 acres, the major axis running north and south. The south front is on the great quadrangle or court, the north front faces the lagoon, the west front is opposite the Manufacturers' Building, and the east faces the Mines Building.

The general scheme of the plan is based upon a longitudinal nave 115 feet wide and 114 feet high, crossed in the middle by a transept of the same width and height. The nave and the transept have a pitched roof, with a range of skylights at the bottom of the pitch, and clear story windows. The rest of the building is covered with a flat roof, averaging 92 feet in height and provided with skylights.

The second story is composed of a series of galleries connected across the nave by two bridges, with access by four grand staircases. There are subordinate staircases in the four corners of the building. The area of the galleries in the second story, as at present arranged, is 118,542 square feet, or 2.7 acres, but there is capacity for extension of this area if necessary.

The exterior walls of this building are composed of a continuous Corinthian order of pilasters 3 feet 6 inches wide and 42 feet high, supporting a full entablature, and resting upon a stylobate 8 feet 6 inches. Above is an attic story 8 feet high, the total height of the walls from the grade outside being 68 feet 6 inches. This order is divided into bays 23 feet wide, this dimension serving as the module of proportion for the plan of the whole building.

In the center of each of the four sides is an entrance pavilion, against which the higher roof of the nave or transept abuts.

The north pavilion is placed between the two great apsidal or semicircular projections of the building; it is flanked by two towers 195 feet high. The central feature is a great semicircular window, above which, 102 feet from the grade, is a colonnade forming an open loggia or gallery, commanding a view over the lagoon and all the north parts of the ground. Access to the loggia is obtained by elevators.

The east and west central pavilions are composed of two towers 168 feet 6 inches high, between which the transept roof finishes in a gable or pediment with a row of windows beneath, giving light to the transept. In front of these two pavilions there is a great portico, composed of the Corinthian order, with full columns. Within this portico is an inner porch, forming a vestibule in each case.

The south pavilion is a hemicycle or niche 78 feet in diameter and 103 feet high. This niche is covered by a half dome with ribs and decorations in relief, the Corinthian order being carried round the walls of the niche. The opening of this niche is framed by a semicircular arch, the impost of which is supported by four full Corinthian columns continuous with the order of the facades. This arch is crowned by a gable or pediment with smaller gables on the returns, and surmounted by an attic, the whole reaching the height of 142 feet.

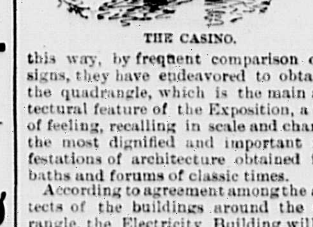

In the center of this niche, upon a lofty pedestal, is a colossal statue of Franklin, whose illustrious name intimately connects the early history of the Republic with one of the most important discoveries made in the phenomena of electricity. In order to carry out this idea, on the frieze of the great order around the niche appears the Latin inscription, "Eripuit cœlo fulmen sceptrumque tyrannis."

At each of the four corners of the building there is a pavilion, above which rises a light open spire or tower 169 feet high. Intermediate between these corner pavilions and the central pavilions on the east and west sides there is a subordinate pavilion bearing a low, square dome upon an open lantern. There are thus ten spires and four domes, which combine to give to the otherwise rigid horizontal lines of the building an effect of lightness and animation in accord, it is hoped, with the purposes of the building.

All these towers are composed of one or more orders of architecture, with open arches, interior domes and balustrades. The entablature of the great Corinthian order breaks around each of the pilasters of the four fronts, and above each pilaster in the attic order is a pedestal bearing a lofty mast for the display of banners by day and electric lights by night. Of these masts there will be in all fifty-four.

The first story of the building is indicated in these facades between the great pilasters of the Corinthian order, by a subordinate Ionic order, with full columns and pilasters, forming an open screen in front of the windows of this story. Above this Ionic order is an order of arches in front of the windows of the second story. This Ionic order is converted into an arcade where it passes in front of the north pavilion, forming there an open portico with a wide balcony above looking toward the lagoon.

All this exterior ordonnance is carried out strictly according to the formulas of the Italian Renaissance, all the architects employed upon the buildings forming the great quadrangle or square having agreed to use a strictly scholastic form of architectural expression, similar in respect to the height of the order, but varying in regard to its character and distribution. In this way, by frequent comparison of designs, they have endeavored to obtain for the quadrangle, which is the main architectural feature of the Exposition, a unity of feeling, recalling in scale and character the most dignified and important manifestations of architecture obtained in the baths and forums of classic times.

According to agreement among the architects of the buildings around the quadrangle, the Electricity Building will, like the rest, have an open portico extending along the whole of the south facade, the lower or Ionic order forming an open screen in front of it. The various subordinate pavilions are treated with windows and balconies. The details of the exterior orders are richly decorated, and the pediments, friezes, panels and spandrils will receive a decoration of figures in relief, with architectural motifs, the general tendency of which will be to illustrate the purposes of the building. It is intended that the friezes of the Ionic order shall bear in each bay the name of a discoverer or inventor associated with the development of the science of electricity, thus setting forth a biographical history of the science.

In the design of this building it is proposed by the architects to so devise its details and general outlines that they may be capable of providing an electric illumination by night on a scale hitherto unknown, the flagstaffs, the open porticoes and the towers especially being arranged with this in view. It is proposed that the hemicycle or niche which forms the south porch shall have either a great chandelier or crown of lights suspended from the center of the half dome, or shall be provided with electric lights masked behind the triumphal arch which forms the opening of the niche.

AGRICULTURAL BUILDINGS.

One of the most desirable and interesting features of the Exposition will be the proposed Live Stock and Agricultural Assembly Hall, the erection of which is now assured. This building will probably connect Machinery Hall with the Agricultural Building, fronting on the main court of the Exposition grounds, and will be conveniently near one of the stations of the elevated railroad. It will be a very handsome building, and will undoubtedly be the common meeting point for all persons interested in live stock and agricultural pursuits.

On the first floor, near the main entrance of the building, will be located a bureau of information, in charge of attendants, who will furnish visitors with all necessary information in regard to the Assembly Hall and the Main Agricultural Building, as well as other features of the Exposition. The first floor will also contain suitable committee and other rooms for the different live stock associations of every character, where such associations can meet and have their secretaries in constant attendance, thus affording this important industry ample headquarters near the live stock exhibit and the Agricultural Buildings.

On this floor there will also be large and handsomely equipped waiting rooms, with fireplaces for ladies, lounging rooms for gentlemen and ample toilet facilities. Broad stairways will lead from the first floor into the Assembly room, which will have a seating capacity of about fifteen hundred. This Assembly room will furnish facilities for lectures, which will be delivered by gentlemen eminent in their special fields of work, embracing every interest connected with live stock, agriculture and its allied industries.

When one considers that in this room almost daily there will be lectures delivered, papers read and discussions had, conducted by eminent specialists from all parts of the world, the importance of such a building for educational purposes is apparent. Taken in connection with the exhibits, this feature will make that part of the Exposition devoted to live stock, agriculture and horticulture a complete gathering together of all that an advanced civilization is capable of producing. In the Assembly Room the most approved theories will be advanced and explained. On the grounds and in the Agricultural and Horticultural buildings will be the best illustrations of what can be accomplished when these theories are put into practice.

Men who have made the dairy business, for instance, a life study will read papers and deliver lectures on matters connected with the dairy; and close at hand, in full operation, it is hoped to have a working dairy, affording a practical object lesson of the improved methods which have been applied to this industry. And so through all the branches of agriculture and horticulture, the Exposition as an educational means will be both theoretical and practical.

The entire second floor of the Assembly Building is given up to committee rooms, and rooms for headquarters for each and all of the different farmers' organizations in existence in this country. It will furnish a definite and pleasant home for all such organizations during the entire time of the Exposition, where each may have its secretary or other official constantly in attendance to furnish information and transact other business, and where the members can hold such consultations as they may desire.

MACHINERY HALL.

The main Machinery Building will measure 850 feet by 500. It is spanned by three arched trusses, and the interior will present the appearance of three railroad train houses side by side, surrounded on all the four sides by a fifty foot gallery. The trusses are all to be built separately, and so that they can be taken down and sold for use as railroad train houses, and it is hoped to have iron trusses instead of cheaper ones, which may, however, be necessary.

In each of these three long naves there is to be an elevated traveling crane running from end to end of the building. These will be useful in moving machinery, and when the Exposition opens platforms will be placed on them, and visitors will view from these the entire exhibition at a great saving of tramping.

Shafting for power will be carried on the same posts which support these traveling bridges. The exterior toward the stock exhibit and the railroad is to be of the plainest description. On the two sides adjoining the grand court the exterior will, however, be rich and palatial. All the buildings on this grand plaza are designed with a view to making an effective background for displays of every kind, and in order to conform to the general richness of the court and add to the festal appearance the two facades on the court are enriched with colonnades and other architectural features.

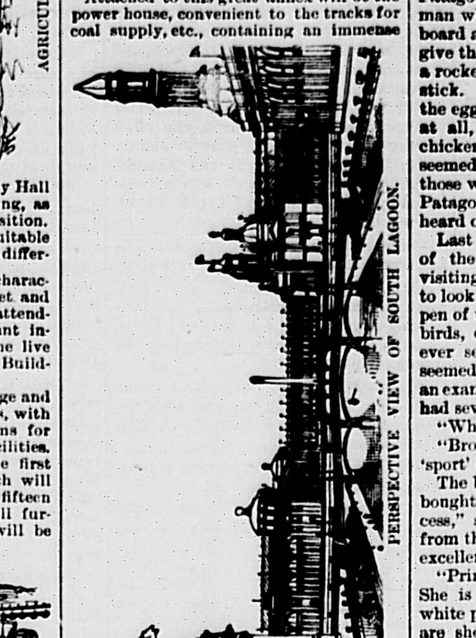

The design follows classical models throughout, the detail being borrowed from the Renaissance of Seville and other Spanish towns as being appropriate to a Columbian celebration. As in all the other buildings on the court, an arcade on the first story permits passage around the building under cover; and as in all the other buildings, the fronts will be formed of "staff," colored to an ivory tone. The ceilings of the porticoes will be emphasized with strong color.

A colonnade with a cafe at either end forms the connecting link between Machinery and Agricultural halls, and in the center of this colonnade is an archway leading to the cattle exhibits. From this portico there will be a view nearly a mile in length down the lagoon, and an obelisk and fountain placed in the lagoon between the two buildings, Agriculture and Machinery, will form a fitting southern point to this vista.

The Machinery annex will be placed in the rear of the Administration Building, and in the loop formed by the railroad tracks. It will be entered by tunnels or subways, as well as by bridges from Machinery Hall and the buildings for Administration, Mines and Transportation. It is to be a very large, but very simple building. While in the Main Machinery Building a railroad train house is the type, in the annex a mill or foundry will be considered the model for construction. It is all to be built of wood in the most simple and economical manner. Its shape, however, is peculiar. It is to be annular in form, the diameter of the outer radius being 800 feet and of the inner radius 600 feet.

The building will have a nave 100 feet wide, with a 50 foot wide lean-to in one story on the inside, and a 50 foot wide lean-to on the outside. Within the inner circle will be a park in which visitors, fatigued by the hum of machinery, may rest. The annular form chiefly commends itself, because a circuit electric elevated railway can run continuously around the entire main nave, and passengers in it can thus see the entire exhibit without leaving the cars, and machinery can be easily moved by this means. The power will be transmitted by shafting crossing the building at each bay, with a motor at each shaft. The electrical power will be used in the annex, and steam power in the Main Machinery Building.

Attached to this great annex will be the power house, convenient to the tracks for coal supply, etc., containing an immense display of boilers, while in the adjoining portion of the Annex Building will be established the enormous plant of engines and dynamos. This will probably be the largest and most interesting display of electrical power ever made. It is possible that gas will be used instead of coal for fuel beneath the boilers, and in that case a building will be prepared for making it.

PERSPECTIVE OF SOUTH LAGOON.

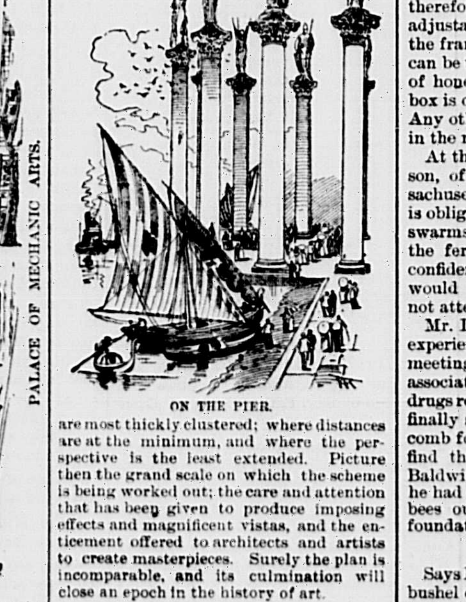

The view is taken looking south through the lagoon, which lies between the building for manufacturers and that for the display of electricity. This lagoon crosses the great basin, and terminates beyond the second bridge at the obelisk and fountain.

On the extreme right of the picture a portion of the east front and one of the towers of the Electrical Building are visible. Beyond and opposite the Building across the basis is seen part of the palace of Machinery, its eastern facade crowned with domes and towers.

On the extreme left is seen a corner of the west front of the Manufacturers' Building, and opposite this and across the basin the building for the agricultural exhibit. This building is connected with the palace of Machinery by the long colonnade in the center background, forming a great portico entrance to the live stock grounds farther south, and at the same time completing the monumental group on the south of the great basis. A triple arch bridge spans the lagoon in the foreground, affording communication between the Electrical and Manufacturers' buildings. It is only one of many such bridges which will be built in other parts of the grounds.

Notice to the right or the left the manner of terracing. From the water rises a sea wall whose coping guards access to the first terrace. In this wall gates and jetties will be arranged so that landings can be effected from the small boats of the park. This first terrace is the domain of the landscape gardener, and will be devoted to flowers, shrubbery and gravel walks. Some four feet above this terrace is the great paved platform serving as a base to the buildings. This platform is finished with balustrades, vases and statuary, and approach to it from the first terrace is gained at intervals by monumental flights of steps.

This view, looking as it does down the lagoon toward the great basin, represents a part of the grounds where the buildings are most thickly clustered; where distances are at the minimum, and where the perspective is the least extended. Picture then the grand scale on which the scheme is being worked out; the care and attention that has been given to produce imposing effects and magnificent vistas, and the enticement offered to architects and artists to create masterpieces. Surely the plan is incomparable, and its culmination will close an epoch in the history of art.

The Air We Require.

The following computations have been made in regard to the amount of air necessary for the average adult: In each respiration an adult inhales 1 pint of air. A healthy man respires 16 to 20 times a minute, or 25,000 times a day; a child 25 or 35 times a minute. While standing the adult respiration is 22 times per minute; while lying down, 13. The superficial surface of the lungs, i. e., of their alveolar space, is 200 square yards. The amount of air respired every 24 hours is about 12,000 quarts. The amount of oxygen absorbed in 24 hours is 500 liters (about 744 grams). The amount of carbonic acid expired in the same time is 400 liters (911.5 grams). Two-thirds of the oxygen absorbed in 24 hours is absorbed during the night hours, from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m.; three-fifths of the total is thrown off during the day. The pulmonary surface gives off 150 grams of water daily in the state of vapor.

An adult must have at least 360 liters of air in an hour. The heart sends 800 quarts of blood through the lungs every hour, or about 19,000 daily. The duration of inspiration is five-twelfths of expiration, seven-twelfths of the whole respiratory act. During sleep inspiration occupies ten-twelfths of the respiratory period.

Reading Aloud.

Eminent medical authority has commended the practice of reading aloud as a wholesome and invigorating exercise for mind and body. The late Sir Henry Holland said that persons who have a tendency to pulmonary disease should methodically practice "those actions of the body through which the chest is in part filled or emptied of air."

He advises that those whose chests are weak should read aloud at stated intervals, and even recite or sing, using due caution as to posture, articulation and the avoidance of excess.

"These regular exercises of the voice," he adds, "may be rendered as salutary to the organs of respiration as they are agreeable in their influence on the ordinary voice."

His Rise.

He bought a brand new pair of shoes,
He thought he'd get some spats;
He then discovered that he lacked
The latest thing in hats

He bought one. Then his trousers bagged
He ordered two new pair,
And then, strange fact! he noticed that
His coat was quite threadbare.

He bought another Then he saw
Some waistcoats Just the thing!
He had to get some ties to match;
He bought a diamond ring.

He joined three clubs. He bought a horse,
Then changed it for a team;
He bought a sailing yacht at first,
And then moved up to steam.

He bought these things, and many more,
This man so great and wise;
For during his career he had
The sense to advertise.

BROWN PATAGONIAN FOWLS.

Their Origin and Their Leading Characteristics.

Rural New Yorker discourses as follows on the Patagonians, black and brown, the latter being the preferred sort:

Several years ago a seedsman advertised a "new breed" of poultry—the Patagonian. A thrilling tale of a seaman who found a coop of these birds on board a South American ship served to give the breed a start. It went up like a rocket, but came down heavier than a stick. We bought several settings of the eggs, some of which failed to hatch at all, while others gave a variety of chickens of all sizes and colors. This seemed to be the experience of most of those who bought eggs, and the "Black Patagonians" are now practically unheard of.

Last year, however, we began to hear of the "Patagonians" again. While visiting Mr. C. S. Cooper's poultry yard to look at his Wyandottes, we noticed a pen of unique and strikingly handsome birds, different from anything we had ever seen before. At first sight they seemed to be small dark Brahmas, but an examination quickly showed that they had several distinct markings.

"What are those birds, Mr. Cooper?"

"Brown Patagonians! This breed is a 'sport' from the old black Patagonians."

The birds were so handsome that we bought a setting of eggs. The hen, "Princess," shown in the cut, was hatched from this first brood. The picture is an excellent likeness of the hen.

"Princess" weighs about 6¼ pounds. She is dark gray in color, with delicate white penciling in the feathers. Her legs are short, yellow in color, and lightly feathered. The comb is small and fully protected by a crest or "top knot," which gives the birds an airy and spirited appearance. The body is round and plump, with an astonishing amount of breast meat. In fact, if one could take a small dark Brahma hen, change her color a little, diminish the size of her comb, add a top knot, take some of the feathers from her legs and make them shorter, thicken her body and add breast meat and double her intelligence he would have a hen like "Princess."

Regarding the origin of the brown Patagonians Mr. Cooper tells that he bought a breeding pen of black birds for pure Patagonians. The first season he obtained a few brown chicks from their eggs, reserved the chicks and sold the original black ones. The succeeding season he had a mixture of brown and black chicks; preferring the browns, he disposed of the blacks and reserved browns only. These are the counterpart of the original purchase except in color. They are said to be hardy, fair layers of eggs and good table birds.

Things Told at Bee Meetings.

Mr. E. L. Pratt, of Beverly, Mass., in an address before a farmers' meeting in Boston, said on the subject of hives: "For either box or extract honey the eight frame size is about right, though I have been successful with seven Langstroth frames to the hives. It is natural for bees to store honey over the brood, therefore all honey receptacles should be adjustable to the top and directly over the frames, so arranged that two or more can be tiered up, according to the amount of honey being gathered. The standard box is of one piece and 4¼ inches square. Any other size is a drug on the market in the majority of cases."

At this same meeting Mr. W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, the well known Massachusetts market gardener, told that he is obliged to keep from fifteen to twenty swarms of bees to use in greenhouses for the fertilization of cucumbers. He is confident that if he did not have bees he would have no cucumbers, as he does not attempt to fertilize by hand.

Mr. Lyon, who has had considerable experience with foul brood, said, at the meeting of the International Beekeepers' association, that he had tried all the drugs recommended without success, and finally shook a colony into a new hive on comb foundation and was surprised to find them all right after that. L. W. Baldwin told at this same meeting that he had cured foul brood by shaking the bees out of the hives upon sheets of foundation.

What Others Say.

Says Rural New Yorker: A commercial bushel of potatoes weighs as much as a bushel of wheat, but the bushel of potatoes is four-fifths water, and it ought to be, and is, as easy to grow five bushels of potatoes as one bushel of wheat. And yet it is not uncommon for a bushel of potatoes to command as high a price as a bushel of wheat.

W. L. Rutherford, a successful breeder of Jersey cattle, says: In selecting breeding stock see that the dam is individually good; that the sire has an unbroken pedigree and is of a good strain, and especially that he has a good dam. It is an old saying that "the bull is half the herd." In my own experience I find the influence of the dam on the offspring to be greater than that of the sire.

Mr. Powell says a pig to be most profitable to the grower must be slaughtered at from 50 to 150 pounds. Beyond the latter figure the maintenance ration, he thinks, is too great.

Live and Let Live.

The newspaper that takes advertising to fill up with cannot prosper. A newspaper that has its rates too high cannot sell its space. There is a normal rate; that is, a rate which the publisher can afford to accept and make a profit, and which the advertiser can afford to pay and also make a profit. The profit must be mutual, else one or the other will quit.—Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel.

You can hear from your friends though they be far away;
When I'm struck with a hammer I generally stay;
I'm a very bad stopping place, shunned by good men;
Here's a bird which is nearly the size of a wren;
I'm dismal, to hear me no one ever cares;
I'm an ornament which every pussy cat wears;
There is no one who likes to have me cross his track—
When I come 'tis always with snap and with crack;
I'm delightful on mild summer evenings to take;
Use me should your boat spring aleak on the lake;
I always come handy in milking the cow;
When I'm drawn away we shall know why and how.

TOWN OF WEYMOUTH.

Board of Health.

DIPTHERIA, SCARLET FEVER, SMALL POX, MEASLES, and WHOOPING COUGH.

THE Board of Health hereby notify all persons interested, that on and after this date, the following provisions of Chapter 26 of the General Statutes will be strictly enforced.

Sec. 47. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . . any . . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . Board of Health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $100.

Sec. 48. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is afflicted with . . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . Board of Health of the town, and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $50, or more than $100.

The Board considers the above sections to apply to Diptheria, Scarlet Fever, Small Pox, Measles and Whooping Cough.

MARGUERY'S LETTER.

BOSTON, June 20, 1891.

A rainy Class Day! Weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth!

"But why in the world," says the utilitarian, "should anybody lament this glorious rain, when the crops were suffering, and all nature languishing for relief?" Because, dear old Prosy, for weeks and weeks all young feminine humanity within a radius of, I can't say how many miles, has been looking forward to the glories of Class Day at old Harvard as the red-letter day of the year. What consultations with Mesdames This, That, and the Other, over the most fetching costume each of these worthies could devise, what hours of anxiety and thought over the most diaphanous confection in the way of head gear, resplendent with more perfect flowers than ever nature formed.

And then to have all this for naught, or to be displayed in the teeth of a nor'-easter. Well enough it is for Charles Kingsley to glorify the east wind, he never knew its hateful qualities on Haryard Class Day. But the girls were all there. Yes, indeed. Some sensibly arrayed in tailor-made street gowns with hats to match, others compromised by wearing their chiffon hats with a thick frock, while numberless others defied the elements and wore the stunning rigs devised as aforesaid. These were not all "carriage girls" either, for the electric cars brought a large contingent.

And behold! the most delicate-hued fabrics, chiffon, crepe, silk or muslin, trailed along the muddy walks—which by night were minature lakes—from "his" room to the "the tree," back to some famous "spread" over to the "Gym" or "Memorial" for the dance's giddy maze, back to Holworthy to hear the Glee Club sing, and to see the illuminations, and all the time the pelting rain necessitated a big umbrella which protected the two heads obliged to be in such delightful proximity. The girls didn't mind the rain a bit. Of course there was no delicious moonlight to vie with the fantastic lanterns glow, and no chance for quiet flirtations, and strolls 'neath the historic elms, while the band discoursed sweet music. But then, an umbrella is not so bad a screen from curious eyes—though nobody is too curious on Class Day—and there were always journeys to the various halls with nobody for chaperon but the omniscient, omnipresent, and patronizing "Goody" to whom Class Days are of but little moment except in the way of the "tips" she received.

And when the lights were all out, their brave show quenched by the rain, the tired musicians had played the last note, the flowers all faded, the fun over, the girls all said that "'91 had been just too lovely for anything, and 'twas a shame it was over so soon." Dear girls, sic transit gloria mundi. In spite of Jupiter Pluvius, the clerk of weather, or the signal service bureau, you had a good time; 'tis past gone forever. To gray hair and wrinkles belong retrospection only, to the young alone is the future bright. We feel that in our time Class Days were a little better, the speeches a little wiser, the music sweeter and all things a little choicer. Forgive us, if our rheumatic joints, after hours of dampness and exposure, remind us we are no longer young, and even Class Days begin to pall.

It was somebody with a very bad attack of rheumatism, la grippe, or ill nature who, in one of our dailies, criticized the exercises around the tree, calling the scramble for the flowers high above the graduates heads, "brutal rather than festal" and wondering that it should be continued from year to year.

"Go to! old graybeard. Because thou art virtuous shall there be no more cakes and ale?"

No doubt in your day you were the maddest, merriest of the gang; or perchance you "got left" and 'tis envy which burns in your venerable breast.

Don't you see 'tis the last mad prank of the "boys" who, taking farewell of blissful college life, must from henceforth and forever bear the burden and heat of the day?

And if sometime in the mild struggle and merry-go-round a bit too much of a boy's person is displayed, remember 'tis not in a drawing-room, and Honi soit qui mal y pense. Besides, a friendly band is always ready with a protecting garment. Nurse your vapors in silence and let "the boys" have their fun, for as I have said, it cannot last long; it is soon over.

* * * * *

We get every kind of weather now-a-days, and the mercury hops about like an erratic flea! Of course 'tis very provincial, even countrified to talk much about the weather. But even the calmest person must have been moved to expostulate when the thermometer registered a hundred last week.

You who live in the country with more than enough room for the sole of your foot can have little idea of the condition of people in narrow quarters in town. And everybody who could get away left bricks and mortar for fresh fields and pastures green. But there are numbers of people who do not benefit by the change, I don't mean the poor either. Everybody's pen is in their service; to defend them from summer heat as well as winter's cold. I mean another class entirely.

"I am going to propose to the public a new society for the support of benevolent plutocrats" said a woman the other day. "T'will have a long name, but that always 'goes'. 'Tis to be called the 'Society for Amelioration of the Condition of the Genteel Poor.' You needn't laugh. I mean the people who have to wear cleaned gloves, and turned dresses; who have to make a dollar do the work of five and all the time keep up a good appearance in the position to which they were born, or as the Catechism has it, the "condition of life in which God has called them."

"In the first place I shall suggest to some of the palace dwellers on the Back Bay that instead of closing their houses when they migrate to their sea-side cottages or to Lenox, or giving them in charge of keepers who will smoke in the kitchen, they lend them to their impecunious friends for the summer season."

"Take for instance Mrs. Blank. You know she is as poor as the traditional church-mouse, yet belonging to the aristocratic Blank family, is received everywhere. And she wants to be in the swim on account of that very pretty daughter of hers. She gets through the winter somehow in her little bit of a suite of rooms up in the very top of the Belgravia; but when summer comes she can't even visit, except for a short time, as her purse is nearly exhausted by the winter's campaign, and she hasn't anything left for toilettes sufficiently chic for the summer fray. So off she goes into the country to some unheard-of place, where she exists until fashion permits her to return. Eats poor butter, innocent of ice, is bitten by mosquitos, for the windows have no screens; experiences a water famine, and is forced to bathe in a quart bowl, sees all the cream, fresh fruit and vegetables sent to Boston market and lives on canned goods. Then comes back in autumn thinner than ever, starved mentally as well as bodily, and has to talk about her summer rest in a delightful rural spot as yet unknown to the world."

"Wouldn't she be better off in her cousin's delightful large rooms over on the avenue, with ample bathing facilities and luxurious beds,—uneasy lies the whole body on a farmhouse couch—and all Boston for an eating-place? While as nobody knew she was in town she could wear her thinnest undress costume all day, and sally forth at night for a good dinner or a ride in the democratic open car. See the point? Of course you do, and my first duty as sole official of the new society with a long name will be to issue some little circulars to our rich people advising such a course. And I wouldn't wonder if it took. 'Twould have the merit of novelty at least, and they might be sure their houses would be taken good care of."

"'Twould be no work for Mrs. Blank, for instance, as she would really have to take care of but two or three rooms, and the "ubiquitous woman" could be brought in to do the rest. Wouldn't it be a delightful experience for Mrs. B, and wouldn't she save money? I think so." MARGUERY.

—Base ball clubs wishing the full score of Saturday's games printed, will please send them in by Tuesday morning.

Marions vs. Rocklands.

The Marions visited Rockland last Saturday, and after a very lively contest, succeeded in pulling out the closest game of the season. The principal features of which was the batting of Ahearn, the shortstop work of Sheehan, and the catching of J. Murphy. The score

Lake street grounds, East Weymouth, Saturday, June 20, the Athletics of Lovells Corner played the Weymouth Centres with the following result:

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Athletic,	0	4	2	1	3	0	4	0	0	—14
Centres,	1	0	0	1	0	0	1	0	0	—3

The Marions have taken six straight games, and will compete on the Lake street grounds to-morrow with the Mathews of Chelsea, the champion 18-year-old team of the state.

North Weymouths vs. St. Johns.

The North Weymouths added another victory to their credit Saturday by defeating the St. Johns of Quincy, by a score of 8 to 6. In the first inning both teams started in by scoring five runs, after which they settled down to business. King was batted for only two hits, while Conners was pounded for ten safe hits. The features of the game were the second base playing of Clark, who made a double play unassisted, besides making some very brilliant stops, King's pitching which was very effective all through the game, striking out such men as Cunningham, formerly of the Atlantics, and Ring formerly of J. P. Lovells Arms Co. at very critical times. Cunningham, Kiley and Donovan, played a very fine game for the St. Johns. Attendance, 200.

Institutes vs. Vernons.

The Institutes defeated the Vernons of Cambridge last Saturday afternoon. Although the weather was very dubious there was a crowd of about 300 present. The features of the game was the catching of Quinn and the phenominal catch of Cleary. The decision of the umpire in the last inning was overruled by the Boston Globe. The score:

Institute Base Ball Gossip.

McCarthy found the ball.

Sullivan played a faultless game.

O'Donnell pitched a remarkable game.

Hersey and Quinn will stay with the Institutes.

Goodspeed gave good satisfaction as an umpire.

Two balls are not enough. The crowd of spectators don't wish to wait while boys are searching the woods for the lost balls. Give us another, Mr. Umpire.

GRAND ARMY FUNERAL.

Adj't-Gen. A. C. Monroe Buried with Military Honors.

The usual quiet of a Weymouth Sabbath was broken in upon last Sunday by a scene at East Weymouth which will long be remembered by those who witnessed it.

There came to East Weymouth from Scituate about the year 1855 a father, mother and three sons. The younger brother first found a resting place in the East Weymouth cemetery where he was followed by the father, mother, the older brother, and last Sunday the remains of the last survivor of the family, all that was mortal of Alfred C. Monroe, was laid to rest by the side of those who had gone before him.

Mr. Monroe, when but a lad, united himself with the Congregational church and became an active Sunday school and church worker.

In response to one of the first calls for troops in the late war, with Lieut. D. B. Burrell, who fell in the battle of the Wilderness, he enlisted in Co. H., 12th Massachusetts, and saw active service up to the battle of Gettysburg where he gave an arm to the defence of his country's flag and honor. He was discharged from the service in Oct. 1863 and spent the following winter as clerk in the Naval School Hospital in Annapolis, Md., and in the spring of 1864 entered the Union Business College of Philadelphia from which he graduated in July of the same year. A genial disposition and pleasing address were his passports to all hearts, and these won for him his way through a two years' course in Polytechnic College in Philadelphia. He subsequently returned to Massachusetts making his home at Brockton which city he represented two years in the General court, serving on the committee on military affairs.

For many years he was an active member of the G. A. R., serving as commander of Fletcher Webster Post 13 of Brockton for four years, assistant adjutant-general of the National Encampment one year, and in 1883 was appointed to the same position in the department of Massachusetts which position he held at the time of his death, which occurred at his home at Revere on the afternoon of Thursday June 18.

Funeral services were held in the Congregational church East Weymouth last Sunday afternoon, and it was probably the largest funeral ever held in the vicinity, there being upward of 1500 people in line to pay their last tribute of respect to him with whom they had marched side by side, bivouaced on the battle field, shared the privations and dangers of the campaign, or known since the war as a faithful and true friend.

The services were in charge of Comrade Joseph W. Thayer, a tent mate, and long time friend of the deceased. The remains, in charge of undertaker Marden of Chelsea, arrived on a special train of fourteen cars at 1.40 p. m., accompanied by Department Commander Smith and staff, and were taken in charge at the station by the local undertaker, W. T. Rice. The cortege was formed in the following order and the remains conveyed to the church where services were conducted by Rev. Edward A. Horton of Boston, chaplain of E. W. Kinsley Post 113 G. A. R.

Hearse, flanked by pallbearers.
Paul Revere Lodge of Masons of Brockton, under Senior Deacon W. H. Emerson; 30 brothers.
Carriages with mourners.

The Woman's Relief Corps was represented by Mrs. Wales, Department President; Mrs. Davis Senior Vice-President.; Mrs. Reed, Treasurer; Miss Elliot Secretary; National Senior Vice-President Mrs. L. A. Turner.

The Ladies' Aid Association was represented by Mrs. Weston, Mrs. Beahn, Mrs. White and Mrs. Lescher. Among the distinguished persons present were Department Commander Smith who occupied the pulpit with Rev. Mr. Horton, Col. B. F. Cook of the old 12th., Col. W. M. Olin Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the Hon. Henry B. Pierce.

The body clad in the uniform of the order lay in a panel casket in front of the altar, and the Ruggles Street Church Quartette of Boston, with Robert F. Raymond at the organ, opened the service with "Remember now thy Creator" which was followed by scripture reading by Rev. Mr. Horton. The quartette rendered "The Vacant Chair" with fine effect, after which Mr. Horton proceeded with a brief eulogy.

He said that, while it was a great privilege to speak over the bier of a general or an admiral, he loved to pay this tribute to men who were not so honored, men who won what they are and have, in the ranks. He who lies before us took out of the warp and woof of life that which made a man. Though not brought up in courts he was courteous, as the lark sings, as the sun shines and as the waters flow. He was a manly man; he was a courteous man and knew how to do graceful things at all times and on all occasions. Out of the darkness of poverty he came but he achieved on his own merits that which wealth could not buy. He was a patriotic man, and patriotism put eloquence on his lips. He loved that flag to which he had sworn allegience; he loved the comrades who touched elbows with him in the march; he ever had a watchful eye and listening ear to the call of duty and it was his pride that all the cogs and gears of the general plan worked in their proper places. Though borne through your streets with a dirge he is not dead; death cannot deprive us of comrades. He still lives in the heart of the brotherhood he worked for.

A fervent prayer followed the address, and the quartette sang "Gathering Home," and the services were closed with a benediction.

The body was then placed on the street in front of the church and friends and comrades permitted to take a last look at the remains.

The line was re-formed and marched to the cemetery where the several posts were formed in a square on the avenues near the family lot, the Brockton Post conducting the service, the ritual being recited by Commander J. W. Brown and Chaplain F. L. Trowl.

The remains were crowned with laurel and lowered into the grave; three volleys were fired, last "taps" sounded by bugler Kimball of the regular army who performed the same duty over the remains of Gen. Sheridan, and the tent closed until the last great reveille.

The floral tributes of comrades were many, among them a pillow of roses and lillies from the trustees of the Soldier's Home; Headquarters Department of Massachusetts G. A. R. sent a badge in carnations and roses; Fletcher Webster Woman's Relief Corps of Brockton a sickle composed of roses and lilies; Paul Revere Lodge F. and A. M. of Brockton a floral pillow with the square and compass in purple immortelles; Fletcher Webster Post sent a 1st corps badge; Revere Post 88 of Quincy a wreath; 12th Mass. Regiment a wreath; Post 199 of Revere sent a beautiful star; Satucket Royal Arch Chapter, keystone in roses and pinks; Reynolds Post 58 of Weymouth a pillow of pinks and ferns; Department of Woman's Relief Corps, badge of the order in roses; from his friend Joseph W. Thayer of Chelsea there was a floral "H," the letter of the company in which they served; also a beautiful design from the Mass. Department Sons of Veterans.

Much credit is due Mrs. A. B. Pratt, Mrs. R. F. Raymond, Mrs. B. S. Lavell, Mrs. W. T. Rice, Mrs. T. H. Emerson and Miss Susie Raymond for arranging the flowers and other decorations.

From the cemetery the line of march was taken to Reynolds hall where refreshments of crackers, cheese and coffee were served. The home of Col. B. S. Lovell was open with the hospitality for which it is so justly celebrated, and the visiting ladies as well as many of the sterner sex were regaled with salads, ice cream, sherbets and coffee.

Asa B. Pratt, together with officers Houghton, Maynard, Gardner and Richards did duty as police and quiet and good order prevailed.

The pallbearers were Capt. Charles W. Hastings, Co. H, 12th Mass.; John E. Gilman, 12th Mass.; E. P. Jewett, Assistant Quartermaster General; A. E. Perkins, representing the Department of Mass.; Past Commander John G. B. Adams and G. S. Evans, representing trustees of Soldier's Home; S. L. French, George H. Grant, of Fletcher Webster Post; H. L. Mitchell, Paul Revere Lodge; and John A. Jackson, Satucket Royal Arch Chapter.

Children's Sunday at South Weymouth.

The Universalists lay claim to the destinction of being the originators of the observance of "Children's Sunday." The third Sunday in June is set apart by the South Weymouth church for that purpose. The beauty of the flowers, the song of birds and the splash of the miniature fountain, together with the presence of the children made a scene which was appreciated by the large audience present, especially in the evening, when their enthusiasm came as near to applause as the time and place would allow.

Rev. Mr. Bolster had announced a service for the evening, in the Union church on "True Politeness," but so many desired to attend this children's concert that it was postponed.

Rev. Mr. Atwood, the prospective pastor, preached in the morning, and made a few appropriate remarks in the evening. He has just graduated from Tuft's College, having delivered the valedictory address and takes a vacation of two or three weeks before entering upon his labors in South Weymouth.

The programme of the evening concert was as follows:

Singing, Welcome All, by the school; prayer, Rev. Mr. Atwood; recitation, Children's Day, Abbie Cushing; recitation, Nine Girls; song, The Poor Man's Sheaf, Johnnie Vinning; recitation, The Children's Service, Fannie Raymond; recitation, Nellie Hollis; recitation, The Dandelions, Ritchie Howe; singing, Happy Children's Day, School; recitation, What the Burdock was good for, Helen Loud; recitation, In the Balm and Blossoming, Sadie Harris; singing, Saviour, Lead us all the Way, Class of girls; recitation, Student's Prayer, Alice Willis; recitation, Blossom Time, Minnie Joy; recitation, Ten boys; singing, God is Good, Helen Loud and Fannie Raymond; recitation, We'll bring Him Hearts that Love Him, Florence Howe; recitation, Carrie Burrell; recitation, Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star, Mergeret Howe; recitation, Scatter the Germs of the Beautiful, Bessie Churchill, Dora Clapp, Mabel Whitman, Marion Blanchard; song, Not a Sparow Falleth, Louise Holbrook; recitation, Jesus Blessing the Children, Mary Chandler; singing, Beautiful Flowers, School; Benediction.

The Earth is not too much.

Quincy wants the earth, with the sun, moon and stars thrown in. Not satisfied with their 43 trains a day each way, to and from Boston, they are clamoring for the 14 South Shore trains too. That the Old Colony will grant their request is very improbable, although they may give Quincy one or two extras.

Still it Grows.

On and after the Fourth of July next, our national flag will wave with 44 stars, in six rows. There will be eight stars in the first row, seven in the second, third, fourth and fifth, and eight in the sixth row.

Smith--McFawn.

The home of Robert McFawn was the scene of a quiet wedding Wednesday evening, June 17, the occasion being the marriage of Walter N. Smith and Lottie R. McFawn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. A. Kidder.

Handsome versus Homely.

Who is that fine looking lady that we just passed, Clara? Why, that is Mrs. Snow. Well, there, what a change; when I saw her last, her skin was so sallow and muddy looking, it's no wonder I didn't know her. What has produced that lovely complexion? I heard that she took Sulphur Bitters, the great Blood Purifier, and now would not be without it.

A Splendid New Steamer on the Nantasket Line.

The steamer Mayflower, the latest addition to the fleet of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co., made what is known as the engineer's trial trip down the harbor from Rowe's wharf, Saturday, to test her machinery and to see that everything is in perfect working order. A party of about 100 gentlemen, including the directors of the company, steamboat owners and builders, accompanied her on her trip. No expense or care has been spared to secure a perfect excursion steamer. Safety, comfort, speed, have all been studied and planned for, and the result is a remarkably fine excursion steamer.

She has the most modern and perfect machinery and appliances known to naval architecture. The feathering buckets on her wheels make her run through the water swiftly, and with perfect steadiness; the absence of the usual jar of an ordinary steamboat is remarked by all: her steam steering apparatus gives her captain and pilot perfect control and with hardly more than the pressure of a finger they can instantly change her course. She is lighted with electricity and her saloons are elegantly carpeted and upholstered. Her length over all is 190 ft.; breadth, 32 ft. The government inspectors, after a careful examination of the steamer, granted her a license to carry 2000 passengers. On the 29th she takes the Eastern Yacht Club guests to the Yacht race, having been chartered for this service.

Cyclopædic Enterprise.

Appleton's Cyclopædia of 1890 is just out, and we notice, records the death, with a lengthy obituary notice of Miss Charlotte Fiske Bates, the poetess. As Miss Bates, now Mrs. Adolph Roge is still alive and was married only this month, this is an unpardonable error in such a work as a cyclopædia which is justly expected to be very carefully compiled.

Mrs. Roge has many friends and relatives in this town who will recall the publication of her death in the newspapers, when she was ill with the grippe in New York. The reports were contradicted in the papers, but the contradictions do not seem to have reached the notice of the editors of Appleton's Cyclopædia.

This must be very annoying to Mrs. Roge and her friends.

Burglars.

Burglars visited Weymouth some time during Monday night. The first place visited was the residence of Jackson V. B. Bates on Broad street, where they secured a number of gold rings and a few other small articles, and leaving behind them a valuable gold watch belonging to Mr. Bates, which hung at the head of his bed. They next entered the house of Alden Richards, but secured nothing there. It is thought to be the work of amateurs.

East Weymouth Commercial Club.

The adjourned meeting held in Engine Hall, Tuesday night for the purpose of organizing a Commercial Club, was quite an enthusiastic one. By-Laws were adopted and quite a number of members joined the primary organization. The meeting was addressed by E. R. Downs, president of the South Weymouth Improvement Society. The next meeting will be Tuesday evening, June 30.

Labor Meeting.

The carpenters and painters of Weymouth and Braintree, held a union meeting in Reynolds Hall, Monday evening. Mr. N. J. Grant presided. The meeting was addressed by Hugh McKay, chairman of the executive committee of the Carpenter's and Joiner's National Union, Henry Lloyd of Carpenter's Union No. 33, E. W. Thomas and T. H. Higgins.

Beyond Town Limits.

—By a recent permit of the railroad commissioners the West End is empowered to increase its capital $4,500,000. The capital stock of that company is now $16,400,000.

—The new Normal school building at Bridgewater will be dedicated the first week in September. The building will be 86 feet front and 187 feet in length and its cost will be $150,000.

—A full grown live deer was seen in the woods near Plymouth a few days since.

—A snake ten feet long and two feet in circumference was seen in Rockland last week. They are talking of enforcing the liquor law up there.

—The Congregational society of Rockland which lost its church by fire about a year ago, has accepted plans for a new one. The building will be wood and cost about $20,000.

—Wm. F. Hurly of Stoughton has the largest domestic cat in the United States. It weighs 30 1-2 lbs. and took the first prize as the largest cat at the cat show in Boston last week.

—Plymouth is to have a summer school of Applied Ethics which will open July 1 and continue to Aug. 15. This will be extremely interesting.

—Charles O. Churchill, collector of customs for the port of Plymouth died in that place Wednesday, June 17. In his death Plymouth loses one of its best citizens.

—Miss Susan Winsor the oldest person in Scituate recently passed awey at the advanced age of 94 years.

—The Cushing house, Hingham, which has been an emblem of industry on the part of paperhangers, carpenters and painters, is now open for the season.

—It is said that a New Bedford man has just completed re-reading the Bible for the one-hundredth time.

—The rights and duties of the school committee are to be tested in Rockland. A boy was recently sent home from school in that town for a misdemeanor; the chairman of the committee subsequently went to the home and inflicted corporal punishment on the boy and a law suit is the result.

—Down on the Cape a stroke of lightning is said to have killed a hen, picked the feathers off and cooked it nicely to a turn.

—The people of Hyde Park have taken to wearing clean shirts. The steam laundry there is said to have done up over 3000 in the last three weeks.

—North Easton is developing some fine lady bicycle riders.

—The First Congregational church in Randolph recently celebrated the 160th anniversary of its existence, and the church is working harmoniously today.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by druggists, 75c. per bottle.

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1891.

So Parnell has married Mrs. Shea. Will this reinstate him in the leadership of the Irish people?

Poor "Fritz!" (Emmet.) His sweet Lullaby song will be heard no more. He had his faults, who has not? The pleasure that his acting and singing has given will be remembered by thousands after his faults are forgotten.

Should the Prince of Wales ever become King of England, which his recent action has made extremely doubtful, his title would be Albert VIII. He would, however, be better known by the world as Albert, the gambler.

Where are our boys? We saw none on the platform at the graduating exercises of the North High School last evening,—and only four boy's names appear in the list of the seventeen pupils of the South High who expect to receive their diplomas tonight. Only four out of twenty-eight. This should not be.

It is not believed that the numerous cases recorded of ice cream poisoning has had the slightest effect upon the consumption of that compound. Young people pay about as much attention to these stories as they do to the physician's warnings of the dangers of contracting contagious diseases attendant upon kissing.

Josiah Quincy's friends are already talking of him as a candidate for Congress. Quincy is, they claim, in a Democratic district under the new allotment, and he will thus be sure of an election. We shall be sorry to see him taken out of our state legislature where he has done such excellent service, but his abilities are, perhaps, more needed in Congress.

What delightful weather! We are told by one enthusiastic individual that this is "the weather of the Switzerland summer, clear, cool, and bracing." There are other ways in which the United States resembles Switzerland besides the climate, one of which is that it too, is a free country and a republic. Perhaps that has something to do with the similarity in the air.

Commodore John Shaw, in an interview with a Boston Herald reporter, expresses the opinion that Quincy bay is being gradually polluted by the Boston Moon Island sewer, and that in time it will necessarily render the shores of the bay unhealthy.

We have thought for some time that some of the same sewage is perceptible at times in the waters of our Fore river. At least there is frequently to be seen the same greasy scum that Commodore Shaw talks about.

The Graduates.

Every year in the month of June, all over our broad country, thousands of boys and girls, and young men and women are graduating from schools, colleges, academies and seminaries.

Some are to continue this education in a school or college of higher grade. Others have completed their education and go forth to begin their life's earnest work.

The phrase, "completed their education," is a misleading one: for who completes his education until he ceases to live? And even after death, it is the belief of many that our education still goes on. But, however this may be we wish to point out to our young graduates that they have only just begun their education in this life when they graduate from the high school, the academy, the seminary, or the college. That henceforth, every day will bring its own peculiar and important lesson and that the manner and thoroughness with which these life's lessons are learned and used to mould their character will have perhaps a greater effect upon their usefulness in the world and their own well being and happiness than their previous school education.

Well grounded in book knowledge the graduate may be, and probably is if he has been a faithful student, and thus he is well fitted for a start in life but if he holds that his education is completed and that he knows it all,—we have all seen just such young men—then he will require some hard knocks to bring him down to a realizing sense of his own littleness and insignificance in the great world, before he will be spurred on to renewed exertions.

The college educated young man who does not continue to study, through a course of reading that shall include the best magazines and the best books of the present day and thus keep up with the things and events of the world, will wake up some day and find that many of his mates who had perhaps far less of early advantages, have attained a larger practical knowledge and have passed him in the race of life, while he has been insecurely resting upon his supposed superior education.

A college education is a grand beginning; but, to be of the greatest use, must be looked upon as a beginning only. This is an era of the world when progress is being made with astounding rapidity in the solution of all social and economic problems. Deep thinking is more universal than ever before, and much of the knowledge taught yesterday is perhaps obselete today unless modified by the light of the latest thought of the world's greatest minds.

The Gubernatorial Outlook.

Only a few more months and the Australian ballot will be once more in the hands of the voters of our Commonwealth for the election of state officers, from a Governor down through the usual long list.

The years come and go quickly and these annual elections hardly allow one man to get himself well fitted to the "chair of state" before the annual discussion is on of who shall succeed him.

The rapidity of the occurrence of these elections and the consequent almost constant agitation, is the great argument advanced by those in favor of biennial or even quadrennial elections, but on the other hand the discussion and agitation of all questions on the eve of every election is a great factor in the education of the people, and consequently the annual election is of benefit in this way. Another point in favor of the shorter term is that if by chance a poor official is elected, one year is quite long enough to keep him, while a good official can be re-elected for a number of terms.

Who shall succeed the present governor? The Republican party is trying to find a man in its ranks who will prove to be a solution of this question, while the Democrats are seemingly content that Governor Russell shall succeed himself. With the assurance which is born of victory they say that he will surely be given a second term. They will oil up the machinery which worked so successfully last fall, and are confident of a still greater conquest this year.

The Democratic candidate being then settled beyond any reasonable doubt, we will consider the probable and most available candidates in the Republican ranks. In the "good old times" wagers were laid, not as to which party would win, but as to the size of the majority of the Republican nominee. This year it will be a question of what Republican can get a majority at all, however small. Who is most available? Who will best unite all factions and place the state in the Republican column in '92?

There are scores of aspirants for the place, but an exceptionally strong man is required, and one who has made few or no enemies in the past. The paying off of old scores by knifing cannot be risked this year.

Ex-Governor Robinson's name is being mentioned, but he is hardly to be regarded seriously as a candidate, for he could not probably be induced to give up his lucrative law practice for a position which would reduce his income and which could add nothing to the honors he has already had.

What has been said of ex-Gov. Robinson may be said with equal truth of ex-Governor Long. There is no inducement for him to go back and retravel a road already successfully passed over. It would be no step nearer the senatorship, if, as is supposed, he has aspirations in that direction.

Ex-Governor Brackett would be willing, if the chances of success were good, but after last fall's defeat he is not a good choice.

The signs, then, seem to point to a new and untried man as the probable choice of the party as its candidate. The second name on last year's ticket was a winner, but would Haile win as the head of the ticket? Did he win last year because people cared too little about the second state office to pay much attention to it? This might have been under the old system of voting, when to make a change in the ticket a voter was obliged to paste on a name over the one printed upon the ticket, but under the Australian system it is as easy to mark against one name as another. It would thus seem that the people voted for Haile because they wanted him. If this was the fact might he not prove a winner at the head of the ticket?

Next should be considered the speaker of the last House of Representatives, Mr. Barrett, who has hosts of friends, a strong backing among the politicians, and is a popular man with the masses, but he, unfortunately, has been an element of discord or rather has incurred in the past the displeasure of Mr. Beard and others of the silver-haired partisans. It would seem that unless these matters can be arranged that he would enter the race handicapped.

Mr. Crapo is willing and anxious, and would make a good governor. His party owes him something too. But he has grown old in waiting, and a man who has been mentioned so often for the position and each time dropped, seldom gets there at all. Yet, should he get the nomination, while he would not bring into the campaign the attractions of youth, he would be an eminent representative of capacity and fitness, and should he be elected, would be a governor that Massachusetts, irrespective of party, might well be proud of.

Whoever is the choice of the Republican party to run against Russell, the outlook is for a very vigorous campaign by the Republicans, and the Democrats cannot rest in any fancied security without sacrificing whatever chance they have for a victory.

Lovell's Corner Happenings.

—The graduating exercises of the Pratt school at the vestry of the Porter church Wednesday afternoon were very interesting. The graduates were Misses Abbie Stuart, Mary Morgan, Mary Nettles, and Masters Fred Barnes, Robert Coleraine, and Porter Pratt. The class motto was "Perseverance Wins."

—C. A. Pratt has returned from a business trip to the west.

—Miss Sadie Rea has returned from a two week's visit to Freeport, Me.

—The meetings of the Weymouth Temperance Union will be discontinued until October.

—The closing exercises of the Holbrook school were held yesterday afternoon. The little ones sang very prettily.

—N. T. Tirrell has returned from a three month's trip to the Pacific coast.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects. The management of the paper distinctly disclaim any responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

The Question of the Day.

The question of the day is,—Can the sweet scented flowers along our nice sidewalks, more than balance the stench that rises from the fish offal that is thrown along the highway by some of our fish dealers? Some carry pails and do not drop it in the highway. A blue fish's head and the entrails of a half dozen mackerel, with the glass at 96, is anything but sweet. We have one dealer who prides himself on being the cleanest man on the road, at least he says so, but he follows this nasty trick of making our street filthy with refuse. It should be stopped.

PERO.

Hold it to the Light.

The man who tells you confidentially just what will cure your cold is prescribing Kemp's Balsam this year. In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00

Weymouth and East Braintree Locals.

The happy pair were the recipients of many handsome and costly gifts. They will reside at Holyoke, Mass. on their return from a wedding tour through New York State.

South Weymouth Pickings.

—Tuesday afternoon the schools below the graduating classes of the grammar grade observed visitor's day with appropriate exercises. The school rooms were gay with flowers and large numbers of parents and friends of the pupils were present.

—The graduating exercises of the Bates Grammar school were held in Fogg's Opera House Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—All the teachers in Ward Five have been re-elected for the ensuing school year.

—The last two games of the Wessagussets have been with the South Braintrees and the Harvards of Abington. They beat the former 38 to 6, but fell victims to the latter club 6 to 3. The Wessagussets seem to have taken the place of the Actives in furnishing base ball amusement for South Weymouth.

—Northern brains and northern capital are developing the natural resources of the South. The Asheville (N. C.) Kaolin Co. which was organized about a year ago, composed largely of northern men, has bought 1,400 acres of land in and about Asheville, and is to mine this fine porcelain material. Clarence A. Hunt is a stockholder, and at a recent reorganization of the corporation was chosen president. He has just returned from a trip to investigate the company's property.

—The Volunteers of South Weymouth would like to arrange a game of base ball with any club whose average age does not exceed seventeen years. Address Alfred J. Loud, manager, or Walter Lewis, captain.

—The Actives play the Beacons of Hingham on the Active grounds, South Weymouth, tomorrow afternoon. They have sent four communications to the North Weymouth club that wishes, according to last week's Gazette, to play them, and have received no reply. An attempt is being made to form a league of six clubs, Quincy, North Weymouth, Braintree, South Braintree, South Weymouth and Holbrook.

—The graduating class of the South High school has voted to purchase a lawn mower for the school. This class has also initiated what ought to become a custom for succeeding classes, viz., making a present to the school of a framed group picture of the class.

—Since the new time-table has gone into operation and an occasional express runs by the station without stopping, there is more demand than ever for gates at the crossing on Pond street. Several narrow escapes are reported, and complaint is heard of the negligence of the railroad company in failing to provide these safeguards. Let the railroad committee of the Improvement Association look into this matter.

—Henry A. Thomas Esq. will deliver the memorial address at Odd Fellows' Hall, East Weymouth, next Sunday.

—To-morrow afternoon the much talked about sale of house-lots occurs on the premises off Union street. Free lemonade is a feeble attraction compared with the balloon ascension, parachute leap, picnic, band concert, free steamboat ride, etc., which are offered as inducements to attend a similar auction sale of lots north of Boston, but no doubt a crowd will be present to see who obtains the house-lot free.

—Miss Emily S. Clough, a graduate of Boston University '91, is visiting her aunt Miss C. C. Stickney. She is engaged to teach the natural sciences in an academy in Trinidad, Colo., beginning next Sept.

—The Wednesday Night Club held its 46th bi-monthly supper meeting Wednesday evening. Leonard B. Joy is president. The programme was long and interesting. The club adjourned until the first Wednesday in September.

—Mrs. Alonzo Vining has commenced operations on a new house at the corner of Reed avenue and Union street.

—Louis A. Cook is to build a house on Aldrich off Attwood street this summer.

—George B. Roger's house on Bates avenue will be ready for its occupants in about a month.

—The firm of J. S. Fogg & Co. is now divided, the old firm will continue the manufacture of leather jackets. A new concern under style of the South Weymouth Shoe Co. will continue the manufacture of boots and shoes.

Weymouth Heights.

—On and after July 1 the name of this post-office will be changed from North Weymouth Depot to Weymouth Heights.

—Burglars visited this place Monday night and broke into the residences of George Batchelder and Major Noyes.

—Some time during last week burglars entered the summer residence of Dr. Putnam of Boston and secured several dresses and other clothing.

—The W. C. T. U. meet with Mrs. Andrew Hatch next Wednesday afternoon.

—The first of the four annual collections of the year will be taken at the Old North church next Sunday for the Seaman's Friend Society. Mr. Snow will occupy the pulpit.

—Tonight an apron festival will be held at the Old North chapel under the auspices of the Ladies Benevolent Society. The entertainment will be followed by the sales of aprons and refreshments.

—Several of our Y. P. S. C. E. are anticipating a trip to the Y. P. S. C. E. convention at Minneapolis in July.

—The exhibition of the Adams school takes place this afternoon. All are cordially invited.

Thayer Academy Graduation.

The graduating exercises of Thayer Academy will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock p. m. The programme will be of a very interesting nature and will be published in full by us next week.

The graduates will be: Robert Colburn Bacon who enters Dartmouth; Charles Norton Blanchard; Winifred Miller Claflin; Edward Gardner Crane who enters the Institute of Technology; Sarah Agnes Donham; Archibald Wilkinson Edes who enters Harvard; Leonard Gordon Ewell who enters the Institute of Technology; Eva Elizabeth Hall; Mary Baxter Hobart; Annie Lacy Holbrook who enters Harvard Annex; Lucia Eugenia Hollis who enters Vassar; Edith Howard; Mabel Silby Morrison who enters Harvard Annex; Katherine Josephine Riley; Sarah Shaw; Helen Augusta Tucker who enters Smith; and Rose Adelaide Witham who enters Smith.

Kingman Re-union.

The "Kingman Memorial Association" will hold a grand re-union of the descendants of Henry Kingman at "Elkins Park," Brockton, Wednesday, July 8. This day has been selected as it will be the two hundred and fifty-sixth anniversary of the landing in Weymouth of the founder of this numerous family. Able speakers will be present. Martland's Band will furnish music and a banquet will be served.

No Licenses to Druggists.

On Monday the selectmen considered the petitions for and against granting licenses. The number of petitioners in favor of the licenses being issued was 67. The number of remonstrants was 534. The selectmen voted not to grant any licenses.

East Weymouth Briefs.

—On account of the funeral of Comrade Alfred C. Monroe, Sunday, the Odd Fellows memorial services of Crescent Lodge, No. 82, were postponed until Sunday, June 28.

—The Loyal Temperance Legion, Co. H, will hold its sixth anniversary next Wednesday. The exercises will be held in Temperance Hall at 2 p. m., at the conclusion of which the children, under direction of Mrs. H. B. Raymond will march to Jackson square, and from thence to Temple of Honor banquet hall, where a collation will be served. At a meeting of the legion next Monday, the tickets will be issued for the anniversary, and all intending to be present must secure their tickets on that date.

—The cuisine of the Derby House was highly praised Sunday, by the visiting veterans who patronized its table.

—Mr. W. M. Burrell has returned from the West, and gives it as his opinion that old New England is about as good place as any in which to live. He is temporarily engaged in the telegraph office at Braintree.

—East Weymouth has a good band, and a good band stand, but the two are never together. Where is the enterprise that will get up a few open air concerts these fine nights?

—The W. C. T. Union will meet with Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell, Tuesday, June 30.

—The family of J. A. Roarty leave this week for York Beach, where they will spend the summer.

—The waiting-rooms at the Old Colony station are very inviting with their newly tinted walls.

—Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Emerson left town Thursday, for Orland, Me., to attend the funeral of his brother who died recently at Denver, Col.

—Mrs. Adella Burrell has just returned from a two-weeks visit to Providence, R. I.

—Mr. S. C. Dizer spent a few days in East Weymouth this week.

—Mr. Charles Gibson has moved into the house at the junction of High and Hawthorne streets.

—The boxes placed in the depot by the W. C. T. Union for the distribution of temperance literature, has been removed, under a general order of the Old Colony officials, prohibiting the use of the walls of the station for any purpose except the business of the road. The members of the union are indignant over the matter.

—Mrs. Theodore Ellms who is stopping with her granddaughter Mrs. Frank F. Hobart on Hill street, lies in a very precarious condition. She is suffering from paralysis of the throat, and for three weeks has been unable to take any food through the natural channels.

—Mrs. Asa Dyer who is 86 years old, is very sick.

—Tinkers have made their appearance in Back River, and a number of the local fishermen are having grand sport capturing them.

A large number of gifts testified the esteem in which the couple were held. They will reside in Quincy. Again, on the same evening, Walter F. Keen and Miss Ida Stoddard, both of this place, were made one. Next.

Storekeeper's Swindled.

A fellow representing himself as the advance agent of Main's Circus, visited East Weymouth last Thursday, and waited upon the storekeepers and provision dealers, engaged large quantities of groceries and provisions for the circus, to be delivered at South Weymouth, Sunday, where he stated that the circus would perform Monday. Having secured the confidence and good-will of the dealers, the swindler explained that the managers of the circus intended to issue a programme, and requested them to favor him with an ad. Some of the traders were duped into complying with the stranger's request, and gave him orders for advertising, ranging in price from $3 to $5, invariably paying for the same in advance. It is needless to say that the fellow was a fraud and had no connection with any circus.

Business Notices.

[Notices under this heading, 3 lines or less, 25 cents.]
[Each additional line, 5 cents.]

—A chance for investment is offered by Louis A. Cook. At his grand auction sale of house lots tomorrow afternoon who will be the happy winner of the free house lot?

Braintree.

—WANTED.—A Braintree correspondent. Someone who cares to devote a little time to writing up the local items for publication in the Gazette. For terms etc., address this office.

—W. G. Nizon of Boston has bought the Scott mansion on Middle street and proposes to make extensive repairs. Mr. George Holbrook will immediately reshingle the house and frescoers will commence on inside work.

—Mr. N. R. Proctor's cellar and grading on Maple street goes up, and if the house is equal in altitude, Proctor's journey to the skies will be short. Proctor is always fortunate.

—James D. Ellsworth is luxuriating in the State Camp, Peekskill, N. Y. as war correspondent of the New York Recorder. He reports 900 men of the famous Seventh Regiment on the ground with a band of one hundred pieces, playing sacred tunes for marches on Sunday and the doxology at "taps."

—The exercises of the High School at the Town Hall on Thursday evening were of unusual interest. The impetus given to the department of rhetoric by the Morrison prizes was shown in all the compositions and declamations. For introduction to Latin and French Mr. Stetson is not excelled anywhere; Miss Bassett's influence is felt all through the classes as a culture which text-books cannot impart; the committee have done good work for the empty honor of it, and Mr. Fearing has put in full hours and able energy for quickening the spirit of education. As to school matters, Braintree is progressive—her citizens liberal.

—Charles Hill has bought of Geo. H. Lane two house-lots on Storrs avenue.

—Seventeen graduated from the High School and fifty-four receive certificates to enter next year. Christmas is none too soon for the new schoolhouse to be ready for occupancy.

—The new railroad time-table is generally acceptable and South Braintree may now be considered a railroad centre.

—Cæsar, a noble St. Bernard belonging to Mr. Ibrahim Morrison was run over by the cars Monday and so severely wounded that he was shot to put an end to his sufferings. He was a kind, faithful animal of majestic proportions—no gossip—acted well his part, requiescat in pace.

—Miss Annie L. Holbrook is a candidate for Harvard annex.

—Miss S. L. Hadley of Marion, who for six years has been a teacher in the second primary department of the Union School has resigned, to the great regret of many friends and pupils. For so refined and amiable a lady to leave us is a loss not easily compensated.

—While Mr. Herbert Walker has not been so much identified with Braintree as a citizen as some other teachers, his resignation as principal of the Union School is deeply lamented: but what is Braintree's loss is Attleboro's gain.

—The senior Dr. Dearing is recovering from a relapse of la grippe under the skillful attendance of the junior Dr. Dearing.

—Mr. Stevens is a benefactor, to thin out the lilac hedge on Storrs' corner which made that locality so dangerous to fast driving.

—Charles Belcher and others have sold two lots on Monatiquot avenue to Mr. Allen of East Braintree who has plans already in the hands of a builder for a fine mansion.

—The bids for the new school house have been opened—highest, $57,000; lowest, $29,000; the appropriation was $32,000. It is reported that a new plan may yet be decided upon.

—Mr. Caldwell of Boston is erecting a house on Mount Pleasant. John Robinson has the contract.

—Mr. Wm. H. Drew and wife have returned from their wedding tour and are boarding in the family of Mr. Roberts on Hollis avenue.

—The Misses Keith and Miss Elsworth have returned from Mount Holyoke college to remain during the summer vacation.

—S. W. Thorndike Esq. is out after a painful confinement with an attack of la grippe.

—George and Earnest Wales have graduated from the Boston English High School and have received prizes and honorable mention.

—Thayer Academy graduating exercises occur Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. The young ladies take the highest honors, but the young men are gallant in not telling all they know and will not be far behind when it comes to the practical application of knowledge.

Literary Notes.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.—A noteworthy feature of Harper's Magazine for July will be an article on Oliver Wendell Holmes, by George William Curtis. In summing up his estimate of Holmes's contributions to American literature, Mr. Curtis says: "It is the quality rather than the quantity with which we are concerned, the upright, honorable, pure quality of the poet, the wit, the scholar, for whom the most devoted reader is called to make no plea, no apology. The versatility of his power is obvious, but scarcely less so the uniformity of his work. It is a power which was early mature. For many a year he has dwelt upon a high tableland where the air is equable and inspiring, yet, as we have hinted, ever softer and sweeter. The lyric of to-day glows with the same ardor as the fervent apostrophe to 'Old Ironsides' or the tripping salutation to the remembered and regretted Clemence; it is only less eager. The young Autocrat who remarked that the work 'scrub' dismissed from table a fellow-boarder who turned pale, now with the same smiling acuteness remarks the imprudent politeness which tries to assure him that it is no matter if he is a little older."

W. D. Howell's new novel, entitled "An Imperative Duty," will be begun in the same number.

—An admirable full-page portrait of Oliver Wendell Holmes forms the frontispiece of the July Arena. A critical paper by George Stewart, D. C. L., L.L.D., the well-known editor and critic of Quebec, treats of the life and literary labors of Dr. Holmes, in a manner at once scholarly and absorbingly interesting. Probably the most notable paper in this issue is Edgar Fawcett's "Plutocracy and Snobbery in New York." In it the weaknesses, foibles, and evils of high life in the metropolis are boldly dealt with in a masterly manner, while Prof. Buchanan's closing paper on "Revolutionary Measures and Neglected Crimes" strikes boldly at the very evils which Mr. Fawcett so vividly depicts. C. Wood Davis appears in this number in a paper on "National Control of Railways." Camille Flammarion closes his brilliant paper on "The Unknown." W. D. McCrackan, whose paper on "The Swiss Referendum" in a previous issue of this review attracted such general notice contrasts in an interesting and instructive manner the Swiss and American Constitutions. With the conspicuous impartiality which has ever marked the management of the Arena the editor this month publishes a reply to his own paper on "Socialism" by the well-known Nationalist and Christian Socialist, Rev. Francis Bellamy. The Rev. W. E. Manley, D.D., one of the ripest Biblical scholars of the day, discusses eternal punishment from the standpoint of a sincere believer in the Bible, but a disbeliever in endless punishment. Prof. W. S. Scarborough, of Wilberforce University, discusses "The Negro Question" from a negro's point of view. The story of the month, is a powerfully written novelette, of twenty-four pages, entitled "A Prairie Heroine," by Hamlin Garland, whose new book of realistic stories, "Main-Travelled Roads," is creating such a sensation in Boston. The editorials, "An Epoch-marking Drama," "The Present Revolution in Theological Thought, and "The Conflict between Ancient and Modern Religious Thought in the Presbyterian Church," are bright, vigorous, and suggestive.

Hamlin Garland's new volume of short stories entitled "Main-Travelled Roads," just issued by the Arena Publishing Co., is creating a genuine sensation in Boston. Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton's criticism of over two columns in the Sunday Herald awakened general interest, which has been greatly increased since the appearance of the work.

School Teachers Re-elected.

In addition to the list of school teachers who had been re-elected that we published last week, the School Committee have since elected Mr. J. W. Armington and Miss Weatherbee.

I Was Disgusted

with the learned doctors after swallowing their costly medicine in vain for over a year for the relief of catarrh in my head, when I cured myself by using six bottles of Sulphur Bitters. My wife is now taking them for nervous debility.—Abiel Carter, Parker House, Boston.

Ask Your Friends About It.

Your distressing cough can be cured. We know it because Kemp's Balsam within the past few years has cured so many coughs and colds in this community. Its remarkable sale has been won entirely by its genuine merit. Ask some friend who has used it what he thinks of Kemp's Balsam. There is no medicine so pure, none so effective. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists.

The Secret of Success.

A. M. Bachelder & Co., druggists, believe that the secret of success is perseverance. Therefore they persist in keeping the finest lot of perfumeries, toilet articles, cosmetics, drugs and chemicals on the market. They especially invite all persons who have palpitation, short breath, weak or hungry spells, pain in side or shoulder, oppression, night mare, dry cough, smothering, dropsy or heart disease to try Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure before it is too late. It has the largest sale of any similar remedy. Fine book of testimonials free. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is unsurpassed for sleeplessness, headache, fits, etc., and it contains no opiates.

NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.

To all persons interested in the estate of SUSAN W. KIMBALL, late of Weymouth, in said county, deceased.

Greeting:

Whereas, George R. Ripley, the administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented for allowance the second account of his administration upon the estate of said deceased.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Quincy, in said county, on the second Wednesday of July next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be allowed.

And said Accountant is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published at Weymouth, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, George White, Esquire, judge of said Court, this fifteenth day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

10 12 JONATHAN COBB, Register.

In Memoriam.

At a meeting of Division No. 9, A. O. H., these resolutions were adopted.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to call from our midst, our much esteemed brother and member, Patrick Donahoe, therefore be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, we no less mourn the loss of our brother who has been called to his final rest.

Resolved, That in the death of our brother, Division No. 9 has lost a faithful and honored member, and a consistant and worthy advocate of the principles of the Order.

Resolved, That the Division extend its sincerest sympathy to the family of our deceased brother in their great affliction.

Resolved, That these Resolutions be published in the Weymouth Gazette, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and that they be placed in the minutes of the society.

THE GRADUATIONS.

The North High.

To the casual observer one star is so like another that to have seen and partially known one is to be familiar with the entire system of heavenly bodies. But he who nightly sweeps the dome above with a telescope finds an ever varying kaleidoscope of glory and beauty, and new scenes of terror and alarm.

What is true of celestial bodies is also true of terrestial, as has been demonstrated by the various class and school exercises which have engrossed the attention of the public mind during the past week.

The exercises of the North High school as held in Odd Fellows Opera House, East Weymouth, last evening, were no exception to this rule, and while similar to the many graduations of previous years, yet contained something new and beautiful.

The motley crowd which thronged and crowded for admission was a sight never witnessed before. The beautifully arranged platform within was a treat to those whom the little cards gained admission. The grand entrance of the school, escorting the graduating class was a pageant long to be remembered. The beauty of costume and the ease and grace of the twelve graduates as they took their allotted position was a picture for an artist, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The grand overture by Tirrell's orchestra will long be remembered, the invocation by Rev. Daniel Evans while hundreds were clamoring for admission and a perfect babel reigned in the hall and the outside surroundings was a scene never witnessed before and we hope never will be again. There was a decided lack of police and all disciplinary arrangements.

The invocation being ended, a new order of things produced around the door and in the ante-rooms, the programme as arranged was gone through with, and the class of '91 is now on record as having given one of the finest exhibitions ever witnessed in town.

From the salutatory of Miss Fannie Dunbar, given with a clearness and force worthy of a platform veteran, down to the valedictory address of Miss Lottie Graves, there was not a hitch nor a halt in the entire arrangement, not a voice but filled the hall, not a subject but what was well handled.

The diplomas were presented by Hon. James H. Flint, and the twelve young ladies had passed another mile-stone in the great march of life. The programme:

Music, orchestra.
Invocation.
Singing, "Away, the Morning Freshly Breaking," "Sleepers, Wake," by the School.
Salutatory and Essay, "Leadership," Fannie B. Dunbar.
Recitation, "The Whistling Regiment," Mary E. Hennessey.
Solo, "The Day is Done," Angeline M. Gutterson.
Essay, "Profit Sharing," Annie L. Murphy.
German by the Natural Method, Lillian F. Curtis, M. Nellie Hart, Mamie L. Gove, Angeline M. Gutterson.
Piano solo, M. Nellie Hart.
Class Chronicles, Annie F. Conroy.
Essay, "A Lunar Excursion," Mary E. Spencer.
Music, Orchestra.
A Noon Hour, H. Estella Lovell, M. Carrie Hart.
Essay, with Valedictory Addresses, "Nationalism," Lottie F. Graves.
Singing, "Gloria, from Mozart's 12th Mass," by the School.
Presentation of Diplomas.
Class Ode. Words by E. Spencer. Music by M. Nellie Hart.

Four times now have bloomed the flowers,
Since as classmates first we met.
And to those bright, happy hours
Owe we all a lasting debt.
Comes at length the time for parting,
Sad, but sorrow must not be,
For to-night we all are starting
On life's mystic, untried sea.

CHORUS.
"Join the tender chorus.
Though we part to-night,
God, who reigneth o'er us,
Still shall guide us right."

Then arise and sing for gladness,
Sing of victories to be won,
Banish every thought of sadness,
Think of life's work, just begun.
All press on, though we must sever,
With our Purpose clear in view,
To achieve each high endeavor,
To do all that can we do.

Four bright years we've worked together,
Toward this end so sure to come,
Striving ever onward, upward,
In the school and in the home.
While the pathway stretched before us,
Long the years of study hard!
Brief, to-night, they lie behind us,
Ours at last their full reward.

We must bravely meet the future,
Faithfully our work must do;
Thus successfully achievement
Crowns our efforts pure and true.
If each hour we but remember
That our thoughts and words and deeds,
What we are in life's stern conflict,
This alone the Master heeds.

Children's Sunday.

The Universalist church observed Children's day last Sunday, with exercises, both morning and evening, appropriate to the occasion.

In the morning Rev. Mr. Eaton preached on "Children and Flowers." After a general description of the day and its significance, he proceeded to speak of the wonders of the floral or vegetable kingdom and to show how the different objects of nature furnished helpful suggestions which could be wrought into the christian character. For this purpose he took the Cedar of Lebanon for suggesting strength and endurance; the Lily of the Valley for purity and sweetness; the Rose for beauty and fragrance; the Bread Tree and "Travelers Tree" for richness and helpfulness; the Violet and Mimosa for modesty and sensitiveness.

The church was most tastefully decorated for the occasion, the altar being literally banked with flowers, making one of the finest floral displays ever seen in this vicinity. Music of an inspiring character was furnished by the church choir.

In the evening a beautiful floral concert exercise was given by the members of the Sunday school.

The congregations both morning and evening were unprecedentedly large.

Strawberry Festival.

The Y. P. S. C. E. connected with the Universalist church held a strawberry festival in Lincoln hall on Wednesday evening. A pleasing entertainment was given. The shadow pantomime "Cinderella" was presented with happy effect by several young people connected with the society. The popular Allen orchestra furnished instrumental music, and fine solos were given by Mrs. Bowditch and Miss Porter. Strawberries and cream and ice cream and cake were served in abundance. The net proceeds were about $20.

The Celebration of the Fourth.

Boys and girls, youths and maidens, men and women; all, young and old are advised to read the big advertisement of the Fourth of July programme in this paper. It will be a red-letter day for the town, and the glorious Independence day will be celebrated as never before in this vicinity. "Whoop her up," boys!

Children's Sunday at the M. E. Church, East Weymouth.

The Sunday-school of the Methodist Society of East Weymouth observed Children's Day last Sunday. In the morning Rev. A. A. Kidder addressed the children from St. Johns 12th chapter 32 verse. The wall of the auditorium and the altar and chancel were elaborately decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. In the evening the scholars of the Sunday-school, under the direction of Assistant Superintendents Myron P. Ford and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond, gave a concert. The choir was composed of the pupils of the Sunday-school, and the creditable manner in which they acquitted themselves showed the careful training which they had received from Mr. W. H. Pratt. The scholars of the infant class, 44 in number, each wore a button-hole bouquet furnished by Mr. Charles H. Bearce. The following programme was rendered:

Confirmation at Trinity Church.

The confirmation service at Trinity church, Weymouth, on Monday evening was very largely attended. All the seats were occupied and some had to stand. The evening service was read by the rector, and the Rt. Rev. Leighton Coleman, D. D., Bishop of Delaware, preached a very powerful sermon on the words found in Ephesians vi, 2, "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." The Bishop spoke of the Christian struggle, illustrating it in various ways. He also described the armor of God, which should be used in the contest, and confirmation he spoke of as a part of that armor, being a Divine and Scriptural institution and together with Baptism and Holy Communion, forming a part of the foundation principles of the Christian faith. After the sermon came the confirmation service, the candidates who were ten in number coming forward to the altar rail, during the singing of the first two verses of the hymn "Lord shall thy children come to thee." The confirmation service was begun by the rector reading the preface to the service and presenting the candidates to the Bishop, who then proceeded with the questions to the candidates, and laying his hands on the head of each one pronounced the prayer of invocation until they were all confirmed. The service was a very impressive one and was watched with interest by the congregation. At the close the Bishop made an appropriate address to the candidates, after which they returned to their seats during the singing of the last two verses of the hymn already mentioned. After the services were over the Bishop came out from the robing room and was introduced to the candidates personally. He was also introduced to many of the congregation.

The chancel, font and organ were beautifully decorated with flowers, among which was a basket of roses sent by Mrs. S. W. Gutterson.

Numerous Burglaries.

This town received a visit from a gang of cracksmen Tuesday morning which makes the people apprehensive that the Holbrook burglars have turned their attention to this place. At Jackson V. R. Bates' on Broad street entrance was effected with the use of keyhole nippers as was also the case at Alden Richards', his neighbor.

At Mrs. Joseph W. Roger's residence at Weymouth Centre an attempt was made to force an entrance through a window, but the burglars were frightened away before accomplishing their object. Entrance was gained to the residence of Joseph L. Batchelder on Commercial street by forcing the sash lock and raising a window. The thieves secured $6 from the pocket of Mr. Batchelder's pants, which were carried from his chamber to the lower rooms. While the robbers were operating a portion of the ceiling fell with a crash, awakening the inmates of the house and scaring the burglars away.

They had forced a pantry window in the residence of Edward L. Noyes on Middle street and had removed the articles from the shelf in front of the window preparatory to entering the house, when the family were aroused by the barking of the dog. In their hasty flight the burglars left a long thin blade of steel, used to force sash locks, and a cloth saturated with chloroform which they had probably intended to use in quieting the dog.

Page, insolvent debtor, will be held at the Court of Insolvency, at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the third Wednesday of September, A. D., 1891, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at which meeting creditors may be present and prove their claims. The assignee will present his account at this meeting, and creditors may appear and object to the allowance thereof.

11 12 GEORGE L. WENTWORTH, Assignee.

HEADQUARTERS REYNOLDS POST, No. 58, DEPARTMENT OF MASS., G. A. R.
EAST WEYMOUTH, June 10, 1891.

General Order No. 6.

The sad duty again devolves upon the commander of announcing the death of another comrade of the post. Henry H. Briggs died June 1, 1891. For many years he has been a great sufferer from disease, but with patience has borne his sufferings, and has endeavored to work, when to others it seemed an impossibility. Comrade Briggs enlisted in the Eighth Regiment Vt. Infantry, Feb. 22, 1865, and served faithfully with his regiment, until discharged July 10, 1865, by reason of close of war. Comrade Briggs became a member of Post 58, Aug. 26, 1872, by transfer from Post 40, and has always evinced a deep interest in its welfare. As comrades we mourn his departure; to his family we extend our sympathy in this their hour of distress, and while a kind husband and loving father has been taken from them, the remembrance of his loyalty to his country during the dark days of the rebellion, will always remain as a precious legacy.

The adjutant will make it his duty to forward a copy of this order to the family of the deceased, and also to furnish a copy for publication to the Weymouth Gazette.

By order of
C. W. L. HAYWARD, Post Commander.
JOHN W. BATES, Adjutant.

A Good Card Puzzle.

Study this out for yourself. The puzzle is to place the aces and court cards in four rows in such a manner that neither horizontally nor perpendicularly shall there be in either row two cards alike either in suit or value. The key to it is to begin by placing four cards of like value—say four kings—in a diagonal line from corner to corner of the intended square, then four other cards of like value—say the four aces—to form the opposite diagonal. It must be borne in mind that of whatever suit the two center kings are the two aces must be of opposite suits. Thus if the two center kings are those of diamonds and hearts the two center aces must be those of clubs and spades, and in adding the two end aces you must be careful not to place at either end of the line an ace of the same suit as the king at the corresponding end of the opposite diagonal.

Grasses for Hay.

Clover, timothy, orchard grass, red top and Hungarian or millet are the sorts most usually grown for hay. For feeding out on the farm with all classes of stock, red clover stands at the head. It can be sown in the spring on wheat or with oats or by itself. It grows rapidly and gives a good yield if the season is at all favorable. In addition to making a good feed, whether pastured or harvested and made into hay, clover is one of the best crops to aid in building up the fertility. Timothy is one of the best grasses for hay for horses, and if hay is grown for market timothy will return the best profit, as it sells at a higher price than any other kind.

Red top makes a good hay; it ripens after clover and timothy and is better adapted to growing on thin land than either of the others. It can be sown in the usual way. Orchard grass on reasonably good land makes a good growth and yield, the only objection being its inclination to grow in stools, but this can be avoided by using plenty of seed and securing a good even stand all over the surface. Hungarian or millet makes a good hay, especially for cattle or sheep, and on good rich soil, well prepared and in a favorable season, will give a large yield of hay. It is an annual and must be sown each year, and is not a profitable grass to grow on thin land. It can be sown the latter part of May or the first of June, and care must be taken to prepare the soil in a good tilth before planting.—Prairie Farmer.

William Knox.

William Knox, the author of "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud," was born in Soxburgh, Scotland, in 1789. His poetical talent soon showed itself, and he adopted a pensive strain of writing. His later works were spiritual hymns. Knox died at Edinburgh in 1825.

TEN PHOTOGRAPHS

Facts Which They Recall to W. I. Harris' Memory.

THE MEN WHO SAT FOR THEM.

Interesting Reminiscences About Well Known Baseball Players—Kelly and the Prizes—A "Has Been" Who Is Now a Farmer—Gil Hatfield's Work.

Ten pictures I pulled from a dusty pigeonhole. The first, W. A. Nimick, of Pittsburg—frozen out of baseball by nerve and assurance—a man with a history now "out of the swim."

The next two, Mike Kelly and Sam Wise, have histories that everybody knows. The two names suggest an interesting story. In 1887 the Boston Globe gave as prizes a handsome solid silver bat to the best batsman and a diamond medal to the best base runner. When Kelly saw the prizes—they cost $1,000—he said, "I want 'em both." "I'll not drink a drop this season until I've won that bat," said Wise, on seeing it.

Eighteen hundred and eighty-seven was the year of ghost hits (base on balls a hit), and it cost us a good deal to get the actual hits. Those prizes divided the team and demoralized it completely. Kelly's extreme confidence lost him the prize. It was nip and tuck during the last games of the season. Wise won with an average of .334 actual base hits. Kelly's was .325. In the last game at Washington Wise was four times at bat and made three hits, while Kelly got only one. There are good grounds for believing that Jim Whitnell, who pitched for Washington, favored his old comrade. Kelly won the base running medal easily. The prizes were awarded at a banquet which the Boston triumvirs refused to attend. That insult to The Globe cost the triumvirs thousands of dollars.

The next picture is Charley Briody, in a Detroit uniform. What has since become of him I do not know. He gave me the picture while traveling from Detroit to Boston. Briody was a great catcher before he began to grow fat. He was one of the first contract jumpers of whom there is any record.

The next photograph is one of Dan Brouthers, in citizens' dress, and a handsome man it makes of him. Dan always was a fine specimen of manly beauty, and this picture is the best he ever had taken to show it off. Brouthers is still lining out base hits with as great frequency as ever. The ability to do so made his fortune and his reputation. Dan is exemplary in his habits, and must have a good fat bank account.

The next picture, Daley, a left hand pitcher with Boston, a young player too easily influenced to be always in shape. He went from Jersey City to New York and was released to Boston for $2,500. He was worth the money, as he afterward did some very good work for them.

And then comes a photograph of McGunnigle, a player who in his line stands high. McGunnigle is a man I have known for many years, and who has never been friendly to me. Still merit has its call on the honest commentation. McGunnigle was for years a great ball player. In 1885 he managed a club in Brockton, which I think won a pennant, and he has always been a winning manager. While with Brooklyn his team won the American association championship and the National league championship. He is now managing a team in the Eastern association.

Shades of the past! Here is a "has been" truly, and a "good old has been" too. Ezra Sutton, still in his prime, one of the greatest third basemen and batsmen who ever walked the diamond, now a farmer. Ezra is not a rich man, because he did not flourish in the days of big salaries. I doubt if he ever got over $2,000 in any one season. Before his eyesight became impaired, and his arm began to fail him, Sutton was one of the stars of the profession, and there were but a few so called in those days. Who is there, having seen him play, will forget how Sutton used to line the ball across from third base, retiring the swiftest runners, or how he used to line out base hits about every other time he came to the bat. A friend who has just come in informs me that Sutton owns a saw mill in connection with his farm.

Next, Mike Madden. One of the first of the successful left hand "phenoms." Won the New England championship for Portland. Signed with Boston for $1,000. Making a fair success his value increased, but his salary was not increased. When it was his turn to pitch Madden was promised twenty-five dollars bonus if he won. After a while he became most effective against the Detroit left handers. One of the directors, who took a great fancy to the boy—for he was only a boy then—used to give $100 extra for winning. The boy's head became swelled and he became spoiled. He did not have the physique or strength necessary to make him a great pitcher. He is still playing ball and doing fairly well, but is, I am told, not in robust health. Not having seen him this year I cannot answer for this. He is with the Boston association team.

And the last, Gil Hatfield, sometimes called the "colt," why I do not know. A ball player after fifteen years' services ceases to be coltish. Gil has always been a great star in minor leagues, and that is how he came to New York. His brilliant work for Portland caused great competition, but Mutrie bagged the prize. He never filled the bill at third base for the Giants—not because he couldn't play good enough ball, but because he never could conquer the extreme nervousness which is a part of his temperament and was brought out by the knowledge that if he failed another was ready and anxious to take his place. Hatfield is playing in Washington this season, where his work seems to be appreciated.

W. I. HARRIS.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Are Athletics Needed by Brain Workers, or Do They Shorten Life?

Apropos of some contemplations over the careers of Cardinal Newman and John Boyle O'Reilly lately indulged in by a contemporary, The Medical Record, says: The former was a frail, slight man, of infirm constitution, but despite this he lived to a very advanced age; the latter was a man of splendid physique, who kept his system in training by physical exercise, athletic sports, and followed all the suggestions of modern physical culture. Yet he died in the prime of life. Shall we not then live quiet, ascetic lives, ignoring the body and cultivating the spirit, or shall we cultivate both body and mind?

The latter course is the one so much commended today, yet it is not a sure passport to longevity, as many cases prove. In fact, the brain worker is better if he lives a regular, temperate life, and pays no attention to the development of his muscles. A little walk, some fresh air and sound sleep are all he needs. Some people, to be sure, can be athletes and do brain work also, but it is not the rule. A sound mind should have a sound body, but it does not need herculean muscles. The best athletic work is done by growing boys and adolescents, who have an extra supply of vitality. When they have matured, and undertaken the responsible work of life, they speedily drop out of the championships. And the lesson we would draw from the opposite cases brought up by Life is that athletics are not needed by brain workers, and will, if carried to excess, shorten life rather than lengthen it.

Of Interest to Chilly People.

With the mercury in the sitting room at 58 degs. Fahr. one ought to be comfortably warm, according to a recent authority on hygienic topics. But, to quote the same writer, there are women who suffer from chilliness most of the time from fall to spring, and who therefore live as much as they can in rooms heated to 80 and 90 degs. They object to much underclothing, and make slight change in summer and winter body wear. Of course they are always having colds and illnesses of various kinds, which plenty of flannels would entirely prevent. Some assert that flannels irritate the skin and cannot be endured next to it. If not, a silk or cotton garment may be worn next to the skin, and flannel over that. Vigorous friction of the entire surface of the body before going to sleep and upon rising from sleep is an excellent thing to keep one warm.

Starchy food, sugar and fats, all articles containing carbon in abundance, are good foods for cold weather. Pastries, cake and crullers are in season now, if ever they ought to be in season. Candy in cold weather is grateful to the palate and far less injurious, if injurious, than in warm weather. Instead of burning carbon in the stove, put it into the stomach; put on clothing till chilliness ceases, exercise till the body is all in a glow, keep the air of the rooms fresh and pure, and the liabilities to sickness that makes winter a season to be dreaded will be largely reduced.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

CORRECT STYLES IN DRESS ILLUSTRATED AND DESCRIBED.

Fashions in Ball Gowns—Distinctions Between Dinner and Dancing Dresses as Broad as Ever—Fancy Dresses Especially Designed for Flower Quadrilles.

While their materials have in a measure given place to richer fabrics for ball gowns, the distinction between dinner and dancing dresses is as broad as ever. Low gowns are much worn, and there is a tendency to the old court bodice. There are some pretty arrangements of flower trimmings for ball dresses. Small wreaths are made to encircle the arms and bodice and ruches of leaves of various tints are made for the hems of dresses.

FANCY DRESSES FOR A FLOWER QUADRILLE.

Flowers may be arranged on skirts with such grace that they appear to grow there, as on a wall in the sunny south. An example seen was a light blush pink satin; it had large and beautiful trails of roses climbing up the skirt, as though the sunshine were making them grow. All dresses thus elaborately adorned in front are made with plain trained backs. The idea lends itself to fancy dresses, and a pretty rendering of a flower girl costume was a short light satin skirt covered all over with chrysanthemums of various tints. In the cut are shown two fancy dresses designed for a flower quadrille. The one representing a daffodil has a yellow accordion pleated silk skirt, with flower petals forming an overskirt and a green plush bodice with yellow leaves, the sleeves corresponding. The other, representing a garden lily, has a green satin bodice and underskirt, the latter being overlaid with green satin leaves and white satin petals. White satin stamens appear on the bodice. The headdress is a lily.

For Short Figures.

Seamless bodices are not becoming to women with full figures. When there is a tendency to shortness all the seams of darts and side forms should be retained, as these break the apparent size, and an extra side form is sometimes put in to keep these seams at even distances. Modistes use two under arm forms for bodices which measure more than twenty-six inches at the belt line, making these forms of the same width as the rounded side forms of the back, while the middle back forms are still narrower. This gives nine lengthwise seams, and with two darts each side of the front there are thirteen seams in the bodice. Nor should stout women wear coats that are deep on the side, as they outline the hips too plainly.

Their best choice is a plain bodice rather short on the hips, meeting a skirt draped in long folds in front, more nearly pointed than curved, to give the effect of length and take away from the apparent breadth. Double breasted bodices with slight postilion back are liked for wool gowns of large women. A good plan to break the broad effect in skirts is to put far back on each side next the back breadth a narrow straight panel or rever of velvet or cloth of the fabric used as trimming on the bodice. Trimming around the skirt should be avoided.—Harper's Bazar.

Hair Dressing.

Fashionable hair dressing is not confined to any one style. The coiffure may be elaborate, or it may be simple; it may be modern, or it may be classical, and it may be high or low, as best suits the requirements of the wearer. There is what the French call coiffure elonge, designed especially to impart an appearance of height to short figures. In this coiffure the ornaments worn are of a pointed nature, and are placed at the back of the head.

EVENING HAIR DRESSING.

In the cut is shown a pleasing style of hair dressing for evening wear. It is a medium style, between the extremes of very high and very low coiffures. This coiffure is formed by elevating the back hair, curling the ends and working them into puffs. The front hair is curled, or, when that is not practicable, artificial hair in the form of a "fairy fringe" is added.

The Fad for Heart Shaped Articles.

If you want to be in quite the fashion, wear or possess something that is heart shaped. There are heart shaped cushions, heart shaped tables, heart shaped bonnets, heart shaped photo frames, and the newest ornaments for writing and dressing tables are heart shaped. One comes across heart shaped things everywhere; they are the society belle's latest fad. The fashionable engagement ring is ornamented with a pair of hearts. They are moonstones surrounded with diamonds. The newest purse is a heart, and the newest watch charm too.

Little Lizette.

As little Lizette was out walking one day,
Attired with great splendor in festal array,
She met little Gretchen, in sober hued gown,
With a basket of eggs, trudging off to the town.
"Good morning! Good morning!" cried little Lizette,
"You haven't been over to visit me yet.
Come over and live with me always; pray do.
For I have no sisters; how many have you?"

"NEIN," ANSWERED WEE GRETCHEN.

"Nein," answered wee Gretchen. Lizette cried "Ah, me!
I have to pretend I have sisters, you see.
But try as I will I can't make it seem true.
And I have no brothers. How many have you?"
"Nein," answered wee Gretchen. "Nine!" answered Lizette.
"Why, you are the luckiest girl I have met;
And have you a baby at home, tell me now?"
"Nein," answered wee Gretchen, and made a droll bow.
Then lingered Lizette by the roadside that day
To watch the wee maiden go trudging away.
"Nine brothers, nine sisters, nine babies to pet!
Oh, I wish I was Gretchen!" sighed little Lizette.

THE FACTS IN TWO CASES

THE MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE AND THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Marion Harland Thinks They Are Too Ambitious, and Writes Strong Words Condemning Their Desire and That of Their Husbands to Be "Smart."

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

They were as far apart in education and social station as if they had belonged to different races and had lived in different hemispheres.

They were as near akin in circumstances and in suffering as if they had been twin sisters, and brought up under the same roof.

The husband of one wrote "Honorable" before his name and reckoned his dollars by the million. He was, moreover, a man of imposing deportment, bland in manner and ornate in language. As riches increased he set his heart upon them and upon the good things that riches buy. He had four children, and he erected ("built" was too small a word) a palatial house in a fashionable street.

Each child had a suite of three rooms. Each apartment was elaborately decorated and furnished. The drawing rooms were crowded with bric-a-brac and monuments of upholsterly ingenuity. It was a work of art and peril to dust them every day. He developed a taste for entertaining as time went on and honors thickened upon him, and he mistook, like most of his guild, ostentation for hospitality. Every dish at the banquets for which he became famous was a show piece. He swelled with honest pride in the perusal of a popular personal paragraph estimating the value of his silver and cut glass at $50,000.

The superintendent, part owner, and the slave of all this magnificence was his wife. She was her own housekeeper, and employed besides the coachman, whose business was in the stables and upon his box, three servants. There were twenty-five rooms in the palatial house, giving to each woman servant eight to be kept in the spick-and-span array demanded by the master's position and taste. As a matter of course something was neglected in every department, the instinct of self preservation being innate and cultivated in Abigail, Phyllis and Bridget. Even more as a matter of course the nominal mistress supplemented the deficiencies of her aids.

The house was as present and forceful a consciousness with her as his Dulcinea with David Copperfield at the period when "the sun shone Dora, and the birds sang Dora, and the south wind blew Dora, and the wild flowers in the hedges were all Doras to a bud." No snail ever carried her abode upon her back more constantly than our poor rich woman the satin lined, hot aired and plate windowed stone pile with her. The lines that criss-crossed her forehead, and channeled her cheeks, and ran downward from the corners of her mouth were hieroglyphics standing in the eyes of the initiated for the baleful legend

HOUSE AND HOUSEKEEPING.

When she drove abroad in her luxurious chariot, behind high stepping bays, jingling with plated harness, or repaired in the season to seashore or mountain, she was striving feebly to push away the tons of splendid responsibility from her brain.

One day she gave over the futile attempt. Something crashed down upon and all around her, and everything except inconceivable misery of soul was a blank.

Expensive doctors diagnosed her case as nervous prostration. When she vanished from the eyes of her public, and a high salaried housekeeper, a butler, a nursery governess and an extra Abigail took her place and did half her work, in the satin lined shell out of which she had crept, maimed and well nigh murdered, it was announced that she was "under the care of a specialist at a retreat."

A retreat! Heaven save and pardon us for making such homes part and parcel and a necessity of our century and our land!

Our honorable's consort never left it until she was borne forth into the securer refuge of the narrow house that needed none of her caretaking. Upon the low green thatch lies heavily the shadow of a mighty monument that, to the satirist's eye, has a family likeness to the stone pile which killed her.

The second "case" is that of a farmer's wife, born and bred among the hills beyond the shelter of which she had traveled but once, and that on her wedding journey. She came back from the brief outing to take possession of her own house—prideful phrase to every young matron.

It was an eight roomed farmstead, with no modern conveniences. That meant that all the water used in kitchen and dwelling had to be fetched from a well twenty feet away; that there was no drain or sink or furnace; that stationary tubs had not been heard of, and the washing was wrung by hand. The stalwart farmer "calculated to live" in haying, harvesting, planting, plowing, thrashing and killing times. Whatever might have been the wife's calculations, she toiled unaided, cooking, washing, ironing, scrubbing, sewing, churning, butter making and "bringing up a family," single handed, with never a creature to lift an ounce or do a stroke for her while she could stand upon her feet.

When she was laid upon her back—an unusual occurrence except when there was a fresh baby—a neighbor looked in twice a day to lend a hand, or Mrs. Gamp was engaged for a fortnight. It was not an unusual occurrence for the nominally convalescent mother to get dinner for six "men folks" with a 3-weeks-old baby upon her left arm.

Her husband was energetic and "forehanded," and without the slightest approach to intentional cruelty looked to his wife to "keep up her end of the log." He tolerated no wastefulness, and expected to be well fed and comfortable; and comfort with his Yankee mother's son implied tidiness. To meet his views, as well as to satisfy her own conscience, his partner became a model manager, a woman of "faculty."

I saw her last year in the incurable ward of a madhouse. From sunrise until dark, except when forced to take her meals, she stood at one window and polished one pane with her apron, a plait like a trench between her puckered brows, her mouth pursed into an anguished knot, her hollow eyes drearily anxious—the saddest picture I ever beheld, most awfully sad because she was the type of a class.

Some men—and they are not all ignorant men—are beginning to be alarmed at the press of women into other—I had almost said any other—avenues of labor than that of housewifery. Eagerness to break up housekeeping and try boarding for a while, in order to get rested out, is not confined to the incompetent and the indolent. Nor is it altogether the result of the national discontent with "the greatest plague of life"—servants.

American women from high to low keep house too hard because too ambitiously.

It is, furthermore, ambition without knowledge; hence misdirected. We have the most indifferent domestic service in the world, but we employ as a rule too few servants, such as they are. It is considered altogether sensible and becoming for the mechanic's wife to do her own housework as bride and as a matron of years. Unless her husband prospers rapidly she is accounted "shiftless" should she hire a washerwoman, while to "keep a girl" is extravagance, or a significant stride toward gentility. The wife of the English joiner or mason or small farmer, if brisk, notable and healthy, may dispense with the stated service of a maid of all work, but she calls in a charwoman on certain days, and is content to live as becomes the station of a housewife who must be her own domestic staff.

Here is the root of the difference. In a climate that keeps the pulses in full leap and the nerves tense we call upon pride to lash on the quivering body and spirit to run the unrighteous race, the goal of which is to seem richer than we are, and make "smartness" (American smartness) cover the want of capital. Having created false standards of respectability we crowd insane asylums and cemeteries in trying to live up to them.

The tradesman who begins to acknowledge the probability that he will become a rich citizen, and whose wife has feelings on the subject of living as her neighbors do, takes the conventional step toward asserting himself and gratifying her aspirations by moving into a bigger house than that which has satisfied him up to now, and furnishing it well—that is, smartly, according to the English acceptance of the word.

Silks and moquette harmonize as well as calico and ingrain once did. A three-story-and-a-half-with-a-high-stoop house without a piano in the back parlor, and a long mirror between the front parlor windows, would be a forlorn contradiction of the genius of American progress. As flat a denial would be the endeavor to live without what an old lady once described to me as a "pair of parlors." The stereotyped brace are senseless and ugly, but one of the necessaries of life to our ambitious housewife. She would scout as vulgar the homely cheerfulness of the middle class Englishman's single "parlor," where the table is spread and the family receives visitors.

Having saddled himself with a house too big for his family, and stocked the show rooms with plushings so fine that the family are afraid to use them unless when there is company, the prudent citizen satisfies the economic side of him by making menials of wife and daughters, without thought of the opposing circumstance that he has practically indorsed their intention to make fine ladies of themselves. Neither he nor the chief slave of her own gentility, the wife, who will maintain her reputation for "faculty" or perish in the attempt, has a suspicion that the strain to make meet the ends of frugality and pretension is palpably and criminally absurd. By keeping up a certain appearance of affluence and fashion they assume the obligation to employ servants enough to carry out the design, yet in nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of every thousand they ignore the duty.

I admit without demur that as American domestics go they are a burden, an expense and a vexation. Notwithstanding all these drawbacks, she who will not risk them should not live in such a way that she must make use of such instruments or overwork herself physically and mentally.

The entire social and domestic system of American communities calls loudly for the reform of simplicity and congruity. We begin to build and are not able to finish. Our economics are false and mischievous, our aims are petty and meretricious. The web of our daily living is not round and even threaded. The homes which are constructed upon the foundations of deranged, dying and dead women are a mockery of the holy name. Our houses should be planned and kept for those who are to live in them, not for those who tarry within the doors for a night or an hour. When housekeeping becomes an intolerable care there is sin somewhere and danger everywhere.

MARION HARLAND.

Southern Women in New York.

Southern women and girls seem to be taking the literary, journalistic and business world of New York by storm. An energetic young lady, Virginia H. McRae, originally from Wilmington, N. C., has established The Phonogram in New York. It is a handsome monthly magazine, and is to be the official organ of the phonographic companies in the Union. Every other business interest has its own trade journal, and there is no reason why Miss McRae's magazine should not be highly successful. It is indorsed by Edison, who contributes to the first number. It was a plucky thing for a young woman to do all out of her own brave spirit—this starting a magazine in the big city of New York—and all women everywhere will hope she will make it a shining success. She herself is its business manager.

Civilization and Short Sightedness.

At a recent meeting of the Paris Academy of Medicine it was maintained by M. Motais, of Augers, that myopia, or short sightedness, is one of the products of civilization. An unexpected proof of this view was found in the condition of the eyes of wild beasts, such as tigers, lions, etc. M. Motais, having examined their eyes by means of the ophthalmoscope, discovered that animals captured after the age of 6 or 8 months are and remain hypermetropic, while those that are captured earlier or, better still, are born in captivity, are myopic. This short sightedness is evidently induced by artificial conditions of life.

Talisman and Amulet.

The terms talisman and amulet are often considered nearly synonymous, but the proper distinctive peculiarity of the former is its astrological character. A species of talisman which has acquired considerable celebrity is the Abraxas stone. A species of talisman at present in use in Russia is a piece of paper on which the names of the seven sleepers and their dog are inscribed. Pasted on the walls of the houses it is believed to be a protection against ghosts and demons.

His Warmest Welcome at an Inn.

It was Shenstone who wrote:

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
His warmest welcome at an inn.

Entitled to the Best.

All are entitled to the best that their money will buy, so every family should have, at once, a bottle of the best family remedy, Syrup of Figs, to cleanse the system when costive or bilious. For sale in 50c. and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

A Husband's Mistake.

Husbands too often permit wives, and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such serious results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere say it gives universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Woodworth & Co., of Fort Wayne Ind.; Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. C. Wolf, Hillsdale, Mich.; and hundreds of others say "It is the greatest seller they ever knew." It contains no opiates. Trial bottles and fine book on Nervous Diseases, free at A. M. Bachelder & Co.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the government lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones."—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at the drugstores of A. M. Bachelder & Co., Weymouth, and E. G. Cutter, East Weymouth.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.
